"I REFUSE" OF CHINA IS HANDED TO JAPAN.

Appeal to the Powers is to be Made if Tokio Makes Another Grab.

Main Demands of the Mikado's Government are Rejected Point Blank by the Peking Diplomats — Neither Side has Asked for Further Conferences — Tsing-tao Lost to Yuan Shih Kai.

[BY PACIFIC CABLE.]

PEKING, May 2, 2:30 a.m.—China has replied to the Japanese demands in a note which, while complying with some of the demands, definitely refuses to accede to others, including the most important, embodied in what is known as group five.

China also has furnished to the Japanese Minister, Eki Hioki, a list of further concessions which she is willing to grant, but after perusing the note and the list M. Hioki declared that it was far from complying with the twenty-four demands as presented by his government.

This action was taken after President Yuan Shi Kai had thoroughly discussed the entire situation with the members of his Cabinet and his advisers since last Monday. The Chinese plenipotentiaries met the Japanese plenipotentiaries by arrangement on Saturday at the Foreign Office and presented China's reply which, in substance, refused the so-called general demands of Japan.

M. Hioki asked whether these were China's maximum concessions and then whether he should cable his government.

Lu Cheng Hsiang, the Chinese Foreign Minister, replied that these were China's maximum concessions and that the Japanese Minister could so inform his government.

The conference terminated with neither the Japanese nor Chinese asking for another meeting. Should the Japanese government now present an ultimatum or occupy further territory in China, it is intimated that the Chinese probably would appeal to the four powers which are pledged "to China's independence.

On perceiving that the Chinese reply failed to agree to the demands of his government, the Japanese Minister declared the withdrawal of Japan's proposal to return to China Tsing-tao, which was conditioned on China's deferring no longer the acceptance of Japan's demands.

The Chinese note briefly recites the history of the negotiations. It denies Japan's charge that China has displayed procrastination and delayed the conferences by disputing various points, and also the charges of Chinese insincerity and unfriendliness. It further denies that China is conducting a newspaper campaign abroad. These were the reasons the Japanese plenipotentiaries gave for presenting their latest list of twenty-four demands as a preliminary to an ultimatum.

The list of concessions is in the nature of counter-proposals. China asks the right to participate in an international conference in which the altered status of Shantung will be rearranged; indemnity for the losses incurred in consequence of the Tsing-tao campaign, and also restoration of its status as before the war. These three requests are repeated from China's original counter-approsals.

China offers further concessions with respect to Manchuria, almost meeting the Japanese demands. China accedes to three of the four demands regarding Mongolia, namely, the opening of treaty ports, preference in railway loans and the nonpledging of local taxes. The agricultural demand is rejected.

Respecting the Hanyehping company China agrees that, pending the COMMENT ON THE SITUATION. The first melancholy note in any of the London dispatches since the war began is contained in last night's review, in which the statement is made that the fear is entertained all is not so well as it might be with the allies' battle line in the western theater of war. The real import of this remains to be developed. The news about the Dardanelles is conflicting. Both Germans and Russians are boasting advances in the eastern theater of war.

The decisive battle in Mexico, like that in Europe, is still pending, or is still an event of the future. Meanwhile Villa will displace all his consuls in the United States on the ground that they are Maderistas.

Gratuitous Flings at the Ottoman Empire Bring Retorts that Make Commissioner Lamar and the Executive of San Francisco Wish They had Thought in Advance.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SAN FRANCISCO BUREAU OF THE TIMES, May 1.—There is much discussion here today as the result of a verbal fencing bout between Vahan Cardashian, Imperial Ottoman Adjutant High Commissioner to the Panama-Pacific Exposition, and William Bailey Lamar of the National Commission, and Mayor James Rolph, Jr., of this city. It is a question whether the censure of the Lamar-Rolph taste in the premises or the appreciation of the verbal skillfulness of the Ottoman commissioner is uppermost in the discussion.

There is expressed the opinion that Messrs. Lamar and Rolph felt at the start that they were to have a bit of sport with a man who would not seize the drift of their remarks; evidently they were ignorant of the fact that the Ottoman commissioner is a Harvard graduate, among his other qualifications.

William Bailey Lamar of the National Commission, speaking as the representative of the United States government, was the first to draw the fire of the Turkish commissioner. In the course of his welcome to a friendly nation, Lamar alluded to the "terrible Turk," the "unspeakable Turk" and the "sick man of Europe."

Cardashian arose, and, mentioning the terms used by Lamar, replied:

"The major portion of the troubles of Turkey and her backward place as a nation are due to the efforts of the Christian powers of Europe to divide up for themselves the sick man, who refuses to be divided. I have been one of the keenest critics of the faults and abnormalities of the Turkish government, but I have been just as keenly disappointed in the humanity and the morality of the Christian nations as I have been in the want of intelligence of the ruling powers of Turkey."

Mayor Rolph, after some wheezes on Thanksgiving Turkeys, "talking Turkey," joked about marriage customs in the Ottoman Empire. He received from Cardashian the facer of them all.

"The Mayor made a very good speech," rejoined the Turkish representative. "I had thought of asking for a copy to send to Constantinople, but on second thought it might result in his being made Mayor of Constantinople. And then Mrs. Rolph would suffer."

The sally was greeted by a roar of laughter and applause that continued until Rolph, very red, arose and shook hands with Cardashian.

MAN WOUNDED IN KANSAS CITY DIES BUT WOMAN WILL RECOVER.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

KANSAS CITY (Mo.) May 1.—Louis Schweiger, shot by his former wife while standing in the corridor of the county Courthouse here this morning, died late today. Mrs. Clara Schweiger, his assailant, will recover from two self-inflicted bullet wounds, physicians said tonight. After firing five shots into the body of her former husband, Mrs. Schweiger turned the weapon on herself.

The shooting followed a ruling in court concerning a petition for annulment of divorce, brought by Mrs. Schweiger. The ruling was adverse to her. Schweiger obtained the divorce last November.

Steamers Returning to Port Tell of Narrow Escapes from the Waves.

All Members of Victoria Crew Saved After Vessel had Foundered.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, May 1.—The Pacific Coast storm which sent the steamer Victoria to the bottom, disabled the liner Northern Pacific, damaged the Coast passenger steamer Harvard and kept scores of vessels, big and little, out at sea, has subsided.

Two big steamers, the Pennsylvania and the J. L. Luckenbach, and a stream of small craft have come into port. They said the danger point had passed.

The Northern Pacific, with 150 passengers aboard, has ended her helpless drifting before the storm off Point Arena, 100 miles north of here. She sent word late today that the steam steering engine, which was disabled, had been repaired and would be in use tonight. She is expected to come into port under her own power tonight or early tomorrow.

The United States coast guard cutter McCulloch, tugs Defiance and Iaqua, and tanker Col. E. L. Drake went to her assistance during the day. Capt. A. Ahman of the Northern Pacific reported there was no danger.

A stiff gale was blowing tonight but the safety with which small vessels have made the harbor was said by shipping men to indicate the passing of danger.

The Norwegian ship Aggi is supposed to be in trouble. The Aggi left here Thursday in tow of the steamer Edgar H. Vance. Yesterday the hawser broke and the Aggi has been adrift. No word has come from her.

The Edgar H. Vance reported late today that she was 110 miles west of Point Arena, returning to port. She notified all shipping to keep a watch for the Aggi.

The American-Hawaiian freighter Iowan from New York reported that she would be in the harbor tonight.

The $50,000,000 scare which fell upon the Pacific Slope last night because of a threatened severe damage to fruit by frost has turned to rejoicing. A drizzling rain swept most of California and Oregon, keeping the temperature up and tremendously improving all crop prospects, already above the average.

In Southern California the apple crop suffered considerably, apples generally being planted on higher elevations than other fruits. No other misfortune was reported.

The Pennsylvania, a Pacific Mail liner from Balboa, was the first of the large steamers to reach this port after three days of battling with heavy seas.

The vessel, carrying thirty-one passengers, arrived with her boats gone from their davits, her compass lost overboard, her cargo booms awry and with a bad list to starboard. Large sections of the ship's rail had been carried away by huge seas which raked her fore and aft.

According to the passengers, they were locked in their staterooms for the greater part of forty-eight hours while the Pennsylvania was riding out the brunt of the storm in Monterey Bay.

Capt. C. F. Austin and Third Officer Beck narrowly escaped being swept overboard when two of the forward cargo booms were torn from their fastenings and swept across the bridge. The officers were knocked down and severely bruised.

It was reported tonight that at one period of the storm the crew, said to consist of Mexicans, sought their quarters in terror.

RUSH TO REPAIR HARVARD DAMAGE.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

LOS ANGELES HARBOR, May 1.—Work is being rushed today to repair the steamer Harvard, which shipped a giant comber off Point Vicente last night and was compelled to return to port, so that she can resume her schedule on her next sailing date, Tuesday afternoon. The damage to the Harvard will amount to nearly $5000, according to the estimate of Capt. Harry W. Goodall, president of the Pacific Navigation Company, who is here superintending the work. Most of the damage is to carpets, bedding, furniture and decorations from the flood of water that poured into the hole, that was stove in on the port side of the gallery saloon. Two ventilators on the forecastle head were crushed and a part of the companionway leading to the forecastle carried away.

Capt. H. P. Hansen, master of the steamer Siskiyou, which arrived today from Portland, reported that the storm was the worst he had ever experienced in a maritime experience on this coast of years standing. The gale struck the Siskiyou Thursday night and the experience from that time until the steamer reached port was one that members of the crew will have reason not to forget soon. The deckload all but went overboard and when the steamer reached port it had shifted four feet and given the vessel a bad list. For a time the vessel was on her beam ends and it

MAKE HUSBAND INSURE, WOMAN ASKS OF COURT.

NEW YORK BUREAU OF THE TIMES, May 1.—Not content with $20,000 a year alimony, Mrs. Isabelle Brulatour, wife of Jules Brulatour, a film importer of No. 490 Riverside drive, began proceedings in the Supreme Court to compel her spouse to insure his life for $65,000 in her favor. She alleged that when she and Mr. Brulatour agreed to separate a year ago he promised to pay her alimony and to insure his life for the above sum. When he died this was to be paid to his erstwhile wife and children.

The husband, however, neglected to fulfill the latter part of his bargain, whereupon Mrs. Brulatour told her sad complaint to Justice Geigerich who reserved decision. Mrs. Brulatour is now wondering what will happen if her late husband dies before His Honor makes up his mind. Mr. Brulatour has been dividing his time between New York and Paris. He has luxurious establishments in New York and Paris.

"Avoid Enemy Ships."

AMERICAN TRAVELERS WARNED BY GERMANY.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, May 1.—In an official notice published by the German Embassy in many important cities of the United States this morning Americans were given renewed warning that the travel on ships flying the flags of Germany's enemies was at their own risk.

Count von Bernstorff, the German Ambassador, was away today, but officials at the Embassy said so far as they knew the published notice was intended merely to remind neutral travelers of their danger and did not indicate new naval operations.

The State Department has not decided to take any action, so far as could be learned here tonight, in regard to the advertisement.

The attitude of the State Department is understood to be such that it may take no notice of the advertisement unless formal complaint is made.

The basis for any such complaint remains to be defined as some officials admit there is, so far as they know, no precedent to follow.

The usual course pursued by a diplomatic representative of a foreign government in Washington who wishes to communicate with the American government, it was pointed out, is to address a suitable request to the State Department. It is admitted, however, that since the beginning of the present war, virtually all the belligerent nations have made free use of the American newspaper advertising columns without reference to the department, in urging their nationals to return to their home countries for military service.

VILLA RELEASES BRITISH STEAMER.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, May 1.—The British steamer Cetriano, detained by Villa authorities at Ensenada, Lower California, was released today and will sail for San Francisco when the weather moderates, according to a message received by the ship's agents. The Cetriano was released when the State Department filed a protest with the Mexican authorities. It was reported that the ship's captain, purser and wireless operator were taken from the vessel by force when she was held and a large fine assessed against her. It was alleged the vessel's papers were defective.

NEW YORK BUREAU OF THE TIMES, May 1.—Carrying 340 cabin and ninety-four intermediate passengers, the steamship Finland of the Panama-Pacific line, and formerly in the trans-Atlantic service of the Red Star line, steamed today for San Diego and San Francisco, inaugurating the first regular passenger service between the two coasts by way of the Panama Canal.

The Finland, with the American flag floating from her stern, was given an enthusiastic send-off as she backed out into the stream from her pier. All of her accommodations, practically, had been taken up, and more than a thousand persons were on hand to witness the beginning of the new service.

Seventeen days will be required to make the outward voyage, the first stop being made at Balboa. The vessel carried, besides the large number of passengers, more than 9000 tons of cargo. Her forward holds were filled with flour, shipped by rail from Minneapolis to New York, and destined for San Francisco. It is said to be cheaper to ship it in this manner than by the all-rail route from Minneapolis to San Francisco.

Bombardment of Dunkirk Brings War Closer Home for England.

Athens Dispatches Indicate Attack on Dardanelles is Being Renewed.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

SCILLY ISLAND (England) May 1, 11:25 p.m.—The crew of 24 of the British steamer Edale, which was sunk off these islands by a submarine today while on a voyage from the River Plate, South America, to Manchester with a cargo of grain, have been landed here by a British patrol boat. They say that the Edale was torpedoed without notice and that they did not see the submarine until after they were in their lifeboats.

A patrol boat is reported to have been struck and severely damaged by a shell fired by the submarine.

LONDON, May 1 (10:45 p.m.)—German submarines, which for a couple of weeks had been confining themselves to the North Sea, where they sank a number of trawlers, again have made their appearance on the trade routes off the west coasts of Ireland and England and caught two victims. They were the British steamer Edale, which was sunk off the Scilly Islands, and the Russian steamer Svorono, which was attacked off the Blasket Islands. In both cases the crews were saved.

This, taken in connection with the warning issued to American travelers on trans-Atlantic liners, doubtless means another attempt with a greater number of submarines to combat the blockade by England. It is only just announced by the English papers that the Admiralty has found a means of dealing with submarines, and the people in view of the latest attacks on steamers are awaiting the result with considerable interest. In face of these submarine attacks, Zeppelin raids and the bombardment of Dunkirk, which bring the war closer home, England remains as calm as ever. There are some, of course, who feel anxiety over the western battle line, but generally the feeling is one of optimism, based on the success with which the allies have withstood former attempts of the Germans to get through to the coast ports.

The bombardment of Dunkirk, which was repeated yesterday and which has resulted in considerable loss of life, has caused many women and children to leave the town. The Germans can repeat this bombardment whenever they desire, with the big guns which formerly were posted on the coast to ward off attacks from the allied fleet and which have been moved up in the direction of Nieuport. Still there is confidence that the navy and airmen will find a means of dealing with the guns.

On the rest of the western front things are comparatively quiet, although the French appear to be still on the offensive between the Meuse and the Moselle rivers, the Germans claiming to have repulsed attacks there. Consequently with the situation in the Dardanelles established, interest has turned again to the eastern front and particularly to the Russian Baltic provinces, which are being raided by the Germans.

The extent of this new raid has not been disclosed. Although the Germans announce that the Russians evacuated and burned Szawle and retired toward Mitua, there is evidence of any big battle being fought and the Russians express confidence in their ability to deal with this new diversion.

Along the East Prussian frontier and in Central Poland there has been a renewal of the fighting, which the spring floods interrupted, while in the Carpathians, where the ground is drying, the Russians and Austrians again are contending for Uszok pass. For the moment the Russians have turned from their offensive against that pass to attack the Austrians who were threatening their communications in the direction of Stry and have, according to their report, won considerable success, capturing two heights and a number of prisoners. They also claim to have repulsed an attack by the Germans who hold a line near Wyszkow, further to the eastward.

It is expected that a big offensive soon will be undertaken on the eastern front, probably by the Germans who have been feeling their way toward the Russian positions around the East Prussia frontier, although this may be a feint to hide a movement on some other part of the line.

There is evidence in dispatches from Athens that the allied fleet has recommenced the bombardment of the Dardanelles, but there is no official confirmation available. The French Minister of Marine, however, in an interview, expressed the opinion that decisive and definite results would come quickly.

Restrict Immigration Before Rush Starts After War, An Expert Advises.

Timely.

INDUSTRIAL REVIVAL DUE; BAR SURPLUS ALIENS.

Let the Country be Ready to Employ Its Capital, Says Dr. Warne.

Noted Authority Declares the Time is Now Here to Prepare to Avoid the Inevitable Flood from Europe. John Hays Hammond Suggests Modification of Monroe Doctrine.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

PHILADELPHIA, May 1.—Let the government ascertain what immigration America will need to work the country's mills and shops and mines when the great industrial revival starts at the close of the European war; and, having ascertained the country's needs, restrict immigration to fit them—such was the plan outlined yesterday before the American Academy of Political and Social Science by Dr. Frank Warne, expert on foreign-born population for the last United States census, author and authority on immigration.

Dr. Warne's plan provides for the creation, by Federal legislation, of the governmental machinery necessary to make a measurement of American immigration needs for the revival of industrialism, which, he said, "is just around the corner." The body—board or commission or otherwise—thus created by the Federal government should co-operate with now existing State and private employment bureaus. And the needed immigrants should be employed at standard American wages.

"The demand being thus ascertained," Dr. Warne said, "the supply can be regulated to this measurement through already existing administrative machinery. In this way, the present haphazard system which invariably operates to produce an oversupply of this labor in all our industrial centers can be co-ordinated and made to work for our common good instead of, as now, to our social injury.

"Already we have the nucleus around which this machinery can be built. This is the division of information of the Bureau of Immigration of the Department of Labor. In addition to its reorganization along the lines indicated, it should be given supervision over all private employment agencies and so-called labor exchanges engaged in interstate commerce."

DR. WARNE'S TEXT.

Dr. Warne's text was "The War and Immigration." He reviewed the great influx of labor to America that has followed the wars of Europe within the century, spoke of the days of readjustment — economic maladjustment, he called it—to come at the close of the present struggle and predicted a tidal wave of emigration westward from Europe such as the world had never seen before.

"They (the immigrants) will be confronted by one of the most remarkable industrial revivals this country has ever experienced," he continued. "All we have to do to be convinced of this is to remember that this is not the millennium; that the United States has hardly begun the development of its material resources; that they are here in such abundance as to give us wealth beyond human comprehension; that there is a tomorrow when the enormous amount of capital now being destroyed will be replaced; that this country even under the stress of European war conditions is accumulating a surplus of capital unprecedented in its history and that this capital, when released from the fetters of fear, will start industry and business on an era of development and expansion which will more than make up for the present period of retardation.

"When this time comes—and it is just around the corner—accompanied by adverse conditions among the workers in European countries, the possibilities and opportunities the United States will have to offer to the unskilled worker will be much better than those that are to prevail in any of the countries from which we have been drawing the largest part of our immigration.

"The effect, then, of the present war will be to increase immigration to our shores. There is one probable event that can stop the threatening inundation. This is restrictive legislation by Congress approved by the President.

"Is not the present the most opportune time for such action? Should we not take advantage of today's temporary cessation in immigration to erect proper means of defense against the probable inundation of tomorrow? Should we not subordinate sympathy for the immigrant to the higher humanitarianism which holds that America's highest duty is to make the Great Experiment of an educated democracy the most triumphant success that can possibly be attained?

"By all means, this great movement of people should be restricted by legislation within the narrow channel of the legitimate demand of our industries for unskilled labor at a fair wage. It should not any longer be permitted to rush in helter-skelter to flood our American industries with its cheap labor and our industrial centers with its low standard of living."

HAMMOND'S REVIEW.

John Hays Hammond reviewed the financial distress in South America resulting from the European war, suggested that a Pan-American Supreme Court be established to decide disputes relating to foreign investments and Pan-American commercial transactions, and referred, at the close of his speech, to the Monroe doctrine, as follows:

"Genuine, not merely professed amity, is a great asset in commercial relations, and since the larger South American nations regard the Monroe doctrine as supererogation on our part, it would seem good business, to say the least, to restrict the applications of the doctrine to such territory as is necessary for the defense of the Panama Canal and of our sphere of influence in the Caribbean Sea area. As to the rest of South America, the Monroe doctrine might well be superseded by a Pan-American defensive alliance against attempts at territorial aggrandizement from abroad."

After reviewing the financial troubles occasioned in South America by the European war, due chiefly to the fact that Europe had been South America's banker, and asserting that it would probably be many years before Europe would again assume its former role in this respect, Mr. Hammond said, in part:

"In order to induce our capitalists to supply working capital to Latin-American countries they must be assured of the encouragement and co-operation of our national administration and of the guarantee of the protection of their investments against discriminatory laws and confiscation, especially in time of revolutionary movements. Our citizens must be assured at least of the same degree of protection that is guaranteed by other governments to their nationals. . . .

"To attain the confidence of investors in Pan-American investments, I believe a Pan-American Supreme Court should be created to deal specifically with disputes as to foreign investments and as to commercial transactions between Pan-American citizens. Such a court should be composed of the leading jurists of our own and of Latin-American nations and should sit in neutral territory. If inspired by self-interest only, it would obviously be the aim of such a tribunal to establish confidence in Latin-American customers of fair treatment in their business transactions with the exporters of the United States. This is quite as important as the establishment of confidence of our capital in Latin-American investments.

"Such a court might well be one of final resort. In any event, it should try cases and endeavor to adjudicate them before appeal through diplomatic channels, which almost invariably results in friction and often, indeed, in extreme tension."

WOMAN DECLINES TO TELL THE CITY SHE IS FROM.

Gives Name of Mrs. Avarilla Dickie to the New York Police After Interrupting Street Traffic, and is Sent to Bellevue Hospital for Observation.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

NEW YORK BUREAU OF THE TIMES, May 1.—A quietly-dressed, middle-aged woman of apparent refinement approached Traffic Policeman Patrick Sullivan as he was guiding the floods of traffic at Park avenue and Thirty-fourth street during the noon hour today.

"I want to put myself in custody of the police," she said.

Sullivan told her she was blocking traffic, but she refused to go away.

Finally he called Policeman Post and asked him to take her to West Thirtieth street Police Station.

"I won't go unless he goes, too," the woman asserted firmly, drawing near Sullivan.

After combined persuasive powers of both the bluecoats failed, Sullivan went to the police station with the woman.

There she said she was Mrs. Avarilla Dickie, 54, of No. 2428 Virginia street, California, at present living in the Park avenue hotel.

She would not say what city in California she came from.

Mrs. Dickie was sent to the Bellevue Hospital, where she will be kept ten days for observation.

At the Park-Avenue Hotel it was said that no one named Dickie was staying there.

LONDON, May 1, 3:25 p.m.—The Russian 6000-ton steamer Svorono, bearing Welsh coal to Archangel, a Russian port on the White Sea, was torpedoed and sunk by a German submarine believed to be the U-23 on Friday at noon near the Blasket Islands on the west coast of Ireland.

The Svorono's crew of twenty-four men, mostly Russians, barely had time to take the boats when the vessel sank. All were rescued by a patrol boat.

SHELLING OF DUNKIRK RIDICULED BY FRENCH.

PARIS, May 1, 10:40 p.m.—The following official note was issued regarding the shelling of Dunkirk by the Germans:

"The bombardment of Dunkirk by heavy artillery is a new proof that the Germans have not been able to pierce our lines; nor have they obtained by it any appreciable result. They are striving to impress neutral opinion by these manifestations, without military efficacy.

"From the viewpoint of the development of the operations this bombardment is without importance, its effect is entirely localized to the destruction of a few houses and the killing of peaceable inhabitants of Dunkirk.

"New victims of German barbarity are the only results obtained by the enemy. The position of the armies confronting each other in Belgium is without any modification whatever."

MORE TRENCHES TAKEN BY THE FRENCH TROOPS.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

PARIS, May 1, 10:40 p.m.—The following official communication was issued by the War Office tonight:

"The day has been relatively calm in Belgium and there is no news of any important occurrence in the Argonne. Last night two German attacks near Bagatelle were easily repulsed. In the forest of Le Pretre we have taken several trenches and made 130 prisoners, capturing one machine gun. We are maintaining our position on the ground which has been conquered. One of our aeroplanes while flying this morning over Homme was hit by a splinter from a shell, which penetrated the reservoir. The machine, however, succeeded in returning to our lines, passing over the first line of German trenches at a hight of only 400 meters. It was riddled with bullets during this difficult flight and at the moment of landing came under the fire of the enemy's artillery.

The aviators, nevertheless, returned uninjured.

SLAVS AGAIN REPULSED BY AUSTRIAN SOLDIERS.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

VIENNA (via London) May 1.—The following Austrian official war statement was given out here tonight:

"In Russian Poland lively artillery engagements are reported. Russian troops have been dislodged from several positions.

"In Western Galicia and in the Carpathians there is no change.

"Yesterday the enemy made further violent attacks against the height of the Orawa and Opor Valleys, captured by us, but were again repulsed with very severe losses. We captured 500 prisoners.

"In Southeastern Galicia and Bukowina there have been artillery engagements at times. South of Zaleszczyki one of our batteries set fire to a Russian ammunition store."

FARM LABOR SHORTAGE NEW MENACE IN BRITAIN.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONDON, April 20.—The shortage in farm labor in England is causing increasing unrest in agricultural circles. It is generally recognized, moreover, that the scarcity of labor, emphasized as it has been by the brisk recruiting in rural districts, will remain a vexed problem after the war.

Generally speaking, the shortage of labor is felt in every agricultural community in the kingdom and in many cases it has compelled a change in farming methods.

In some sections the scarcity of farm hands is not so serious as the lack of horses. The lack of male labor is being filled so far as possible by the use of female and child labor. In the dairy and in the care of small stock it is likely that male labor will be almost entirely dispensed with. Much of the lighter field work also is being done by women and in the market gardening districts they may be seen in large numbers at such tasks as weeding and setting plants. On some of the smaller holdings they have even undertaken the rougher work of plowing and cultivating.

Some of the agricultural colleges have organized short courses of instruction for women who are willing to enter farm work. A college in Shropshire which has just completed its first course of this nature had more applicants than it could accommodate. The course of instruction includes milking, dairy work, live stock, poultry, preparation of land, use of tools, planting and cultivation. The course requires eight hours' work daily for fourteen days.

Wages throughout the farming districts have advanced sharply, the average increase being about $1 weekly.

ALL ATTACKS REPULSED, REPORT OF THE GERMANS.

[BY WIRELESS AND A. P.]

BERLIN, April 30 (by wireless to Sayville, N. Y., May 1.)—German military headquarters under date of today gave out a report on the progress of hostilities, reading:

"All attacks of the enemy on the west bank of the canal northwest of Ypres and on the east bank of the canal north of Ypres resulted in failure.

"The fortress of Dunkirk was shelled yesterday by German artillery. Three aviators of the enemy have been forced to land.

"An engagement near Szawle in Russian Poland resulted advantageously for the Germans. The Russians fled after setting fire to the town. One thousand Russians were taken prisoner and ten machine guns, a great amount of baggage and ammunition carts and a large quantity of ammunition were captured. Russian attacks east of Plock on the south bank of the Pilica River and at Kalwarya near the East Prussian frontier, north of Suwalki, have been repulsed. Three hundred and fifty Russians were taken prisoner.

"To the southwest of Augustowo a German vanguard company was surprised by the Russians and suffered heavy losses."

eventual formation of a Chino-Japanese company, the government cannot make the company state-owned, or borrow foreign capital for the repayment of the Japanese loan. The Chinese understand that this is acceptable to Japan.

China rejects the fifth group, with the exception of the modified Fukien demand, offering in this connection a separate note, intended to meet Japan's wishes, by pledging that no foreigners shall receive coastal concessions or contracts without Japan's consent.

Group five comprises seven articles relating to the employment by China of Japanese as advisers in political, financial and military affairs; supervision of the Chinese police; the right of Japanese ownership of land; Japanese supervision over the manufacture or purchase by China of munitions of war, various railway and mining rights, and the right by the Japanese to propagate Buddhism in China.

Lu Cheng Hsiang informed M. Hioki at the conference yesterday that the quotations embodied in Japan's revised demands were composed of words and statements of which he had made use in the course of his explanations as to why China could not consider group five, the Japanese Minister having requested such explanations. Lu Cheng Hsiang added that, as a fundamental misunderstanding existed, the plenipotentiaries had better say nothing further concerning group five.

M. Hioki made inquiry regarding the absence of railway concessions, to which the Chinese Foreign Minister replied that China's good faith was at stake, as she had already granted definite concessions to another power.

PLANTS TREE FOR GRANDSON.

MR. WILSON AT HIS DAUGHTER'S HOME IN WILLIAMSTOWN.

Today the President will Attend the Ceremonies of Christening the Baby in the Protestant Episcopal Church—Nation's Executive at a Family Party on the Lawn.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WILLIAMSTOWN (Mass.) May 1.—Woodrow Wilson laid aside the cares of President of the United States here today and became merely the grandfather of Francis Sayre, the small son of his daughter, Jessie, and of Francis B. Sayre, assistant to the president of Williams College.

The President came all the way to Williamstown, despite pressing public business, to take part in planting a "baby" tree for his grandson late today and to act as one of his godfathers at the christening ceremonies tomorrow.

Mr. Wilson will leave for Washington tomorrow afternoon, arriving there Monday morning. Virtually the entire college population of Williamstown was at the station to welcome the President, who was accompanied by his daughter, Miss Margaret Wilson; his cousin, Miss Helen Woodrow Bones, and his naval aide and physician, Dr. Cary T. Grayson.

Soon after the arrival at Williamstown, the entire family party, with President Harry A. Garfield of Williams College, and Mrs. Garfield and the Rev. J. F. Carter gathered at the side lawn of the Sayre home and planted a small walnut tree presented to Baby Sayre by Mr. Garfield. It was a happy group, and the President joined in the laughter caused when the baby firmly grasped the tree with both hands and tried to take it from his father. It was the first time the President had seen the baby since shortly after the child's birth at the White House.

As soon as the tree was placed in the ground the President turned a spadeful of earth around its roots, and then all present, including Mr. and Mrs. Sayre, followed suit. The baby gurgled delightedly, and Mr. Wilson patted him several times on the cheek.

After the brief ceremony tea was served to the family and friends in the Sayre home. The christening tomorrow will be held in St. John's Protestant Episcopal Church, and will be strictly private, only members of the Sayre and Wilson families being present.

GERMANY, SEEKING TERMS, OFFERS BAIT TO FRANCE.

Overtures from Kaiser have Failed so Fa to Make an Impression.

Great Desire of Teutons up to Date has been to be Free to Wage War with England Alone, but so Long as Fleet Holds, Experts Think She has Little Chance of Success.

BY WILL IRWIN.

[SPECIAL FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONDON, April 16.—Your correspondent has been pinched again. In fact, he has at last established a record. I (to adopt at once the person proper to a war correspondent) was in the first party of correspondents arrested by the Germans during this war. But I shared the honor with three others. Later I was arrested by the Dutch on the charge of being a correspondent. It is quite a unique honor to be arrested by a neutral nation; but, again, I had to share it with others.

Now I stand on my dizzy eminence. I am, so far as I know, the only correspondent whom it took two great nations to pinch. I was arrested simultaneously by the French and the British, the former taking charge of my baggage and the latter of my person. My person fared better than my baggage. It was allowed to go to a hotel on parole, and later its cruel jailers invited it to dinner, where they tortured it with Turkish cigarettes of a kind not usually to be obtained in France, and old port. The baggage never appeared again until I was dispatched to England, a comparatively free man. Consequently I slept in my underclothes, and I combed my hair with a comb which the corporal of the guard had carried on the retreat from Mons and had been carrying ever since. The whole thing grew out of a delicious comedy of errors which I cannot relate now because of the censor.

Having now qualified as a war correspondent, let me proceed to the business in hand.

WAR IN MID-CHANNEL.

The war is in mid-channel. The situation, as I take it, resembles roughly the situation in our Civil War, when Lincoln, during 1863 (wasn't it?) held his conference with the leaders of the South. There is no moral doubt that Germany has been looking for terms. Everything indicates that, circumstantial evidence as well as "inside information." Of course, these overtures have not been made directly or even officially. Possibly, the neutral powers have not been consulted. It is more likely that two strange gentlemen have just happened to register at a hotel in Switzerland or Italy, and have just happened to meet at dinner in a private room to discuss the future of the war—purely theoretically, of course.

Whatever terms Germany has offered have undoubtedly been unsatisfactory to the allies as a whole. So far as the general alliance is concerned, the war probably will go on. But there has been a special effort to tempt France and Russia into deserting the alliance. It is suspected that France could quit the war now at great advantage—an increase of territory, probably the security of Belgium, possibly some kind of indemnity. Germany wants to free herself to attack that enemy which is frankly the object of all popular German hate and all official German ambitions—England.

FORTITUDE OF FRENCH.

Everyone who has observed France during this war has been astonished by the fortitude of the French—a fortitude hardly expected in a people so highly civilized, so polished and so essentially peaceful. She has never been so strong as in her apparent answer to German overtures. The French have always maintained that they entered this war not so much for old, wistful dream of winning back the lost Alsace as for the permanent security of France. If she stops now, on a minor advantage, she will have the work to do over again in the next generation—or so she feels. But the temptation is great and special. She did not want war in the beginning, and she does not like it now. The men who must decide for France have their sons out there on the line. If they have not had other sons killed they know what has happened to the sons of their neighbors. Here is a chance to gain temporary advantage for France—and to save the lives of those sons. I cannot imagine a stronger bribe being offered to any man. Yet they seem to have shut their eyes and ears, these leaders of France, and to have made the heroic decision.

What would happen should France and Russia desert forms beautiful material for speculation. So far as the island of Britain is concerned she could doubtless whistle at the Germans. So long as that navy holds England cannot be invaded from Germany direct. If, by miracle or by the doubtful fortunes of a naval battle, the navy should fail to hold, England would be whipped, whether or no France and Russia stood firm; making the paper blockade a real blockade would starve her out. All of which is unlikely. England's navy, even allowing for losses, is far stronger than when the war began; and her efficiency in handling the submarine blockade, if nothing else, shows that the mariners of England have not lost their old technique.

INVASION IS DIFFICULT.

Give, however, that the Germans could slip a landing expedition past the British navy, their chance of success looks very small. The censor would probably not permit even a guess at the number of troops at present in the British army. But that army is large enough to swallow up any landing expedition for which Germany could find transport. The invasion of a country, after all, is nearly as difficult as in old times. It is more difficult, in fact. Napoleon planned to land his troops on the fine stretch of beach below Edinburgh. Such a landing could not be made today. With deep draft vessels and heavy artillery one needs a harbor and docks. And to get a harbor one needs naval control. The question of Britain and this war always gets back to the navy.

Of course, Germany may have designs not on England herself—spite of all the talk in the German newspapers—but on the British colonies. As for Canada, Australia and South Africa, the hope seems even more vain than the hope of a direct invasion. There remain Suez, Egypt and the whole British "sphere of influence" in the Near East. It is possible that G many might so juggle things, in event of a separate peace with Fra and Russia, as to get a land pa toward Suez and Egypt. Possible, likely, as are all these speculation

STALEMATE THEORY.

It comes down to this: There thin thread of hope that all nat will soon adopt the stalemate the concerning the end of this war make peace before Europe is further devastated. It is a very thread of hope. It is infinitely m likely that the struggle will go with the present line-up. Should allies, within the next two mon gain one or two considerable tories, there is a better chance. I it that no single victory in this of grubbing and digging will ever decisive. But such a victory may vince Germany that her cause is mately hopeless, and the losses victory means nowadays may give allies pause before they sacrifice more fine, tall fellows.

THE BRITISH RETREAT.

The story of the British from Mons has been much about, but it has never really written. Doubtless we shall wait the whole story until long after end of the war. Later and battles have made us forget unique episode in warfare. It indeed, like a small affair. But "little" British army was larger the Northern army at Gettysburg, this retreat, which was one conti battle, lasted three times as l Gettysburg. And here, months ward, is one new story of Mon

ASKS ELECTION ON REFERENDUM.

Would Give People Chance to Express Themselves.

Three Parties Hold a Caucus to Decide on Action.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SACRAMENTO, May 1.—Assemblyman Encell, the administration floor leader, asked permission to introduce a bill in the Assembly late this afternoon in which the Governor of California is required and directed to call a special election on the first Tuesday in November for the purpose of voting on any initiative or referendum petitions that may be filed before that time.

Explaining his bill, Assemblyman Encell said that it is for the purpose of giving the voters an opportunity to express themselves at that time on the non-partisan bill, provided it should be held up by referendum. Under the rules the Encell bill was referred to the special committee. It cannot come regularly before the Assembly unless three-fourths of the entire membership votes to permit its introduction at this time.

Whether the bill shall be considered rests with the minority, as twenty-one votes can shut it out. A caucus of Republicans, Democrats and Socialists who voted against the non-partisan bill has been called for Sunday afternoon. The original purpose of this was to decide what united steps shall be taken by the three parties interested to invoke the referendum on the non-partisan bill. The conference will now decide also whether the minority will permit the introduction of the Encell bill. On that question the members of the minority are divided.

HALF MILLION THE COST.

The expense of the special election is one of the questions considered. It was estimated on the floor of the Assembly this afternoon that the special election would cost not less than $500,000. If the referendum is invoked with the minimum number of signatures the bill would not come up for vote until the next general election, provided the Governor did not call a special election for that purpose.

It became known tonight that the Governor is desirous of having a special election called this fall in case the non-partisan bill is tied up with the referendum. The "Progressive" politicians have figured that their prize measure would have a much better chance to carry at a special election in which there would be a light vote and their incomparable machine could be at work, than at a general election where the vote would be heavy and when, by reason of interest in national affairs, party spirit would be high.

RESTS WITH GOVERNOR.

Under the present law, calling the special election rests wholly with the Governor. He could defeat the Encell bill by using the Executive veto or he could call the election without legislative approval.

At tomorrow's caucus the referendum against the civil service bill may also be considered. It is possible that papers will be circulated for both these under the same committee. The platforms of the Republican, Democratic and Socialist parties all strongly favored an increase in the powers of the State civil service. But in a bill which passed the Assembly this week civil service in the State is made practically a dead letter. Efficiency tests and security in positions are the cardinal principles of all civil service.

Both these are provided for in the present law; but in the new bill the present restriction that no civil service employee can be discharged without a hearing is abolished. Any department head can discharge an employee "for the good of the service" under the new act and he has no recourse. In addition to this, the employees of the Board of Control and of the Railroad Commission are withdrawn from civil service.

PLAN TO COUNT BALLOTS.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SACRAMENTO, May 1.—Counting of ballots every hour in State and municipal elections is provided for in a bill by Assemblyman Cary, passed by the lower house. Two extra election officers are added to the number now fixed by law. There was no debate and no negative vote cast, but after it had gone through one member took a second look at the bill, recognized its importance and gave notice of reconsideration.

IMPERIAL HIGHWAY.

An appropriation of $100,000 for a State highway between El Centro, Imperial county, and a point on the State line opposite Yuma, Ariz., was passed by the Assembly. It will complete a highway from Los Angeles to Yuma via the Coachella Valley.

SAN DIEGO BUILDING.

An appropriation of $25,000 to pay the additional cost required to complete the State Building at the Panama-California Exposition at San Diego was voted by the Assembly, 49 to 14. The bill, Conrad, author, now goes to the Senate. The 1913 Legislature originally appropriated $250,000 for the construction of the building, but the amount fell short by $25,000, and the sum was advanced by the exposition officials.

SAN LUIS OBISPO ROAD.

The Bakersfield-San Luis Obispo highway project was given a favorable recommendation by the Assembly Ways and Means Committee. The bill, by Rigdon, appropriates $50,000. The purpose of the road is to directly connect the San Joaquin Valley with the coast highway by building through the Chloame Pass.

Assemblyman Roger Edward's bill appropriating $10,000 for the survey of a new State road between Bakersfield and Ventura also was given a favorable recommendation by the same committee. The bills will come to a vote in the House next week.

An appropriation of $25,000 to pay the additional cost required to complete the State Building at the Panama-California Exposition at San Diego was voted by the Assembly, 49 to 14. The bill, Conrad, author, now goes to the Senate. The 1913 Legislature originally appropriated $250,000 for the construction of the building, but the amount fell short by $25,000, and this sum was advanced by the exposition officials.

SAN LUIS OBISPO ROAD.

The Bakersfield-San Luis Obispo highway project was given a favorable recommendation by the Assembly Ways and Means Committee. The bill, by Rigdon, appropriates $50,000. The purpose of the road is to directly connect the San Joaquin Valley with the coast highway by building through the Chicame Pass.

Assemblyman Roger Edward's bill appropriating $10,000 for the survey of a new State road between Bakersfield and Ventura also was given a favorable recommendation by the same committee. The bills will come to a vote in the House next week.

BOOST FOR SUFFRAGE.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SACRAMENTO, May 1.—Woman suffrage and its success in California was unanimously approved by a vote of the Senate today upon a resolution by Senator Kehoe, which he said was designed to contradict reports in other States where suffrage campaigns are pending that California would like to abolish equal suffrage.

"Other States they are saying that woman suffrage is a failure in California and that we would like to get rid of it," said Kehoe.

The resolution declares that "so successful has been the operation and effect of granting equal political rights to women that were it to be voted upon again it would be reindorsed by an overwhelming majority.

"That the adoption of woman suffrage by California is one of the important factors contributing to the marked political, social and industrial advancement of our people in recent years.

JITNEY BUS TAX.

A State tax of $12.50 a seat on nickel motor busses, fixed in a bill by Senator Cogswell a week ago, was reduced in the Senate to $7 a seat. The reduction was part of a general compromise agreement between the motor bus and street car representatives, in which Assemblyman Conard's bill was amended so that franchises on motor busses would not be compulsory but optional with cities and towns.

Senator Chandler opposed the reduction. His antagonism has been emphasized by an experience in returning to the State capital this morning from the Raisin Day festival at Fresno.

"I could not make a convenient train connection at Stockton," he said, "and I called up the motor bus which runs from Stockton to Sacramento. The man told me it looked like rain and he probably would not run today. ASKS ELECTION ON REFERENDUM.

Would Give People Chance to Express Themselves.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SACRAMENTO, May 1.—Assemblyman Encell, the administration floor leader, asked permission to introduce a bill in the Assembly late this afternoon in which the Governor of California is required and directed to call a special election on the first Tuesday in November for the purpose of voting on any initiative or referendum petitions that may be filed before that time.

Explaining his bill, Assemblyman Encell said that it is for the purpose of giving the voters an opportunity to express themselves at that time on the non-partisan bill, provided it should be held up by referendum. Under the rules the Encell bill was referred to the special committee. It cannot come regularly before the Assembly unless three-fourths of the entire membership votes to permit its introduction at this time.

Whether the bill shall be considered rests with the minority, as twenty-one votes can shut it out. A caucus of Republicans, Democrats and Socialists who voted against the non-partisan bill has been called for Sunday afternoon. The original purpose of this was to decide what united steps shall be taken by the three parties interested to invoke the referendum on the non-partisan bill. The conference will now decide also whether the minority will permit the introduction of the Encell bill. On that question the members of the minority are divided.

HALF MILLION THE COST.

The expense of the special election is one of the questions considered. It was estimated on the floor of the Assembly this afternoon that the special election would cost not less than $500,000. If the referendum is invoked with the minimum number of signatures the bill would not come up for vote until the next general election, provided the Governor did not call a special election for that purpose.

It became known tonight that the Governor is desirous of having a special election called this fall in case the non-partisan bill is tied up with the referendum. The "Progressive" politicians have figured that their [illegible] measure would have a much better chance to carry at a special election in which there would be a light vote and their incomparable machine could be at work, than at a general election where the vote would be heavy and when, by reason of interest in national affairs, party spirit would be high.

RESTS WITH GOVERNOR.

Under the present law, calling the special election rests wholly with the Governor. He could defeat the Encell bill by using the Executive veto or he could call the election without legislative approval.

At tomorrow's caucus the referendum against the civil service bill may also be considered. It is possible that papers will be circulated for both these under the same committee. The platforms of the Republican, Democratic and Socialist parties all strongly favored an increase in the powers of the State civil service. But in a bill which passed the Assembly this week civil service in the State is made practically a dead letter. Efficiency tests and security in positions are the cardinal principles of all civil service. Both these are provided for in the present law; but in the new bill the present restriction that no civil service employee can be discharged without a hearing is abolished. Any department head can discharge an employee "for the good of the service" under the new act and he has no recourse. In addition to this, the employees of the Board of Control and of the Railroad Commission are withdrawn from civil service.

IN THE HOUSE.

PLAN TO COUNT BALLOTS.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SACRAMENTO, May 1.—Counting of ballots every hour in State and municipal elections is provided for in a bill by Assemblyman Cary, passed by the lower house. Two extra election officers are added to the number now fixed by law. There was no debate and no negative vote cast, but after it had gone through one member took a second look at the bill, recognized its importance and gave notice of reconsideration.

IMPERIAL HIGHWAY.

An appropriation of $100,000 for a State highway between El Centro, Imperial county, and a point on the State line opposite Yuma, Ariz., was passed by the Assembly. It will complete a highway from Los Angeles to Yuma via the Coachella Valley.

SAN DIEGO BUILDING.

An appropriation of $25,000 to pay the additional cost required to complete the State Building at the Panama-California Exposition at San Diego was voted by the Assembly, 49 to 14. The bill, Conrad, author, now goes to the Senate. The 1913 Legislature originally appropriated $250,000 for the construction of the building, but the amount fell short by $25,000, and this sum was advanced by the exposition officials.

MOTOR VEHICLE ACT.

The conference motor vehicle act adjusting the automobile license tax at 40 cents a horse power rated according to the Association of Licensed Automobile Manufacturers' formula was passed by the Senate. It has passed the Assembly. Among the new features of State traffic regulation is a requirement that all horse-drawn vehicles shall carry lights at night. Over-zealous arrests for speeding to increase local revenues by fines are discouraged by a provision that fines shall go to each county to be distributed to the cities and towns according to population. Tens of thousands of dollars will be saved to motorists through a system of re-registration each year without change of number plate. After an initial payment of $2, chauffeurs will have to pay only $1 a year.

The man told me it looked like rain and he probably would not run today. Now if these busses are going to run only when they please and thus inconvenience the public, I am in favor of putting them out of business."

Senate bill No. 722 by Benson, extending the powers of the State Reclamation Board, including the right to regulate reservoirs and to require drawbridges over by-pass waterways, was passed by the Senate.

BLUE SKY DECISION.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SACRAMENTO, May 1.—Purchasers of stock in the Deep Sea Exploration Company of Los Angeles, who bought their shares after the Blue Sky Act went into effect last December, have been advised by Commissioner of Corporations Carnahan that they have the right of cancelling their subscriptions and having their money repaid if they so desire.

Carnahan will decide whether the company will be permitted to continue the sale of its shares.

The Deep Sea Exploration Company was formed for the purpose of constructing a submarine bell to be used in raising sunken ships. A temporary permit was granted, but Carnahan found provisions of it were being violated.

MRS. C. E. BEAN'S BUSINESS SCHOOL FOR YOUNG WOMEN

"Nothing is good enough that can be done better."

Mrs. C. E. Bean's Business School for Young Women is a private exclusive school which makes a specialty of training young women for high-class office positions as private secretaries, book-keepers or any position where an assistant who is above the average is desired.

THE COMMERCIAL COURSE. The commercial course includes a practical knowledge of book-keeping, business arithmetic, business correspondence and drills in rapid calculation. The aim of this course is to make the student a thorough book-keeper, accurate and reliable.

THE SHORTHAND COURSE. The shorthand course comprises the Munson Pitmanic system, or Gregg if preferred; touch typewriting, spelling and Business English. The graduate from this course is able to take dictation easily and correctly, transcribe perfectly and answer ordinary letters without dictation.

THE PREPARATORY DEPARTMENT. Special attention is given to the preparatory or English department, which is intended to bring up all backward or nervous students, or those who for any reason are behind in any of the grammar grade or high school subjects. Many students aspiring to the stenographic work need the work of this department first. We solicit the attention of students of the intermediate grades.

PENMANSHIP. The Palmer Method of Business Writing taught by a system of drills is a wonderful example of what the pupils attain in this school, the comparison of writing done on entering the school and later proficiency proving the motto of the institution that "Nothing is good enough that can be done better."

As the work is individual, students may enter at any time. By an independent method of working may complete the course or courses according to their ability and application. Evening sessions.

We occupy light, commodious rooms in the Public Library Building, 215 West Fifth Street. The school is splendidly arranged for class work or for individual instruction. Individual desks are provided together with the proper equipment for every branch of the work. Students are supplied with the books actually used in the business they desire to follow. A handsome diploma is awarded to all students who satisfactorily complete the work.

USING OXEN IN BERLIN.

They Take the Place of Horses Requisitioned for the War.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

BERLIN (via London,) May 1, 10:15 a.m.—Oxen may soon take the places in this city of many of the truck horses which have been requisitioned for military purposes. The police have abrogated the ordinance which prohibited their use in the city and the first yoke seen in the streets in many years appeared today.

COL. BLETHEN'S ILLNESS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SEATTLE, May 1.—Showing the effects of illness, Col. Alden J. Blethen, editor-in-chief and publisher of the Seattle Times, arrived tonight from a trip taken a few weeks ago for his health. He was accompanied by his daughter, Mrs. Gilbert Le Baron Duffey, and her husband. Dr. J. H. Lyons, the family physician, met the party at Spokane, and remained with Col. Blethen during the trip to this city. Col. Blethen was far from as vigorous as when he left Seattle February 17, and admitted having lost considerable weight during the trip. He was assisted in alighting from the train by his son-in-law and Dr. Lyons and was joined at the station by Mrs. Blethen and his son, Joseph, who escorted him into his limousine. Although urged by Dr. Lyons to go directly to his home he insisted upon visiting his office, where he remained less than five minutes after which he went directly to his residence on Highland avenue.

Joseph Blethen said tonight he had never seen his father looking so poorly.

"Although the members of our family tried to get father to take a trip as far back as last Christmas he refused to go until nearly two months later," said Joseph. "Cuba was his objective point, but after visiting San Francisco and Los Angeles and other points in Southern California he went to Florida, and after booking and going aboard the boat there in sheer desperation he left the boat and after a few days went to Washington, D. C. There he remained two weeks following which he went to New York, where he was confined in his hotel room for five days. On his arrival in Chicago he was confined to his room for another three days, his son (Clarence) telegraphing from that city to have Dr. Lyons meet him on his arrival in Spokane. With my father's return home we look to see his health improve."

Col. Blethen gave all the members of his family an affectionate greeting and although declining to be interviewed seemed glad to be back home. The colonel is 69 years old.

THE MARYSVILLE MYSTERY.

Sheriff McCoy Says Motive for Killing of Man and His Wife Is Still Lacking.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

MARYSVILLE (Cal.) May 1.—Mystery still surrounds the murder of Emil Picard and wife at their road house nine miles from here some time Thursday night. A motive for the crime is lacking according to Sheriff McCoy, but he is disposed to believe that the slayer was bent on robbery, the absence of a watch from Picard's pocket giving strength to this theory notwithstanding money and jewelry in the house were not touched.

Sheriff McCoy has asked officers in surrounding countries to arrest Charles Reddel, a former ranch hand at the Keels and Williams farm which adjoins the Picard place. Reddell was discharged by his employers Thursday and cashed a check that day at Picards. The check was found in the drawer.

Reddel is the only person the officers know who saw Picard late Thursday and they want to question him.

The officers have been unable to get further information to show that Picard who was a juror at the Ford and Suhr murder trial, may have been killed by Industrial Workers of the World sympathizers for voting for conviction.

Picard was 75 years old and his wife 42.

FEEL DISTANT EARTHQUAKE.

REPORT IN LONDON.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

LONDON, May 1.—A severe earth shock was recorded early this morning at the observatories at Cardiff and the Isle of Wight. The indications recorded suggest that the center of the disturbance was in Japan.

FELT IN DENVER.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

DENVER (Colo.) May 1.—The seismograph at Sacred Heart College last night registered an earth disturbance between 10:28 and 11:20 p.m. The maximum disturbance was seven minutes from 10:32 to 10:39 p.m. The opinion was expressed that the disturbance was not in America, but officials were unable to determine its direction or distance.

REPORT IN SEATTLE.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

SEATTLE, May 1.—The severest earthquake recorded in years is shown by the University of Washington seismograph to have continued from 10 to 11 o'clock last night. The disturbance was continuous, light fluctuations occurring between the heavier shocks.

ICE MELTS, CORWIN SAILS.

Ship With Fresh Food for the Northern Gold Camps Expects to Reach Destination on May 20.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SEATTLE, May 1.—The steamer Corwin, which, having been built as an ice-fighting revenue cutter for the northern waters, dares to venture into Bering Sea while ice is still abundant, sailed for Nome tonight with 102 passengers and fresh food, magazines and other luxuries for the people of the northern gold camp, who have been cut off from commerce with the outside world since last October. The Corwin hopes to reach Nome May 20, the ice being reported melting unusually early.

FATE OF CHILDS WITH COMMITTEE

Five Assemblymen to Report by Next Wednesday.

Judge Insists His Decisions Were Rendered Justly.

Del Norte County Conditions Somewhat Peculiar.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SACRAMENTO (Cal.) May 1.—The judicial fate of Judge John L. Childs of Del Norte county rested tonight in the hands of five Assemblymen selected from the lower house Judiciary Committee to conduct an investigation of impeachment charges against the jurist. Their decision will not be reported to the house until probably next Wednesday, and no one in authority tonight cared to predict whether the committee will declare itself for or against holding Judge Childs for impeachment proceedings in the Senate.

The hearings have consumed three weeks and more than fifty witnesses have given testimony for and against the jurist. The wildest latitude has been allowed by the committee to counsel on both sides, and the ramifications of the case have been marked by a strange commingling of tragedy and humor. In probing charges that Judge Childs, played a prominent part in "railroading" five persons to prison, the committee sent to Montana for May Bartol, a 14-year-old girl, whose testimony resulted in her mother being sentenced to forty years at San Quentin.

In the story of her debasement she exonerated Judge Childs of using influence to obtain testimony against her mother and four other defendants. She told the committee that Sheriff Huffman of Del Norte county coached her what to say in court, but she affirmed her testimony at the trials at Crescent City to the effect that her mother had assisted others in forcing her to submit to indignities.

THE MAIN CHARGES.

The main charges against Childs are that he has looted estates by borrowing money from them and pleading the statute of limitation when the notes fell due; that he virtually conducted the prosecution and defense in a preliminary hearing where he was the defendant in a suit for criminal libel and acquitted himself; that for three years he violated the constitution by failing to empanel grand juries; that his conduct of a certain criminal case was contrary to legal procedure, and that he deprived Mrs. Ruby Bartol of her constitutional rights when she was arrested in Oregon on a statutory charge. There are other minor specifications.

In their search for corroborative evidence presented by the complainants, thirty-seven residents of Del Norte county, the committee sent to San Quentin and Folsom prison and put on the witness stand six convicts, all of whom had been tried in Judge Childs's court. Two of the prisoners were women, Mrs. Bartol and Mrs. Josie Horn. All testified to their innocence and accused Judge Childs of prejudice in their cases and irregularities on his part before and during the trials. The judge did not make any effort to cross-examine the convicts, but in subsequent hearings he explained every circumstance surrounding the trials and sought to justify a disparity in some of the sentences he inflicted on various defendants in the Bartol cases.

CHILDS ON STAND.

All the ground which the committee has traversed since the beginning of the hearing on April 5 was gone over today, and the accumulated testimony of the impeachment petitioners was subjected to a vigorous attack by Childs, who spent much of the day on the witness stand. At times he provoked the committee and spectators to unrestrained laughter by a recital of conditions in his county.

He admitted that he might have been somewhat irregular in certain proceedings, but he defied his accusers to prove wherein he had been unjust or even severe in his dealing with defendants in his court.

"You've got to understand that country up there," the judge said, "when you take these charges under consideration. I have been accused of pretty near every crime in the calendar and it is evident there is a movement afoot to 'get' me.

"Now you take this man Walters," he continued, "who sued me for criminal libel. He said I called him a liar in my newspaper. That's true. I called him a liar because he was one, but I didn't say this about him until after he had called me everything he could think of. Even a judge has some rights."

Judge Childs took up the list of the thirty-seven complainants, whose signatures are attached to the impeachment petition. He found something good to say about every one of them, but he dissected their motives and explained that most of them had run for office of some kind or another and blamed their defeat on him. The hearing will conclude late today.

TREASURER TESTIFIES.

Dan W. Rice, formerly County Treasurer of Del Norte and at present foreman of the county grand jury, told the committee the story of how he had loaned the county money to various persons and of the discovery of a shortage some years ago by an expert accountant. The prosecution has been trying to establish that Judge Childs himself was a borrower of the county funds, but this was denied by Rice.

The Legislative Committee which has conducted the investigation is composed of Assemblymen George H. Johnson (chairman,) Brown, Satterwhite, Lawrence Edwards and McKnight.

ACCUSED WIFE ADMITS CHARGE.

ALLEGED CONFESSION OF MRS. BECKTEL READ IN COURT.

Declares Man Arrested at Her Husband's Instance Did not Coax Her Away, but that She Went to be His Housekeeper and Later Child was Born.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

STOCKTON, May 1.—Otto Becktel, an Oakland contractor, was the center of curious interest in court today when the alleged confession of his wife, under arrest with B. F. Woodson, under a statutory charge, was read to Justice A. C. Parker. Both Woodson, who is a prominent real estate man and church worker, and Mrs. May Becktel were arrested at the instance of the latter's husband, who alleges that they have lived together as man and wife for more than a year. In part, the alleged confession reads:

"I was very young when Becktel came to my home to live. He made love to me and I married him. We lived with my people and I soon found out that he was not the sort of a man he had represented himself to be. Woodson was in the real estate business when I met him and out of kindness he offered to let me go to his house and be his housekeeper. He did not coax me to leave home, but was just doing a charitable act when he took me to his home on East Miner avenue. We lived in this city for several months and then a child was born."

Following the court session, Becktel followed his wife and Woodson to the street and saw them leave together in a machine.

RAIN, SNOW, WIND, HAIL SWEEP SANTA BARBARA

Last Time the Coast Range was Mantled in May was Forty-seven Years Ago—Lemons, Cherries and Walnuts are Safe, While Considerable Benefit is Reported to the Grain Crop.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SANTA BARBARA, May 1.—Rain, snow, hail, wind and thunder feature the storm which is sweeping Santa Barbara county. In the mountains snow has prevailed at intervals all day, while rain has swept in streaks across the valleys, intermingled in spots with hail. Detonations of thunder have added a spectacular thrill.

The last time snow mantled the Coast Range above Santa Barbara in May was in 1868, forty-seven years ago. The records of that far-off period, as dug up by Weather Observer George W. Russell, indicate that the storm now holding the Coast in its grip is similar to that of May, 1868, when winds, hail, snow and lowering temperatures visited the State.

A careful inquiry in all parts of the county brings news that the only damage so far has been confined to beans. Two weeks ago many ranchers got in their lands to limas and other beans. In the Santa Maria Valley the rain has started the weeds and the ranchers will plow up their fields and resow as the cheapest means of destroying the weeds. In other sections where adobe soil prevails the rains have rotted the beans.

The fruit orchards are undamaged. There will be hardly any apricot crop, but not on account of the storm. Lemons, cherries and walnuts are safe. The benefit to the grain will more than offset the loss of the first bean planting. Trees in some districts were blown down and outhouses blown over, but the wind otherwise has done no damage.

Lompoc reports the hardest wind in thirty-five years. Today's rain has been confined to freakish streaks. The barometer is low, indicating wind, and a high humidity and low temperature give evidence that a heavy storm is impending.

MAY DAY IN REDLANDS.

REDLANDS, May 1.—May Day was ushered in with a cold rain and hail today. It was a battle between the rain and hail, first a dash of one and then the other. Experts say the moisture has penetrated so deep in the ground that it will suffice for weeks.

There was an electrical storm in West Redlands today and the home of D. R. Parker on Lugonia avenue was struck by lightning. Mr. and Mrs. Parker were in the room where the bedding on the bed was set on fire, but they escaped with a severe shock. W. I. Fine was passing in his automobile and he assisted in putting out the fire, the roof of the house having caught fire also.

Fifteen inches of snow was reported at Forest Home tonight. There is also a heavy snow at Oak Glen, the exact damage to the apple crop being unknown. Rain today .25, for the season 17.97; last season 20.18.

COLD AT RIVERSIDE.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

RIVERSIDE, May 1.—Today was the coldest May day which this section has experienced since the town was incorporated, say pioneers who settled here in the 70's. Likewise they characterize the weather which prevailed during April as the most freakish they ever experienced in California at this time of the year. The morning broke fairly clear, with the sun driving away the clouds. At 10:30 a pelting hail storm drove pedestrians off the streets, and showers have fallen intermittently all day. The precipitation amounted to .22 of an inch, making a total of 13.86 inches for the season.

FROST AT CUDAHY.

CUDAHY, May 1.—A coating of white frost on the house tops and ice as thick as cardboard greeted the residents of this section when they arose on May Day morning. After the sun arose the beans, watermelons, cantaloupes, corn and potatoes began to wilt and within an hour were black with the mantle of death. Many gardens will have to be replanted.

Another effect of the unprecedented drop in temperature and high, cold winds has been an epidemic of tooth and ear aches. Local physicians report that neuralgia and rheumatism have increased the call for liniment and flannel bandages in a way that suggests the after-effects of a battle in Europe. Many mothers were awakened in the night by complaints from the younger members of the family of cold and earaches. The local bus was busy this morning carrying a stream of toothache sufferers to the dentist's office in Huntington Park.

FIREPLACES WELCOME.

COVINA, May 1.—Fireplaces that for six weeks had remained unlighted were piled high with blazing orange wood last night and today, and the heating stove that had been banished to the cellar was again tugged upstairs by the man of the house and put into commission. The coldest three days of April in the knowledge of old residents has just been experienced in the valley.

April's last day went out with a steadily falling temperature, until some of the orchard thermometers registered 32 and 30 at midnight. With the exception of one night in January, the thermometer was lower than it had been at any time during the winter. The snow line on the mountains crept down to within a few miles of the valley. A bitter wind blew all day yesterday. The wind May Day exercises of the Covina Valley people consisted in huddling around the heaters. The weather has not been severe enough to do any damage to crops.

SHOWERS AT FRESNO.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

FRESNO, May 1.—The fruit-growing districts of Fresno county and other parts of the San Joaquin Valley received light showers instead of frost, as expected last night. Rain fell at intervals during the night. Cloudy weather prevented frost this morning. Fruit growers are rejoicing over the arrival of moisture. No damage from the wind is reported.

AT SAN BERNARDINO.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SAN BERNARDINO, May 1.—Rainfall today, .26 of an inch; storm, 1.27 inches; season, 18.47 inches; last season, 21.31 inches.

LITTLE DAMAGE IN MONROVIA.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

MONROVIA, May 1.—A drenching rain, commencing tonight about 8 o'clock, put an end to fears of frost damage in this district. Up to sunset ranchers were anxious, for hail and sleet fell intermittantly all afternoon and a blinding snowstorm, the worst of the season, covered the slopes of the mountains to the foothills north of the city. Owing to the amount of moisture in the ground and on the trees, R. O. Simpson, manager of the Duarte-Monrovia Citrus Exchange, is of the opinion that the oranges and lemons of this district are in no danger.

M. R. Williams says that the ptotato crop, of which there are several hundred acres planted in the San Gabriel Valley, is practically untouched. Last night's frost was rendered harmless by the excessive moisture. Berries are likewise safe.

The precipitation for the storm amounts to .83 inches, giving Monrovia a seasonal total of 20.84 inches. Last year's rainfall at this time was 22.43 inches. Despite this fact the water table in the valley is two feet higher than last year.

FROST IN PASADENA.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

PASADENA, May 1.—May Day was ushered in with frost and snow instead of sunshine and flowers in the Crown City.

In the morning the temperature was 35 deg., and a white frost covered the earth. This was followed in the afternoon by a severe hailstorm, which lasted several minutes, after which it rained most all the rest of the day.

The trees at Switzer's camp and Strawberry peak were bent with snow while Mt. Wilson reported four inches of snow.

The rainfall registered .30 of an inch, making a total for the season of 21 inches. At this time last season the rainfall measured 33.25 inches.

SNOW COVERED NEAR BAKERSFIELD

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

BAKERSFIELD, May 1.—The mountains all around Bakersfield are covered with snow. On Piute Mountain there was three feet this morning. On the State highway via Tejon Pass, all traffic has ceased. No one has come through for three days. On Thursday a man bound for Los Angeles traveled forty miles and had to turn back after a very hard trip. The Tehachepi route to Los Angeles is in bad condition. Yesterday a party going from here south became stalled at the White Wolf grade and returned. This evening, however, a party arrived from Los Angeles and reported a very hard trip, warning others aaginst trying the Tehachepi. At several points they reported making only six miles an hour owing to snow and slush. Nevertheless, two parties say they will leave for Los Angeles tomorrow via Tehachepi.

There was another snowfall on the Tehachepi early this morning. There was also a severe freeze and the fruit crop has probably been seriously damaged. The same condition probably prevails at Tejon, but no communication with the Tejon ranch headquarters could be had this evening.

Inquiry of Saugus and of the Edison company station here brought no confirmation of the reports that the power plant there has been put out of commission. The railroad reports no delays to trains on account of snow, but a derailment of an engine this morning held four passenger trains.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

GREATER AND BETTER REDONDO BEACH PLAN.

REDONDO BEACH, May 1.—With an ocean front that presents a scene of desolation with a loss of $150,000, from yesterday's high sea and fierce gale, facing them, the business men of Redondo Beach arose to meet the situation today with a determination that the storms of this year, which seem to have marked this city for damage, have but taught them a lesson; that there can and will be a bigger and better Redondo Beach.

The average business man of the city arose this morning, after more than half the night viewing his own or his neighbor's business wiped out by the raging storm and sea, and eating his bacon and eggs, began to plan with perfect equanimity for a greater Redondo Beach. The net result was that by evening $50,000 was ready to rebuild the Racing Coaster, the damage to the structure being the greatest single item of the losses.

But the business men did not stop here; they determined that every person who came here to view the wreckage should know that Redondo Beach is going to come back. Donning overalls, F. R. Fancher, president of the local Chamber of Commerce, proceeded to direct the posting of large printed bills, announcing the intentions of Redondo Beach. In flaring letters the posters said: "Redondo Beach, Storm Swept But Undaunted. Watch us Come Back."

Mr. Fancher also let it be known that the principal amusement resorts at the beach are still here, in spite of the fact that the loss is heavy. He pointed out that the bath house, the Casino, the pavilion and the many concessions it houses are still here. Though the pavilion was threatened by the storm, the receding tide saved it from any great damage.

The principal losses were those of the owners of the Racing Coaster, owned by the Redondo Racing Coaster Company, J. A. Ellis, president, and those of the Pacific Electric Company.

Late last night the baithouse on the approach to Pier No. 2 crashed into the surf along with a long stretch of the pier. A portion of the Racing Coaster still stands, as does the front of the structure. The Moonstone Building, which houses numerous concessions, still stands, but the seaward side of the building is held up by only three piling.

Today a large crew of men was at work endeavoring to fortify the structure against the high tide of tonight. The Wharf Cafe, at the approach to Pier No. 1, which was wrecked by the storm and sea, is held up by a few shaking timbers. Tonight the tides pounded it and left it ready to drop into the ocean.

Though the Merry-Go-Round was slightly damaged by the storm, it was running today and in good order.

President Ellis of the Redondo Racing Coaster Company, announced tonight that the big structure would be rebuilt as fast as men and money can accomplish the feat. Announcement was also made that the Pacific Electric would rebuild on a greater scale such of its concessions as were damaged.

Rescue.

VICTORIA'S CREW SAVED BY RELIEF BOAT FLYER.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN DIEGO, May 1.—Shortly after leaving port this afternoon the relief boat Flyer picked up the eleven members of the crew of the steamship Victoria. The Flyer landed the men at the quarantine station, where they reported that the Victoria foundered off the Coronado Islands last night after they had taken to the boats. Although in an exhausted condition from their long battle with the heavy seas last night and today, it is stated that none of the rescued men is in serious condition. The Victoria sank in deep water and is a total loss.

Before the Victoria's heroic crew took to the lifeboats the vessel's deckhouse was smashed to splinters by the sea and the wind, the masts and stack were blown away until only stumps remained, while the rudder and rudder post had been wrenched loose and sent spinning a mass of debris on the crest of the sea. Only when the craft started stern first toward the bottom of the Pacific did Capt. Urruchua and his crew abandon their vessel and take to the lifeboats.

Capt. Schermerhorn of the American-Hawaiian freighter American said that the last of the officers aboard the freighter saw of the Victoria was at 9 p.m. Friday. Through a haze the American's crew saw the crew bailing out the forehold of the doomed craft. The American, also in bad condition from the high seas, steamed in a circle off the Coronado Islands until 4 o'clock this morning and then steamed to port to land the ten passengers she had picked up from the Victoria.

Steve Ghio, well-known San Diegan and master of the ocean auxiliary sloop Panama, was among the passengers rescued from the Victoria.

PASSENGER'S TRIBUTE.

"I never felt happier about coming into this port than I did this morning," he said. "The lifeboat crew from the American did some of the best work I have ever seen. There were six of them, Second Officer P. W. Sprague, Quartermasters Walter Matsinger and Hans Johnson and Seamen Nils Lindekranz, Christopher Torkeson and Henry Hansen, making one man in the stern and five men at the oars. The combers were sixty feet high, or they seemed so, but those American-Hawaiian steamboat men handled a lifeboat like fishermen. They rowed to a position in front of the Victoria and then let their boat be blown astern, while they caught a line. Then they made fast and kept their boat afloat while the passengers jumped.

"When the Victoria went down with a wave the lifeboat came up on another wave and the two boats would be almost flush. That was the time to jump. We had to throw the women, two of them, and they behaved perfectly, although one fell across my arm and nearly broke it. I had to retire from the catching. Some of the seemed to members of the crew that with each succeeding crash of the swells she would founder.

There was little damage to small craft and none of the smaller vessels left port yesterday. The yacht Lucero was found this morning on the mud bank in the Wilmington basin with her stern high and dry and the bow under ten feet of water. She was blown from her moorings. The Lucero is one of the finest steam yachts in the harbor and was formerly the private craft of Capt. Harry W. Goodall, who sold the yacht to a motion picture concern.

The tug Crescent got in from San Clemente Island this afternoon with a barge loaded with sheep and wool. The Crescent left here three days ago in command of Capt. Will Cummings and a crew of two. The barge left the island Thursday afternoon with 582 head of sheep and fifty bales of wool aboard and was forty-six hours in making port. Yesterday the tug got into Avalon with her tow, but it was so rough even a launch could not be sent ashore. The voyage was continued this morning and the barge reached port without losing a single animal of the herd that weathered the storm in the corral on the deck of the barge.

OREGON FRUIT LITTLE DAMAGED.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

PORTLAND (Or.) May 1.—Frost formed early today at many places in Oregon but damage to fruit and other crops, according to scattered report was not heavy. In Northeastern Oregon, where sheepmen suffered heavy losses Thursday and Friday among their newly shorn flocks, the temperature was slightly milder.

At Baker, Or., last night, the minimum temperature was 34 deg., and although there were further losses of sheep, they were not extensive. In the Williamette Valley the temperature was lower than yesterday, Roseburg reporting a minimum of 32 deg. and Portland 37 deg. The fruit crop suffered in exposed places. Medford reported no damage. At Marshfield, on the Southern Oregon Coast, the minimum was 36 deg.

A strong wind continued to sweep the Coast and interior. At the mouth of the Columbia River, the gale reached a velocity of fifty-two miles per hour.

The Letter "E."

[Charleston Gazette:] Someone has advanced the opinion that the letter "e' is the most unfortunate character in the English alphabet, because it is always out of cash, forever in debt, never out of danger, and in hell all the time. For some reason, he overlooked the fortunates of the letter, so we will call his attention to the fact that "e is never in war and always in peace. It is the beginning of existence, the commencement of ease and the end of trouble. Without it there would be no meat, no life and no heaven. It is the center of honesty, makes love perfect and without it there would be no editors, devils nor news.

Truck Tires Free

Unless the 1915 Goodyear S-V Outwears Any Other

Here is an offer which Truck users cannot afford to neglect. It will settle for you, without any risk, the entire Truck Tire question.

For three months—April, May and June—this amazing warrant goes with every S-V Truck Tire put on under these conditions:

Every Penny Back

Equip opposite wheels, at the same time, one with a Goodyear S-V, one with any other standard make tire of like rated size, bought in the open market.

If the Goodyear S-V fails to cost less per mile than the other, we will return you its full purchase price, making the S-V free.

Mark that—no partial rebate, no mileage adjustment, no replacement. The tire that fails is free. Get this guarantee in writing when you buy the tires.

Never Such a Warrant

Never before has such a warrant been given on any class of tire. If widely accepted, it means with us a million-dollar stake. It is given without reservation against any tire in the field. It covers accidents as well as wear.

Numerous makers claim to build tires as good as the Goodyear S-V. Let us stop arguing in print and in person. Let us compare them on opposite wheels. We have done that already, under every condition. Over 5,000 S-V tires were tested out on trucks before we made this offer. We know to a certainty the results you'll get, barring accidents.

We have worked for eight years on this Truck Tire problem. We built 29 types before arriving at this one. We built 74 models of this S-V type before we attained this perfection.

We give you in it, as compared with others, 20 per cent more available tread rubber. The shape ends bulging, breaking or excessive grind. The compound minimizes friction.

The tire can't creep, as we press it on at a minimum of 50,000 pounds. It can't separate, for the tread, the backing and the rim are welded into lasting union.

GOODYEAR S-V Truck Tires

Go to a Goodyear Distributor or ask our local branch where you can get this warrant on the latest S-V tire. Accept it while the offer lasts. [238]

No. 5

Mr. Griffith was a former prospector and miner. Despite his lack of practical farming experience to start with, he has made good.

Arthur L. Griffith. His letter follows:

Western Securities Co.,
711 Hollingsworth Bldg.
Los Angeles, Calif.
Gentlemen:—

Alfalfa, sugar beets and hogs will make a farmer wealthy in this rich country. Hog raising is simple, because the climatic conditions are favorable, and the water is of exceptional purity.

The present price of land here is dirt cheap, in fact it is actually given away. All we really pay for is a perpetual water right, and the maintenance cost is exceptionally low. I shipped the first two carloads of hogs that ever went out from this section. I never farmed before in my life until I came to Pahvant Valley. I was formerly a machinist by trade, and also did prospecting and mining. My original investment here was $2300, and the increase in value of my farm has easily made me worth $8000. With a little energy you simply can't help succeeding in this country.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 19th day of December, 1914.

A. M. McPHERSON.
My commission expires Nov. 9th, 1918.

Pahvant Valley is on the main line of the Salt Lake Railroad in Southwestern Utah—under $1,000,000 irrigation system. Estimated annual cost of maintenance from 40 to 50 cents per acre.

$70 per Acre for Land and Perpetual (Gravity) Water Right. $25 an Acre Down. Balance in 10 Years.

Why pay $150 to $200 an acre for raw land with high priced water supply when Pahvant Valley lands under a great gravity irrigation system are obtainable at $70 an acre—land and perpetual water—the price is limited by the Government and the State of Utah?

Why pay high prices for land in an unsettled district? Pahvant Valley is a proven, settled farming country. A sugar beet crop alone will more than pay for the cost of your land and water right in one season. Twenty tons and over of sugar beets to the acre is an every year crop in the Pahvant Valley—selling under this year's contract at $4.75 per ton f.o.b. cars in the valley.

Charles A. McClain of Delta, Utah, who owns 160 acres in Pahvant Valley, says: "This land should go to $250 an acre when our beet sugar factory is completed." Our booklet containing sworn statements by Pahvant Valley farmers will be mailed upon request. It is filled with stories of success by practical men. You'll enjoy reading this booklet. LIQUOR PRICES UP IN LONDON.

Saturday Night Purchases for Sunday Come Higher.

Beer, Whisky and Brandy by Glass Cheap as Ever.

Lloyd George's Temperance Measures not Popular.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

LONDON, May 1, 9:20 p.m.—Those people of the British Isles who went today to purchase their supplies of wines and spirits for Sunday found that the prices had been increased, in proportion to the new taxes which the government proposes to levy in its effort to lessen drinking and increase the output of the munitions of war. The prices for whisky and brandy by the bottle had been increased by 50 cents, which meant a difference of $3 to those who purchased by the gallon.

The price of beer has not been affected, nor did whisky and brandy cost more when bought by the glass, except in a few places. Wines varied according to the class of the places where they were purchased.

Meanwhile protests from the trade continue. The Burton brewers, in a resolution adopted at a meeting today, declared that the surtax on the Burton output alone would amount to upwards of $30,000,000, and that it would prove destructive to the whole trade and throw thousands of men out of work, besides depriving shareholders of their capital.

Ireland would be particularly hard hit, for outside of whisky, the Irish breweries make a large part of the heavier beers consumed in the world and the tax on these would be very heavy.

Newspapers which a few weeks ago favored absolute prohibition oppose the new proposals, which they insist are unfair to the trade, unnecessary and would not achieve the desired object.

The bishop of London urged the public today to sacrifice drink for the general good.

Official figures of the time lost by the ironworkers of the Clyde and the northeastern coast of England, presumably because of the lure of drink, show that of those engaged in the mechanical equipment of the army and navy during the month of March, 34 per cent. worked under forty hours a week, including overtime. Virtually 50 per cent. worked less than forty-five hours a week. The ordinary number of hours worked in time of peace was fifty-two hours.

WOMAN MAYOR IS INAUGURATED.

Closes Two Poolrooms and Banishes Boxball Alley.

Then "I Hereby Appoint the Following Cabinet."

But a Man Objected and Now War's on in Warren.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WARREN (Ill.) May 1.—Seven minutes after Mrs. A. L. Canfield, Mayoress, took the oath of office today the village was as immaculate as an angel's robe. Here is what the Town Council, presided over by the State's first woman Mayor, did in seven minutes:

Ordered the immediate closing of the town's two poolrooms, banished a boxball alley and decreed that the shooting gallery leave town. Thus by unanimous vote was the iniquitous threatening head of sin lopped off.

With the banishment of sin, however, unanimity ceased and the town of Warren, through its duly elected representatives, set out to prove that to be good it is not necessary to be dull. After a prayer, Mayoress Canfield rose to her feet, 74 years old, gray of hair and quiet of mien. She stood as a mother might stand before her children.

"Gentlemen," she said, "I hereby appoint the following members of my Cabinet: Town Marshal, Floyd Hicks—"

Trustee James Wallace interrupted at this point.

"I object," he said. "There are some unopened applications for office on Madame President's desk; they should be read. I move that we vote on these applications, the one receiving the highest number of votes to be declared elected."

"I am Mayor of this city," retorted Mrs. Canfield. "There will be no election so far as my Cabinet is concerned. I will appoint and you will confirm and no last man of you will draw his pay until you do.

"Gentlemen, I am small, but don't you believe for a minute that there is any connection between my size and the amount of my determination. Let me give you a tip. You big boys had better be good."

Four of the boys are retired farmers. Two are business men; all are big-bodied and strong-lunged. The fight ended in a draw—at least that's what the Trustees called it. They have a slate of their own which they are determined to put through. Mrs. Canfield thinks otherwise. Two of the Mayor's appointees were confirmed—the Health Officer and the Superintendent of Waterworks. Both are holdovers. Selection of the remainder of the Cabinet was deferred. As a result Warren will be without a Town Marshal, a Street Commissioner and a Treasurer, until the Trustees meet next Thursday night.

REPORT A BATTLE NEAR IRAPUATO.

WASHINGTON, May 1.—The Villa agency here late tonight received a dispatch from Villa headquarters at Chihuahua reporting a battle said to have occurred yesterday between Villa forces and those of Gen. Obregon between Silao and Irapuato. The message was from Villa's Foreign Minister, and read as follows:

"I have just had a conference by wire with Medina Beitia, Gen. Villa's chief of staff, who reports that in a fight yesterday at San Cristobal and La Sauceda the enemy was repulsed and driven back ten miles from the last-named place with slight losses to us, though we cannot as yet give the precise number. In the center and on the left there was no fighting. The task of gathering the dead and wounded continues, as we had to dispose of more than 500 of the enemy's dead. Medina Beitia adds that he does not need more ammunition, as he captured more from the enemy than he expended. He also states that several officers from Gen. Fierro's command have just arrived at Leon, bringing wounded, who state that the enemy lost many horses and machine guns in the fighting, which lasted until nightfall."

VILLA FORCE MEETS DEFEAT.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

Miguel Samaniego, commanding a column of Carranza soldiers, has defeated a Villa force of 500 men near Campas, Sonora, 150 miles south of the American, according to a message received tonight by Gen. P. Elias Calles, Carranza commander at Agua Prieta, opposite here. No details were given.

REPORT GERMAN DEFEAT BY SOUTH AFRICAN TROOPS.

CAPE TOWN (via London) May 1, 11:55 p.m.—The following official statement regarding the operations in South Africa was issued today.

"Gen. McKenzie's mounted forces, which were designated to cut off the Germans, who, after the evacuation of Keetmanshop, retreated northward along the railway, inflicted serious defeat on them in the victory of Gibeon. The Union forces, by destroying the railway north of Gibeon, captured a whole railway train, a number of transport wagons, a great quantity of live stock, two field guns, several Maxims and 200 prisoners.

"The remnant of the German force, which was 800 strong, escaped owing to the rough ground obstructing the movement of the cavalry."

Szawle.

NORTHEASTERN ADVANCE A DELIGHT TO BERLIN.

[BY WIRELESS AND A. P.]

BERLIN, May 1 (by wireless to Sayville, N. Y.)—The German advance in the northeast is being hailed generally with expressions of satisfaction and surprise. Nothing was known of such a movement, although, judging by the fact that the troops already are over fifty miles from Memel, the march must have begun some days ago.

Local military experts point out that Szawle, where the fighting is proceeding, is to the east of the line between Kovno and Vilna, two points which are indispensable to the protection of the Vistula and Warsaw.

The fact that the troops had advanced so far without being discovered is commented upon as an indication that the scouting service of the Russians is no better today than it was during the Russo-Japanese war. It is declared here that the Russian commander faces the possibility of the cutting off of his line of communications unless he abandons the line of the river, or throws the invaders back.

There is a town called Shavil in the center of the Russian province of Kovno, about sixty miles from the frontier of East Prussia. The spelling Szawle probably is the German rendering of Shavil.

WAR BONUS, MORE PAY, BRITISH MINERS' DEMANDS.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, May 1.—D. A. Thomas of London, head of the Cambrian Combination and known as the British "coal king," just before sailing for Europe on the Lusitania today said he had received word of the deadlock in the negotiations between the British coal miners and owners.

More than 1,000,000 miners, Mr. Thomas said, had joined in the demands for more pay. They want a war bonus of approximately 20 per cent.

Languedoc.

THREE PERSONS KILLED AT FRENCH LAUNCHING.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

BORDEAUX (France) May 1, 1:25 p.m.—Three persons were killed here today in an accident in connection with the launching of the battleship Languedoc. The vessel left the ways with such speed that it stranded on the bank of the river. It struck and crushed a lighter, on board which the fatalities occurred.

The Languedoc probably will be released at high tide this evening. She is of the super-dreadnaught type of 24,830 tons. She carries twelve 13.4-inch guns, twenty-four 5.5-inch guns and six torpedo tubes.

MILLIONS AND MILLIONS UNITED STATES EXPORTS.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

Cushing.

AMERICAN SHIP DAMAGED BY GERMAN AIR BOMBS.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, May 1.—American Minister Van Dyke at The Hague reported to the State Department today that the American steamer Cushing from Philadelphia for Rotterdam was damaged by bombs dropped from German aircraft in the North Sea, but that no lives were lost.

The text of Minister Van Dyke's message was as follows:

"American Consul, Rotterdam, reports American steamship Cushing, Capt. Herland, with petroleum from New York to Rotterdam, flying American flag, was attacked by German aeroplanes near North Hinder lightship afternoon April 29. Three bombs dropped, one struck ship, causing damage, but no lives lost."

Secretary Bryan said the message would be forwarded to Ambassador Gerard in Berlin for his information. While Mr. Bryan did not say what instruction would be sent, it was presumed that the Ambassador would be directed to ask the German Foreign Office for any information bearing on the attack on the Cushing.

THE CHECKERBOARD OF THE WAR.

BY HARRY CARR.

PARTLY by good luck and partly through the kindness of an army friend, I drew a capital prize one day last week. A captain of the German staff, lately from the front and wearing the iron cross for his gallantry, was in Los Angeles "on a pleasure trip." He granted me an interview that lasted three hours, during the course of which he talked of the war with the utmost candor and frankness.

As his name would mean nothing to the readers of The Times and would add nothing to the force of his remarks, but on the contrary, would cause him considerable embarrassment, you will have to take my word for the authenticity of the whole incident.

The captain was apparently about thirty-three years old; spoke English a lot better than I do and had the polished manners of a man of the world. He said he was in civil life at the outbreak of the war and volunteered his services to the government. He was ordered at once to the front and, on account of a previous military service, which must have been one of distinction, was assigned to the staff of the commander of the Nineteenth Army Corps.

IN THE DRIVE.

He was in the drive through France. The corps with which he served was on the line directly in front of the town Vitry La France, which was an important heavy artillery post of the French army. After the battle of the Marne, he was in the trenches at various places in France. In October, his corps was suddenly detached and whirled up to the right flank of the army, going into the trenches near Lille. He was then detached from the army and began his "pleasure trip" in the United States.

These were some of the questions asked him and his replies thereto:

"Are these battles around Ypres a preliminary to an invasion of England?"

"No, I don't think so. We often talked of an invasion of England. Of course, we did not know what plans were in the minds of the Kaiser and his war council; but we came to the conclusion that these plans did not actually include an invasion of English soil by troops."

"Why not?"

"Two reasons: It would be too difficult to accomplish and because the same result could be accomplished in an easier way. An invasion of England from the continent is seriously involved with the problem of supplies. Even assuming that the Germans were able to get sufficient control of the English channel to hazard the sending of transports, it would not be possible to send more than 200,000 men. The transports could not handle more than that number on account of the large number of ships that would have to be used for the transport of horses, ammunition, food and other supplies.

"The same result would be accomplished by the capture of Calais as by an invasion of England. If Calais is taken by the Germans, I believe the cause of the allied armies will be hopelessly crippled. The German army is in possession of all that part of France in which are located the factories, the mines and a large part of the agricultural interests. This compels France to depend very largely upon England for her supplies and her ammunition. With the port of Calais in the hands of the Germany army, the door would be closed. It would be exceedingly difficult for England to get supplies to her own troops—not to mention the French. Also it would be next to impossible for England to land any more troops."

"Would it not be possible for England to send these supplies through Gibraltar and into France from the south?"

"Only by diverting a large part of her blockading fleet from the North Sea and thus opening the north coast of England to the danger of bombardment by the German fleet which would be released from Kiel."

WILL ENGLAND BE INVADED?

"Will there be an invasion of England by airships or battleship?"

"I don't know. The tightest secrets of the German War Office are the operations of the Zeppelins. Not even German officers are allowed near the airship sheds. It is generally believed that a Zeppelin raid of England is part of the programme."

"Would it not have been possible for the German army, in the early stages of the war, to have captured without a struggle these channel ports for which they are fighting so desperately?"

"That is undoubtedly true."

"Then why didn't they?"

"German strategy has been built on an entirely different theory. We do not try for cities or positions. Our theory is to at once seek out the hostile army wherever we can find it and give battle. The German theory is that, although the defensive is the stronger way of fighting, the only way to win wars is by a continual offensive. We could have captured Calais at the outbreak of the war, but we didn't because we found the French army somewhere else."

WHY THE RETREAT?

"Why did the German army, having found the French, retreat from Marne?"

"The English had developed too much force on our right flank; we found that the French position along the Vitry La France line was one of enormous strength; the French had constructed a series of heavy artillery positions with great cement platforms against which we were pressing. Lastly, we didn't know several vital facts about trench warfare that the war afterward taught us."

"What were these facts?"

"We know now that we could have dug trenches and held our position without retreating from the Marne."

"Why is it that the trenches were not anticipated as a feature of modern warfare?"

"They were anticipated; but it was not realized that the trenches would change the art of war so sweepingly. The war of today, at least as we saw it in the western theater, is a continual fortress warfare. I read in the newspapers with amusement that fortress warfare is a thing of the past. From today on it is all fortress warfare. The fortifications of Paris now begin at the Belgium borders. All of France, one may say, is one great fortress with earthworks backed by other earthworks. The battle of today is fought on the lines by which forts were attacked yesterday. From this point on the greatest point in the training of the soldier will be along the lines of scientific entrenching."

"Rather takes the romance out of war, does it not? Turning the dashing soldier into a ditch digger."

"We are not engaged in the war for the furthering of romance."

"Will trenches take the place of the great fortresses?

"It seems so to me. The Germans took the fortifications of Antwerp in twelve days; they were considered to be the last word in scientific fort building.

"But the Germans have not succeeded in taking the fortresses of Toul and Verdun."

THE SECRET OF VERDUN.

"Ah, but that is on account of the trenches—not on account of the fortresses. We have not been able, thus far, to get near enough to batter down the fortresses. The real secret of the resistance of the forts at Verdun is the wonderful way in which the French conceal their cannon. You advance upon what appears to be a plowed field deserted by some farmer; the field suddenly belches forth a storm of shells from a battery of heavy artillery completely buried in the earth. All you can see, on close examination, is what looks like the end of a stovepipe sticking slightly out of the ground, behind some plow furrow. These bateries are completely concealed from the aviators."

"Is that all you see in a battle?"

"That is more than you see in a battle. You see nothing in a modern battle—not even the shells that kill you. You lie on your stomach, facing what appears to be an empty and vacant landscape. When the order comes, you jump up and run forward over what appears to be an empty and peaceful field. You hear shells howling in the air and some of them kill the men around you."

"How do you know where to direct your aim?"

"The officers direct the men. If you are an enlisted man, you hear an officer tell you to aim, for instance, at the base of a line of innocent-looking trees in the distance. You aim there until you are killed. You probably do not see any one of the enemy during the battle."

"But the officers—for instance, you of the staff—you know what is going on."

"A little more; not much.

"We staff officers go to sleep in a hut, sleeping on the floor or a pile of straw. In one room is a big telephone exchange with military operators receiving reports from the battle line. In another room, sits the general with a big map drawn on oilcloth. As he orders the disposition of his troops, draftsmen paint in the position on the map with a sort of colored wash.

"At Vitry La France, we were ordered to advance with unloaded guns at 10 o'clock at night and we knew that we were expected to take the heavy batteries in our front with the bayonet. At 9 o'clock that night, we were ordered to 'Fall In' and we were marched in the opposite direction. Long afterward, we knew that the Battle of the Marne had been fought and that we were retreating."

"You were saved a horror. A bayonet charge must be horrible?"

THE HIDEOUSNESS OF IT.

"All of war is horrible. No one can see it and ever be the same again. Some of our men went insane on account of the dreadful sights they were forced to witness. A bayonet charge is hideous beyond description. Luckily there are not many of them. This feature has been misrepresented by lurid writers. I saw very few bayonet wounds. Most of the wounds were from rifle bullets and shell fragments. Most of the rifle bullets were in the face and the left arm—the parts of the body most exposed over the top of the trench. Many of the men are shot blind—lose their eyesight from the face wounds."

"How do the troops compare in efficiency?"

"The English are much the best troops that we meet. The Russians are brave but like children. On the eastern frontier they would run into our trenches at night to surrender, with their hands in the air. They were half starved. Our officer would ask them where their guns were.

"'We left them back in our trenches,' they answered.

"'Well,' said our officers, 'You could go right back and get those guns.' And they always ran back after their guns, then returned to surrender.

"The French are scientific soldiers and understand war. But they cannot—what do you American says?—stand the gaff. I have never seen French soldiers stand before a German charge.

"The native troops of the French army are like the camels in the Kipling poem—half devil and half child. They and the troops from India are simply babes in woods in a modern war. If it were not for the horrible atrocities the Turcos commit against our wounded, we would feel sorry for them. You see battlefields strewn with their dead. That any civilized nation should have descended low enough to have used these savages against us is an unthinkable crime.

"The British are terrible fighters. They are the equal of any soldiers in the world."

"What about their officers? They are said to be inefficient?"

"We have never found them to be so. Possibly they did not show as well as ours in the open fighting and maneuvering at the beginning of the war; but the battles in the trenches call for a high order of courage more than for scientific training."

"What about the feeling between the French and English armies?"

"There is an evident lack of harmony. The French seem to hate the English."

"Is there any prospect of France making peace with Germany independent of England?"

"I think when peace comes it will participated in by all the allies."

"Do you think that peace is near or far?"

"God knows. I hope with all my soul that it is not long. This war is too horrible to last. If Germany takes Calais, the war will be over before summer is gone. Of course, we Germans think that we will prevail in the attack upon Calais."

AS TO CONSTANTINOPLE.

"What about the attack upon Constantinople?"

"I think it will fail. The bombardment of the forts from warships has been a failure; the land attack has only proceeded to the outermost works and even this attack has taxed the resources of the allies. I don't see where they are to get any more troops to send against the Turks and the batties are certainly not making the attackers any stronger. They are losing men a long way from reinforcements; the Turks have abundant fighting forces near at hand for the purposes of reinforcement."

"But supposing that Constantinople does fall and that the English are thus able to send supplies to the Russian army?"

"I do not believe that is the primary object of the attack upon the Dardanelles. This attempt to attack Constantinople was made for the purpose of relieving a very serious pressure upon the British in Egypt."

"What is the condition of the Russian army?"

"It has been outmaneuvered by one of the most brilliant displays of strategy the world has ever seen. Napoleon was not as brilliant a soldier as Von Hindenburg has shown himself to be."

"Is the Russian army crushed beyond the possibility of further action?"

"I don't think so. It is short of supplies and badly beaten; the Czar of course has almost unlimited material for the building of new armies."

"Will the internal conditions in Russia permit him to build up new armies and send them to the front?"

"I don't know."

THE MAIN QUESTION.

"Do you feel that Germany will win or lose?"

"Candidly I don't see how Germany can lose. The French are about through. All her soldiers have been called out. The first English army that went to the front has been totally destroyed, from death, sickness or capture. The men Great Britain is sending to the front are replacing those who have gone. With her factories all in German hands, France must look to England for supplies; so must Russia. The English haven't enough of either men or supplies to fill the need.

I CURE PILES

Fistula and All Rectal Diseases

WITHOUT an OPERATION

By MY PAINLESS DISSOLVENT METHOD.

For twenty-five years I have been curing diseases of the rectum and lower bowel. During that time my experience as hospital and railroad surgeon, as college lecturer and professor, has enabled me to develop a method that is superior to others.

My method is not a "home cure" or a "correspondence treatment," but it is an application of skilled treatments administered under the most rigid antiseptic conditions in my office.

I solicit old, severe and obstinate cases of fistula, prolapsus, fissure and ulceration that have heretofore resisted all treatments employed. If you are a sufferer from rectal trouble I invite you to investigate my method thoroughly by talking or writing to any of my cured patients. If you will call at my office I will be pleased to give you the names and addresses of many well-known Los Angeles people I have cured, whom you may interview in regard to my treatment.

Read what a few well-known Southern California people have to say of my method. Many similar letters are on file in my office.

WELL-KNOWN SANTA MONICA MINISTER CURED.

This is to certify that Dr. C. H. White has cured me of a distressing hemorrhoidal ailment of 25 years' duration. His method of treatment is effective, but not severe. He has the appliances, the knowledge and the skill born of many years of specialization in this fruitful source of physical disease. He accomplishes all his claims in his advertising, and at reasonable expense.

I take pleasure in heartily commending the man and his methods.

WESLEY K. BEANS, Pastor First Methodist Episcopal Church, Santa Monica, Cal.

ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE SUPERINTENDENT CURED.

My Dear Mr. White: I am thankful for the privilege of bearing witness to your ability to treat, without pain, and with success, the delicate and disabling diseases which result from sedentary work. To all who need the services of a skillful, sympathetic and experienced specialist in your line, I heartily commend you.

Very sincerely yours,

ERVIN S. CHAPMAN, D.D., LL.D., Superintendent State Anti-Saloon League.

PRESIDENT OF WHITTIER COLLEGE CURED.

For more than ten years I was a sufferer from a painful affliction, which nearly ruined my usefulness as an organizer and teacher. Dr. C. H. White of Los Angeles has completely cured me by a process that was painless and rapid, and I desire to go on record as recommending the Doctor in diseases of his specialty.

Checkerboard of War.

soldiers in Germany who have not yet been called to the colors. The German population is so large that enough men come of military age every year to take the places of those who have fallen. If Germany is forced to take the defensive, the new warfare of the trenches has shown us that it will take three or four times as many assailants as there are defenders to conquer German territory. The allies lack the necessary preponderance of men."

"How about supplies and food?"

"That is a much more serious problem for the allies than for Germany. This war was a complete surprise to Germany. Our great wheat crop had just been sent away to the foreign markets (which shows how little we expected war) and we were temporarily embarrassed. Our next wheat crop will be kept at home. In addition to which we are harvesting great crops on French soil. Our line of battle was followed by German farmers with threshing machines and plows. They threshed the crops then standing on French farms and planted new ones which will soon be ripe. Food is almost as cheap as before the war in German cafes. As to copper and gasoline, we have found plenty of copper by working commercially unprofitable ore and in using the copper wire we found on the power lines in the French factory districts. German scientists have found eight substitutes for gasoline for running automobiles and have found various ways of developing saltpeter without importing it."

"In case Germany wins, what rewards will she demand?"

"Not the extravagant prizes that her enemies have reported. I think that the German government will be willing to give back part of Belgium, only retaining Flemish Belgium; this is the district in which Germany is the weakest from a military standpoint. German defenses and German commerce need the city of Antwerp. We must control the ocean harbors of the Rhine. Germany wants the Belgian and French colonies in the Congo. Germany also wants the right to colonize Asia Minor."

"In what way will this war change the science of soldiery?"

"At the end of this war, Germany intends to go before the congress of the nations and ask that a new rule of warfare be made which will prohibit all nations from waging war against merchant ships. The English, to the German mind, committed a horrible outrage in attacking merchant ships and in blockading our ports with the intention of starving innocent noncombatants. We Germans think that the fighting ought to be limited to soldiers."

"As to the science of soldiery, the use of cavalry will be modified. Hereafter, mounted troops will be nothing more than mounted infantry. Lances will be thrown away. The lance has outlived its usefulness as a weapon. As I have said, trench warfare will bring about new systems of training. I think nothing else will be much changed."

"How about the use of the aeroplane?"

"The aeroplane will be used in future as a scout. As a weapon of destruction, the aeroplane bomb is unavailing. The air ships fly too high to hit anything."

"What is the present feeling of Germany toward America?"

"The Germans have been wounded to the soul by the feeling shown by Americans. We didn't need the money, but we wondered why, as a simple matter of neutrality, some of these funds raised in America were not divided between German hospitals and French, instead of all being sent to the French and English.

"The horrible stories circulated about us have hurt us, too. One day I was looking for gasoline in a small town in France. The Mayor from whom I offered to buy the fuel directed me to a garage where he thought some might have been left. We went to the place in a motor. As we came up, we were attracted by the sound of women weeping in the next house. Thinking someone might be in trouble, we knocked at the door. After some pause, the door opened and the women came out, falling on their knees in an attitude of prayer. One woman, with tears streaming down her cheeks, begged us to kill her, but to spare her children. Perfectly bewildered, we asked what was the matter with the children and why they were to be killed.

"'Oh,' she cried, 'They tell us that you kill all the children you can find. You can kill me if you like, but spare my little ones.' I happened to have some candy in my pocket and gave it to the children and patted them on the head and we all made friends."

Ship's Crew Saved.

best seamanship I ever saw was displayed in getting the lifeboat aboard the steamer American without smashing it. It was damaged some, but it reached the deck, and none was hurt.

The steamer American accomplished a double rescue last night, the immigration ocean launch Capo di Anno being in distress close by the Victoria. Inspector Jack and Engineer Dave Main comprised the Capo di Anno's company.

"Our engine was running," the inspector said, "but our steering gear had broken down and we had lost two anchors and our lifeboat. There seemed to be no chance of saving the Capo di Anno or of saving ourselves if we remained aboard it, so we climbed into the American's boat and cast the Capo di Anno adrift. It was the worst experience I ever had."

The Victoria was an old Puget Sound steamer, 104 feet long, built twenty-one years ago. It was reconstructed at Guaymas and placed under the Mexican flag. For several years it has plied between San Diego and Ensenada for the Compania Naviera del Pacifico.

GREAT WIRELESS STATION.

[Windsor Magazine:] When the news came, shortly after the declaration of war with Germany, that we had seized Lome and occupied part of the Togo hinterland, people not unnaturally asked why. The reason is not far to seek. A few miles north of the railhead at Atakpame, at a place called Kamina, there is situated the biggest wireless station in the world outside Europe. From it communication could be kept up with Nauen, just outside Berlin, 3450 miles distant, with the other German wireless stations in the Cameroons, and at Windhuk, in German Southwest Africa, as well as with Tabora, in German East Africa, and with the Palaos on Caroline Islands. The big station at Kamina was, in fact, a receiving and distributing center for messages from Berlin. Through it, also, German ships in those waters could be warned, and German cruisers instructed. By seizing it we paralyzed the wireless heart of Germany in Africa.

Less than three years ago this immense wireless station had no existence. Kamina itself was just an ordinary African bush village, with bush all round it—a dense, scrubby tropical jungle, uninhabited and uninhabitable. Then there came along a corps of German surveyors and artificers. Roads were cut, a temporary light railway was built from the permanent railhead, and a big square space was cleared in the heart of the wilderness.

Thousands of natives were impressed for the work. They came from the most distant parts, shepherded by black soldiers, naked Gourma people from the northwest, fierce and wild-looking; stalwart Konkombwa from the south-central region pagan Kabre and Tamberma mountaineers from the far northeast; Dagomba and Tschokossi from the Togoland Sudan and many others. All these were forced to labor under the provisions of the native tax act, by which so many days' work may be exacted by the government each year in lieu of a money payment.

When completed, the installation comprised a power-house, receiving and dispatching rooms, strongly built stone houses for the officials, and no fewer than nine great steel towers, varying in height from 250 feet to more than 400 feet. It has only just been finished.

When "Reuter's" Started.

[London Chronicle:] "Reuter's," which is celebrating its jubilee, had a curious beginning. Baron Reuter long nursed an idea for organizing the supply of foreign news in identical terms to all the newspapers, but editors gave him no encouragement. At last he determined to risk things, and arranged with correspondents all over Europe. When their messages began to come in he took them round personally to the newspaper offices and offered them for nothing, on condition that his name should be printed against them. "Try them for von month," he urged. "If they not satisfy you, vell, to you it signify nothing." One editor after another did try them, with such results that when Reuter broached the subject of subscription rates his demands were readily complied with.

The Ways of the Camel.

[London Chronicle:] "The camel," says an oriental proverb, "curses its parents when it has to go uphill and its maker when it goes down." Still, this is hardly to be wondered at, for it is a well-established fact that even young camels never play. They are born sad, and thereafter their life is one protest against being made to work, although work has been their portion since the beginning of the memory of man. How largely they have been domesticated from the earliest times we know from the state-

ANOTHER SWITCH BY RAE TANZER.

Now Says James W. Osborne is Man Who Jilted Her.

Milliner Regrets the Trouble She Brought Friends.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

NEW YORK BUREAU OF THE TIMES, May 1.—"I am sure now that James W. Osborne is the man I knew last fall as Oliver Osborne. I couldn't change my mind again if I tried, and I don't want to, for I am perfectly happy now for the first time since I brought suit. I am not afraid. They may put me in prison, but at least I shall know that I have told the truth all the way through. I almost feel that I deserve punishment for the trouble I have brought to my sisters and my friends, especially the Slade brothers, who are honest as the daylight."

This statement was made today by Miss Rae Tanzer, the young milliner who sued James W. Osborne for alleged breach of promise to marry, asking $50,000 damages and later withdrew the suit, saying she had sued the wrong man. Her statement today was made under oath.

"I became convinced that James W. Osborne, the ex-District-Attorney, was my Oliver through a chain of coincidences," continued Miss Tanzer. "It started with a clerk at the Hotel Netherlands, where I went because Oliver had said he lived there. The clerk said 'No, we have no Oliver Osborne, but we have a James W. Osborne who comes here very often.'

"'What does he look like?' I asked.

"'He is tall and well built, with gray hair.'

That seemed like the man I had known.

"Then I went to the New York Athletic Club, where the same thing happened. I began to be sure that Oliver had given me the wrong name to deceive me.

"When I made up my mind that he had deceived me I thought only of revenge. I insisted upon bringing suit against him in spite of the advice of all my friends and my employer that James W. Osborne was a very powerful man. I didn't want his money. I wanted only revenge.

"I never saw him again until the day I was waiting for bail in Commissioner Houghton's office. He came in while I was sitting there. He looked different. He was stooping and drawn looking. It seemed like another person. 'My God, I've accused the wrong man,' I cried. I was positive it was not he. I went straight to my brother and he took me to Mr. Spielberg. I wish I could make it plain that I was sincere all the time."

SWAT THE RAT.

Man's Greatest and Most Wily Enemy Should be Fought by Scientists Same as Diseases.

In the current issue of Farm and Fireside, the national farm paper published at Springfield, Ohio, Herbert Quick, the editor, writes an editorial entitled "On With the Rat-Killing!" in which he gives many interesting facts about rats and other dangers as enemies to man:–

"The city of Philadelphia is appropriating $10,000 to be used in 'exterminating' the rats of the city. They are feared as carriers of bubonic plague.

"Ten thousand dollars is not enough. It will finance an annoyance to the rats, and that is about all.

"If we could give rat-killing a high-sounding name, perhaps we could enlist in the work the able men who should devote their lives to it.

"The matter should be studied much more carefully than heretofore. It should receive some such general attention from institutions of learning as that now given to insect pests, sprays, and fungicides.

"Rat extermination should be a profession in which an educated man might engage, feeling that it leads to honors and emoluments. Every secret of the rat's life should be bared. His weaknesses should be studied.

"Too long have we waited for some Pied Piper to come along and pipe the rats into the river. The human race seems to have made much progress since the days of witchcraft and magic, but the rat race has flourished still more.

"The greatest enemy of man is man, and next to him, perhaps the rat.

"He is incredibly cunning. He can live in any climate. He sails the sea in ships. He forages in the open fields or burrows through walls and intrudes into the home.

"Man himself is no hardier than the rat, and in the matching of wits against wits the rat has up to this time been the victor. He augments every famine in the world.

"If the depredations of rats could be prevented the cost of living would certainly be lowered. Active as he is in famine, the rat's most spectacular co-operation with death lies in his copartnership with pestilence.

"The study of method for the extermination of rats should be financed on some basis which will make it permanent. It is a fight which has not as yet been edequately waged, notwithstanding the fine abilities of the doctors who are fighting the rat in combating bubonic plague. The business needs specialists."

BREVITY OF ENGLISH LANGUAGE.

Publication of Exact Translations Show That the English Report is Invariably Finished First.

[Manchester Guardian:] At the international road congress last year the reports of all the sections were printed in parallel columns in French, German and English, the three versions being exact translations of each other. The English report invariably finished first, sometimes it won by a whole page. As a rule the French report was the most diffuse. This brevity of English is partly explained by the fact that English is made up to an extraordinary extent of words of one syllable. Its nouns having (unlike the German) lost all their inflections except the possessive "s," have become mere roots, a very large proportion of the monosyllabic. In Germany a monosyllabic root practically always gets an extra syllable tacked on by way of case-ending. In the second place English has little of the elaborate and explicit machinery of structure that French has, so it saves space in prepositions and such paraphernalia. Instead English has what the grammarians call incipient agglutination—that is, sticking words together in groups without either prepositions or case-endings to connect them. An example of the former kind of brevity is a word like "earthquake," two syllables, compared with the German "erdeben," three syllables, and the French "tremblement de terre," five syllables. An example of the terseness of English would be a phrase like "I have been to the house and have now come back;" every word a single syllable. In a telegram this would be just as intelligible in the form "Been house, now back." You cannot carry that sort of thing far in any other European language.

GALLIPOLI PENINSULA CLEARED OF INVADERS.

BERLIN (by wireless to Sayville, N. Y.) May 1.—Included in the news items given out today by the Overseas News Agency is the following dispatch dated Constantinople:

"The French soldiers who landed on the Asiatic side of the Dardanelles all have been expelled. The Gallipoli peninsula also has been cleared of the invaders except at Gaba Tepeh point, where the landing detachment under cover of the guns of the warships is tenaciously maintaining its position on the coast. A terrific bombardment by the allied fleet April 27 and 28, killed or wounded a few Turkish officers and soldiers while the allies lost several thousand in dead and wounded.

"In addition to the French armored cruiser Jeanne d'Arc the British battleships Majestic, Triumph and Vengeance were partly set on fire. Aided by tenders they slowly returned to the Island of Tenedos. They were severely damaged. Several transports and destroyers also were sunk.

[Note: The foregoing is very similar to a Constantinople dispatch received yesterday by way of London. It contains the names of the battleships which were not mentioned in the other communication.]

MEXICANS ON THE COAST MUST LET SHIPS ALONE.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON BUREAU OF THE TIMES, May 1.—Through the intercession of Col. D. C. Collier of San Diego the State Department has sent a request to both the Carranza and Villa leaders along the west coast of Mexico to cease interfering with the ships of the American-Mexican Steamship and Trading Company. The steamer Benito Juarez of this line has been detained for several weeks by the Carranzistas at Acapulco on various pretexts.

Gen. Carranza, at the instance of the State Department, is understood to have issued orders eight days ago for the release of the ship, but no word has been obtained from Mexico as to whether the steamer has been alliowed to sail. The ships of the American-Mexican line are now under American registry and ply along the west coast of Mexico and South America.

BREAD LINE ESTABLISHED IN COLON'S TENT CITY.

COLON, May 1.—The City of Colon, half of which was destroyed by fire yesterday, presented a scene of desolation today. According to the police records, ten persons lost their lives, and many were injured. The loss is estimated at $2,000,000.

Countless persons are homeless and are wandering about the streets. Business is almost at a standstill, although merchants are making an effort to resume. Bread lines have been established and the homeless women and children are being cared for as far as possible. A huge tent city to shelter them has been erected under the auspices of the American military authorities.

Gen. Clarence R. Edwards, military commander of the Canal Zone, has ordered two more companies of infantry on patrol duty to prevent looting, and a trainload of supplies. As the largest importers of foodstuffs were located in the burned area, there is a perceptible shortage of supplies, which, however, are being augmented from the canal commissariat department.

UNIONITE'S CASE GOES TO JURY.

Death or Freedom of Larson His Attorney's Demand.

Declare He Tried to Quiet the Men at Ludlow.

State Eulogizes Bravery of Small Deputy Band.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

TRINIDAD (Colo.) May 1.—The fate of John R. Lawson is in the hands of twelve ranchers and business men of Las Animas county. The case in which the noted union labor leader is charged with the murder of John Nimmo went to the jury tonight. Nimmo, a deputy sheriff, was killed October 25, 1913, in one of the battles which featured the recent strike of Colorado coal miners.

The case was submitted to the jury at the end of the summing up by Norton Montgomery, Assistant Attorney-General.

The day was taken up with arguments of attorneys after Judge Granby Hillyer had delivered his instructions to the jury. Statements were made for the State by Frank West and Norton Montgomery; for the defense by Horace N. Hawkins, Edward P. Costigan and Fred W. Clark.

The attorneys for the prosecution argued that their evidence had proved that the strikers started the battle of October 25, 1913, and that Lawson was in command of the strikers, and was at the Colorado and Southeastern Railroad cut when Nimmo was shot. The theory propounded by the defense on the other hand was that the battle was started by deputy sheriffs, and that Lawson, instead of inciting to riot, tried to calm the men and women in the Ludlow tent colony.

EFFORT OF STATE.

Attorney West, arguing for the State, deprecated efforts, which he said had been made to give the impression that corporation interests were behind the prosecution of Lawson. He declared the case was brought by the Attorney-General of the State on the complaint of a resident of Las Animas county.

The Assistant Attorney-General expressed admiration for the bravery of the small party of deputies in resisting, he said, an attack by a vastly superior force of strikers.

West closed his argument by asking the jury to impose the death penalty if Lawson should be found guilty of murder in the first degree.

Horace N. Hawkins, in his argument, paid tribute to the character of Lawson, declaring that "if there was a stain or blemish in his whole life the Baldwin-Felts detective agency would have ferreted it out and spread it before you."

Referring to the testimony of two detectives, Snyder and Murphy, he shouted:

"Somebody is hiring these detectives to go on the stand and try to swear John R. Lawson's life away."

BELITTLES TESTIMONY.

Hawkins belittled the testimony introduced by the prosecution. "When the State—or perhaps I should say the State—when the prosecution which makes its headquarters at the coal company offices, had finished its case, I thought it had made no case at all. If this had been an ordinary trial I would have been content to submit the case without presenting evidence. But this is not an ordinary case. The trial of John R. Lawson is a trial of the rights of labor to oppose oppression, and I believed it only fair to the public and the labor cause to present the truth in this vital matter."

Hawkins declared the course of the bullet through Nimmo's legs showed he had not been shot by strikers in the railroad cut, but by some person to his right, presumably a deputy sheriff or mine guard.

Fred W. Clark, continuing the argument for the defense, challenged the jury to free Lawson or hang him.

"The Assistant Attorney-General asked you to hang John R. Lawson," he said. "I take up his challenge. I don't want any manslaughter verdict. I want John R. Lawson to go forth from this courtroom a free man, or I want you to return a verdict of first degree murder and fix the penalty at death."

A NEW STEEL.

Strength of the Metal Can be Enormously Increased During the Process of Its Making.

[Chicago Journal:] Prof. A. A. Michelson has discovered that the strength of steel can be increased enormously by subjecting it to a series of twisting strains. The rationale of the process is rather confusing to unprofessional minds, but the fact seems beyond question. Such a discovery reopens at once the old contest between fort and gun, between the irresistible force and the immovable post. If claims for the new metal be true, then a turret of twisted steel would hold out for weeks against even forty-two-centimeter cannon, instead of crumbling in hours or minutes. On the other hand, what monster guns may not be contrived of a substance two or three times stronger than the best material hitherto known.

In peace, most happily, the new process of steel making need lead to no such destructive rivalries. The first thing to do is to put the discovery on a commercial basis. That done, a new world is opened. Rails need no longer chip and break under present strains, or even under greater ones—a fact which should increase the efficiency of railroads while lessening their maintenance charges. Automobiles, likewise, should be cheapened and strengthened; skyscrapers made lighter and yet firmer; we should have more stable aeroplanes, more seaworthy ships.

It is peace that gives the permanent victories. One discovery like this affects the human race more broadly than many battles.

Knew Result of Falling.

[Pittsburgh Dispatch:] The schoolmaster wanted to know whether the boys had an understanding of the functions of a consulate.

"Supposing," he began, framing his question in the likeliest way to arouse the interest of his hearers, "supposing someone took you up in an aeroplane, and after a long, exciting flight dropped you down thousands of miles from home, in a country quite foreign, what place would you seek out first of all?"

An eager hand was instantly lifted.

"Well, Willie, what do you say?"

"Please, sir, the hospital."

BIG STORE IS IN NEW HANDS.

Two San Francisco Men Buy Ville de Paris.

Deal Said to Involve Half-million Dollars.

Purchasers Owners of Large Interests Elsewhere.

A deal that, it is understood, will approximate $500,000 was consummated yesterday when B. F. Schlesinger and C. W. Steines of San Francisco bought from George Fusenot and Mrs. Germaine Fusenot the Ville de Paris, the large Broadway department store. Mr. Schlesinger arrived in this city yesterday morning and was closeted with Mr. Fusenot all of the afternoon, completing arrangements for the transfer.

At the close of the conference it was announced no change would be made in the policy of the store, everything continuing as during the past eighteen years. Although no definite figure was given, it is tacitly understood the deal involves nearly $500,000.

The Ville de Paris was founded eighteen years ago by Fusenot & Verdier. Auguste Fusenot, senior member of the firm, was the father of Mrs. Germaine Fusenot and uncle of her husband, George Fusenot. A few years after the founding of the store, Mr. Verdier withdrew from the firm and it became known as "A. Fusenot & Co."

When Auguste Fusenot died, his estate passed to his widow and after her death to their only child, Mrs. George Fusenot. Her husband assumed active charge of the establishment, becoming part owner.

Mr. Schlesinger and Mr. Steines, the new proprietors, are well known throughout the country in the department store business. They are principal stockholders in the Emporium, the large San Francisco store, and are said to have holdings in large stores of Chicago and other cities.

Mr. Schlesinger declined to give out any statement yesterday afternoon. He left for the north last night. Mr. Steines would say only, "It was purely a matter of investment on our part," when seen at his home in the Bay City.

It is understood the affairs of the San Francisco store will not be affiliated with the Ville de Paris. In fact, on the surface, there will be no change perceptible, the store on Broadway continuing its business as if nothing had occurred, it is said.

CONCEIVES VAST DEFENSIVE ARMY.

THAT WOULD DO GOVERNMENT'S WORK IN PEACE TIME.

Conservation Expert Tells City Club How Million Men Could Build Roads, Improve Harbors and Reclaim Lands and Yet be Ready to Fight on Short Notice.

An army of peace of 1,000,000 men to do the work of the government and to be available on forty-hours' notice as a mobile army to repel invasion, is the conception outlined to the City Club yesterday by George H. Maxwell, irrigation and conservation expert. This vast army proposed by Mr. Maxwell would, in his opinion, solve the problem of military protection, while building the roads of the country, completing the various reclamation projects and working out a system of river and harbor improvements now being carried on by the various departments of the government in a way that the speaker regards as inefficient and impractical.

Reviewing some of the horrors of the European war, Mr. Maxwell said the destruction of property is by no means greater than the destruction of the resources of the United States through the invasions of nature each year. Therefore, he argued, the United States should spend at least as much each year for protection against these invasions of nature as it spent for protection against invasions by foreign nations which may never come.

Citing the present defenses of the United States and classifying them as worse than useless, the speaker said that at the present time Japan has four battleships with fourteen-inch guns on the Pacific, while the United States navy has only two battleships with guns of the range—and both are on the Atlantic and [illegible] there. The only proper protection from invasion, he says, is an adequate mobile land force and this should be at least 1,000,000 men.

A standing army of that size, said Mr. Maxwell, is out of the question, but an army of 1,000,000 men working to conserve the resources of the country under civil direction, could be trained under a system such as that adopted by Switzerland. Then, this immense army in time of need could be turned over to the War Department in two days, fully armed, trained and equipped for the best of service.

By the adoption of this plan, Mr. Maxwell said, the Federal government could build roads spanning the country in every way, care for the forests and reclaim the deserts and eventually attain the ideal of reclamation, when not a drop of water would be lost from use by escaping at flood times.

Dr. Francis B. Kellogg, the new president of the club, presided for the first time and named a programme committee, including H. H. Harris, M. Lissner, Dana Barker and Myron Westover. A resolution of sympathy because of the death of W. P. Bryant, presented by Dr. W. A. Lamb, was adopted and Dr. Kellogg and J. J. Andrews were named to attend the funeral as official representatives of the club.

ANNOUNCEMENT

Savings Investment Club

OF THE

Continental National Bank

Los Angeles, Cal.

Many people have the false impression that a National Bank will accept only large deposits in TERM and SAVINGS accounts and that it does not cater to the buyer of bonds in amounts less than a thousand dollars.

The Continental National Bank in order to encourage those who are endeavoring to build up a savings account, have evolved a plan which will place even those who are able to save but a small amount, in a position to earn more than 4 per cent interest.

As a member of our SAVINGS INVESTMENT CLUB you may deposit $1.00 per week—or we will allow 4 per cent. interest per annum on your weekly deposits and when you have the sum of $50.00 to the credit of your account, will lend you $50.00. This amount ($100.00) will enable you to purchase a bond (to be held as security for your loan) which will yield a higher rate of interest. Your weekly deposits are to be continued at 4 per cent. per annum interest until you have sufficient amount to pay off your loan. We will then deliver to you your $100.00 bond which has been drawing you interest from time of purchase.

Or you can become a member of a CLUB in which you make weekly deposits of $2.00, $5.00, $10.00, or more, and purchase a $500.00 or $1000 bond. We will be glad to show you in figures how this plan will increase the earning power of your savings.

This bank buys California State, County and Municipal bonds in large amounts for the investment of its own funds and offers a part of them for sale to its customers. Each issue is examined with the greatest care and is recommended only after a searching investigation.

FIRST OF MAY BRINGS STRIKES.

Thirty-two Thousand Men are Idle in City of Chicago.

Pittsburgh Union Bricklayers Demand Raise in Wages.

No Revolutionary Outbreak in Paris this Year.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

CHICAGO, May 1.—May 1 was ushered into Chicago today with the most serious labor situation in the building industry in fifteen years. By the addition of 1200 bridge and structural ironworkers, the list of union working men on strike or locked out was swelled to 32,200. The strike of the ironworkers forced idleness upon 5000 others in allied trades, bringing the number of idle because of strikes and lockouts up to 125,000. The strike of the carpenters is said to be the keystone of the whole situation.

ALL QUIET IN PARIS.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

PARIS, May 1.—May day, which in the past in Paris has been marked by revolutionary or socialistic manifestations, was observed quietly today. There were a number of gatherings of people, but everything was orderly.

STRIKE IN PITTSBURGH.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

PITTSBURGH (Pa.) May 1.—For the first time since 1892, union bricklayers today laid down their tools to enforce a demand for increased wages. They have been receiving 70 cents an hour and struck for an eight-hour day at $6. About 1200 men are affected.

RAILROADERS DISSATISFIED.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

CHICAGO, May 1.—Disapproval of the arbitration award made last night to 64,000 locomotive engineers, firemen and hostlers employed on ninety-eight railroads west of Chicago, was expected today by W. S. Stone, Grand Chief Engineer of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers.

"The engineers have gained practically nothing by the award," Mr. Stone said.

Japan's Extreme Fairness.

[Leslie's:] Any sentimental objections raised to further Japanese participation in the war, on the ground that the Japanese are not of the white race, should have no weight with thinking people. Japan has demonstrated not only in the little part she has taken in the present war, but in her life and death conflict with Russia, that she observes the rules of warfare, at least as well as any of the Christian nations. Today, while enemy aliens are impounded in prison camps in all of the warring countries, Japan allows Germans and Austrians, resident in her territory, to go about their business without restraint. German professors still retain their chairs in the Imperial University at Tokio, and the salaries of several German reservists employed by the Japanese government, who left Japan before her entry into the war, for the purpose of joining their commands, are being paid to their families who remain in Japan. These may be extreme instances of courtesy to an enemy which could not be maintained if Japan were more deeply embroiled than she has been, but they are also an evidence of that samurai spirit which still survives in Japan as the last remnant of military chivalry, which entered its decline with the invention of gunpowder.

HUNT ASSAILANT OF LITTLE GIRL.

POLICE FROM EVERY STATION IN CITY ON TRAIL.

Five-year-old Found Weeping in Vacant House After Swooning When Seized by Strange Man. Tapped on Window with Nickel to Decoy Her, She Says.

Lured into a vacant house at No. 1945 Park Grove avenue early yesterday afternoon by a strange man, little Helen McBride, 5 years old, of No. 1985 Park Grove avenue, was assaulted and left in an unconscious condition. The child was discovered by a passer-by who heard her crying just after 6 o'clock last night.

When questioned by the police the child declared that while on her way home from a trip to a corner store she heard some one rap on a window in a empty house. A man then ran from the building and caught her. The stranger, the girl declared, carried her to a room of the house. The child did not know how long she had lain in the house when she came to her senses.

Officers from every police station in the city were rushed to the scene and searched the neighborhood for blocks about, but were unable to find any trace of the girl's assailant. According to neighbors a stranger, well dressed and young, has been seen about the vacant house for several days. The little girl was unable to give the police any discription of the man.

While she lay on a bed in her home little Helen told the police a stranger had first attracted her attention with a nickel with which he tapped on the window. The child declared she stopped when the stranger tapped on the window, but would not enter. The fellow then, according to Helen, ran from the building and seized her. She said he placed his hand over her mouth so she was unable to cry out.

Before the child lost consciousness after being taken into the vacant house, she says, she heard several persons walk by, but was unable to make a sound. She told the police she had never seen her assailant before yesterday afternoon.

DUVAL WEST TO REPORT ON MEXICO THIS WEEK.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, May 1.—Administration officials are awaiting with interest the return to Washington of Duval West, President Wilson's personal representative in Mexico, who sailed from Vera Cruz today for Havana and will reach here next week.

Secretary Bryan said today the State Department had received several letters from Mr. West, giving incomplete reports of his inquiries and conferences with leaders of rival Mexican factions. These letters, however, left much to be disclosed in the full report which Mr. West will make to the President.

Mr. West has had personal interviews with Gens. Carranza, Villa and Zapata and many of their supporters and administration officials are keenly interested in his report.

Today's advices to the State Department indicate an impending battle near Aguascalientes between the forces of Gens. Villa and Obregon. The latter was said to be advancing from Celaya toward Aguascalientes, where Gen. Villa is reorganizing a force, now reported to total 35,000 men.

Villa's agents here claim that he is nearly ready to engage Obregon's forces.

A dispatch from Vera Cruz to the Carranza agency here said a special commission sailed yesterday from that port for the United States to study American laws regulating oil development and business in Oklahoma, Texas and California.

VILLA'S FIRST SUCCESS.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

EL PASO (Tex.) May 1.—A series of minor skirmishes between the forces of Gens. Villa and Obregon, operating between Aguascalientes, the present Villa headquarters, and Iraquato, the Obregon base, culminated in a sharp fight Thursday in which the Villa adherents were victorious, according to an official Villa statement received here last night. The statement said that 600 Carranza and 140 Villa soldiers were killed in the battle between two Villa brigades and the Obregon advance near Trinidad. Obregon's troops are said to have retired to Silca.

According to statements by persons arriving here from Aguascalientes, Gen. Angeles, commander of the Villa artillery, has moved his cannon as far south as Leon, about midway between Aguascalientes and Iraquato.

ANGELENO KNIGHTS PARADE IN UNIFORM.

BAKERSFIELD, May 1.—Two hundred and fifty Knights of Pythias from Los Angeles, San Diego and south of the Tehachepi joined with a mighty host of Knights from the two temples in Bakersfield and the temple from Taft filled the city today for the institution of the new temple of the Knights of Khorassan, the first established in the San Joaquin Valley. The southern delegation arrived by special train and will return home tomorrow. With them came the uniformed patrol of Al Borak Temple, Los Angeles.

There were seventy-five candidates for initiation into the Dokk. During the day persons witnessed some remarkable stunts on the streets, as the appearance of four candidates in chains of others selling papers and other strange weird performances.

The grand parade started at 6:30 o'clock, led by Mayor Gribble, City Manager Williams and the City Councilmen. In line were combined beauty and comedy. More than 500 were in line with many auto floats, two bands, one brought by Al Borak temple from Los Angeles.

The Los Angeles uniformed patrol led the march. The Pythian sisters were also in force in the parade and had two beautiful floats in line. Notwithstanding the chilly weather and light showers the affair was a success. After the parade the Los Angeles drill team countermarched on Chester avenue and gave a series of fancy evolutions.

Last night the Knights of Pythias initiated a large class of candidates and fifty esquires were made Knights. A grand banquet was also given by the local lodges.

J. C. Kolfi of Al Borak Temple, Los Angeles, was in charge of the initiatory work. Fred Williams and Chester Stanburry of Los Angeles, Imperial Palace officers, installed the new temple. Other officers participating are W. W. Austin, H. W. [illegible], J. W. Cullerton, Dr. T. J. [illegible], C. Crawford, John S. Myers, [illegible] Roth, Charles Adolf, M. M. [illegible] and a host of others from Los Angeles and San Diego.

The Sebastian Case.

PRATT DENIES GIRL'S STORY.

Declares Faith in His Wife, Who is Accused,

And Sets up Alibi for Her on Mooted Date.

May Call Miss Desparte and Judge to Testify.

Flatly contradicting Edith Serkin, accuser of Chief Sebastian, and expressing the utmost confidence in his wife, Mrs. Lillian Pratt, co-defendant with the Chief on a charge of imorality, A. B. Pratt, sheep buyer, testified for the defense yesterday. When he left the stand he had given testimony that conflicted with the stories related by Miss Serkin, Mrs. Oliveras, Mrs. Carroll, all sisters, and Cecil Lewis, Mrs. Pratt's chauffeur. He will resume his testimony tomorrow morning. Chief Sebastian will take the stand in his own defense in the afternoon. Mrs. Pratt will follow the Chief.

Mr. Pratt's testimony was given in support of his wife as it pertained to her particular half of the case, and also to corroborate Gen. J. O. Royer, former Police Commissioner Owen and two police chauffeurs, who testified the Chief was in Anaheim June 9, 1914, one of the dates mentioned by Edith Serkin. Mr. Pratt stated that on that date he was at home with his wife and Edith Serkin. He said they had a birthday cake together and remained at home all that evening. Miss Serkin testified she and Mrs. Pratt met the Chief in room 17 that night and that the Chief gave her a "little blue watch' and to Mrs. Pratt a lavalliere.

EMPLOYS NOTES.

Refreshing his memory from expense accounts and various documents which are kept by his employer, the witness was able to give specific dates when he was in the city. He declared he was in Los Angeles Christmas Eve, 1914, one of the dates mentioned by Miss Serkin as the occasion of a visit to the Arizona lodging-house. Mr. Pratt stated that "my wife was not out of my sight ten minutes during the entire evening."

"I arrived in Los Angeles December 24, last, at 4:30 o'clock," said Mr. Pratt. "I was met by Cecil Lewis, Edith Serkin and my wife. We went directly home, arriving about 5 o'clock. We ate dinner together and in the evening went shopping downtown. We started for home about 10:30 o'clock. Neither Edith nor Mrs. Pratt was out of my sight more than ten minutes."

He declared he never had received four telephone calls from any person or persons who hung up the receiver when he answered the calls. This is a denial of the testimony of Edith Serkin and Cecil Lewis that about the middle of March, last year, they telephoned the Pratt residence at the request of Mrs. Pratt from a drug store at First street and Broadway, and got responses from Mr. Pratt, but they hung up the receiver without speaking. They said Mrs. Pratt asked them to telephone to find out if Mr. Pratt was in town. Later, they testified, Mrs. Pratt joined them at the drug store and half an hour later Mr. Pratt came rushing in and accused his wife of being with the chief. Mr. Pratt said he never was in the drug store mentioned and that no such incident ever occurred.

ANOTHER DISCREPANCY.

Mr. Pratt testified that he and Mrs. Pratt did not move to the Streeter apartments until December 26, 1913. Miss Serkin said the Chief visited Mrs. Pratt at the Streeter apartments the evening of December 13, that year. Attorneys for the defense declare Mr. Pratt's testimony is of the greatest importance.

When Dist.-Atty. Woolwine was asked to give his opinion of the testimony, he replied:

"He will be pie for us Monday. You notice he admitted he was out of town the night of December 19, 1913, the night Miss Serkin fixed the date of her visit to the lodging-house because 'it was the night Bundy was killed.'"

Dr. W. R. Prather, proprietor of the Adams Springs Hotel, testified that June 19, 1913, the night Miss Serkin said she first met the Chief in the lodging-house, Mr. and Mrs. Sebastian were registered at the hotel and remained three days and nights. He produced the register. He was not cross-examined. Mr. Woolwine stated later in the day that the prosecution would stipulate that the Chief was not in Los Angeles June 19, 1913. He said Miss Serkin later testified it was on December 19, 1913, "the night Bundy was killed," that she first met the Chief.

Victoria Desparte may be called as a witness for the defense. The Chief is accused of contributing to her dependency. She is in the County Jail charged with perjury in connection with her testimony before the grand jury. She confessed she did not tell the truth when she accused the Chief of mistreating her.

Judge Taft, who presided over the Juvenile Court when Miss Serkin's custody was determined by him, will be called as a witness by the defense.

Judge Wood announced yesterday that sessions will be held Tuesday.

Another Pioneer Also Passes After Long Illness.

Romantic Couple Married in the Moonlight.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

PASADENA, May 1.—After an illness of six weeks Walter S. Wright died yesterday at his home, No. 830 North Orange Grove avenue. He was one of the best-known barristers in Southern California for a quarter of a century.

For many years Mr. Wright was looked upon as having few equals in his profession. It was in company with William R. Staats and George S. Baker that he organized the West Side Electric Company of Los Angeles, which finally became the Southern California Edison Company. At the time of his death he was the attorney for this company.

He was attorney for the Pasadena Lake Vineyard Land and Water Company for thirty years, having charge of the legal affairs of the corporation from its formation until it was dissolved two years ago.

He it was who brought about the sale of the Hotel Wentworth to Henry E. Huntington, after whom now the big hostelry is named. Mr. Wright also was one of the most active figures in bringing about the building of the Mt. Wilson trail and the hotel on the summit of the mountain.

Mr. Wright lived in Pasadena thirty-two years, and was 62 years old and was a native of New York and studied his profession in a law office. He was not a college graduate.

He leaves, besides his widow and scores of friends, two daughters, Mrs. W. F. Fuller, Jr., of Los Angeles, and Miss Catherine Wright, and a son, Howard Wright.

Mr. Wright was a member of numerous Masonic lodges. The funeral will be held Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock, at the residence. The burial will be private.

PIONEER PASSES.

C. W. Jackson, a pioneer and well-known citizen of this city, passed away suddenly at his residence, No. 443 North Pasadena avenue, last night. He was a semi-invalid for several years. He was up and walking about the house ten minutes before he died.

Mr. Jackson founded the Jackson Printing Company, which is now carried on by his sons, J. G. and W. B. Jackson. He had lived in this city twenty-nine years and was a native of Wisconsin. He was 65 years old. Besides his two sons he leaves his widow and several sisters and brothers in the East.

The funeral services will be conducted Monday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at the Masonic Temple, and will be in charge of the Corona Lodge of Masons. Rev. Frank G. Stevens will preach the sermon.

The deceased was also a member of the Scottish Rite, Pasadena Commandery, No. 31, of Knights Templars, and the Maccabees. Interment will follow in Mountain View Cemetery.

WED IN MOONLIGHT.

Finding themselves unable to resist the lure of the big silver moon and the silent call of the mountains with their odor of orange blossoms, Fay Gray of No. 25 South Allen avenue and Miss Mabie E. Werdeman decided to wed at once.

At the side of a wooded country road, under the protecting wing of the foothills of Altadena, with only the moon to light the wedding scene and the night birds to sing sweet wedding hymns, the two were married last night in the presence of immediate members of their families. Justice Benjamin Strang officiated.

When the bridegroom's pleadings had won over the girl he loved, they were assisted in their hurried plans by Joe Giddings, a friend, who took them in his machine to the moonlit mountains.

When the beautiful ceremony was over, the wedding party returned to the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. H. A. Woodhouse, where a wedding feast was prepared and served under a bower of roses in the garden of her home.

Mr. and Mrs. Gray will reside at No. 1515 East Colorado street in a little vine-embowered bungalow built for two. Their wedding was to have been an event of the next couple of

WED IN MOONLIGHT.

Finding themselves unable to resist the lure of the big silver moon and the silent call of the mountains with their odor of orange blossoms, Fay Gray of No. 28 South Allen avenue and Miss Mable E. Werdeman decided to wed at once.

At the side of a wooded country road, under the protecting wing of the foothills of Altadena, with only the moon to light the wedding scene and the night birds to sing sweet wedding hymns, the two were married last night in the presence of immediate members of their families. Justice Benjamin Strang officiated.

Mr. and Mrs. Gray will reside at No. 1515 East Colorado street in a little vine-embowered bungalow built for two. Their wedding was to have been an event of the next couple of weeks, and a marriage license had been already obtained in anticipation of the event, but the moon and the stars and the mountains united in playing havoc with these plans and had things their own way.

BUYS AUTO AGENCY.

G. H. Grace, former editor and owner of the Daily Call of Lead, S. D., yesterday took over all the interests of the Lord Motor Car Company, which will be known in the future as the Grace Motor Company.

Mr. Grace came here in January and yesterday declared that he liked Pasadena so well that the minute he landed here he began to look around for a business in which he thought he might be sufficiently successful. His wife, Mrs. Belle L. Grace, will be identified in the business also.

DENTAL LOSSES.

Thieves familiar with dental work broke into the office of Dr. Edward C. Hawkins at No. 130 East Colorado street and stole gold crowns and bridge work valued at more than $100.

It is the belief of the local police that an organized gang of thieves is operating in Southern California, as numerous other dentists in other cities have reported similar losses.

CENTURY OLD AND ARRESTED.

AGED WOMAN ACCUSED OF ILLEGAL LIQUOR SELLING NEAR ARTESIA.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

WHITTIER, May 1.—Accused of operating a "blind pig" near Artesia, Josephine Garcia is in the County Jail awaiting trial. She was arraigned before Judge A. B. Taylor here yesterday and because she could not secure bail to the amount of $200 she was sent to the county bastile.

If the aged Mexican has told her age correctly she is probably the oldest woman ever arrested in this county and may hold a world record for this rather undesirable honor, for Josephine says she is 115 years old. In discussing the matter of bail she told the court that she "had outlived her children and other relatives and did not have a friend in the world."

The arrest of the aged Josephine is only one step in the effort to clean up the illicit liquor business in the vicinity of Artesia and Los Nietos. Delores Nevalinas was also arrested yesterday on a somewhat similar complaint. She secured bail and will have a hearing May 14.

At the jail in Los Angeles some of the Spanish officials said they recognized the woman as the widow of a man who was convicted of murder some seven years ago, sentenced to the penitentiary, and a little later died there.

NARROW MARGIN BEFORE BRINK.

Auto Skids and Rolls Over, Injuring Three.

Jap Willing to Try Another Bride by Mail.

Fishermen may be Ousted at Dana's Point.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

SANTA ANA, May 1.—By the narrowest margin, three men escaped death when an automobile driven by one of them, S. S. Twombly, skidded and turned over on the State highway in front of the County Hospital. In the machine with Mr. Twombly were his son-in-law, L. A. Hampton, and A. E. Mills, the latter of Anaheim. Mr. Twombly and Mr. Hampton live at Fullerton.

The paved road was wet and slippery, the wreck occurring at a corner where several machines have been wrecked by skidding. The machine was going toward Santa Ana, when it began to skid and turned completely over. The men were thrown clear of the wreck. Otherwise they might have been killed.

BRIDE BY MAIL.

With just one year to wait before he can be married again, Nido Okabe will soon consult a mail-order catalogue in search of a face that shall please him. The last time he sent to Japan for a mail-order bride he selected the photograph that brought the beautiful Osano from the shadow of Fujiyama to the dock at Seattle. There Nido met her, and immediately thereafter they were married. The climax of that picture romance came today when Nido was given an interlocutory decree of divorce.

The girl did not live up to the promises that Nido had exacted from the photograph. Her disposition was far from pleasant, and in moments of exasperation he was called unseemly names. Here in Santa Ana at No. 309 North Sycamore street Nido established a poolroom, and one corner of it was rented by him to a clever little barber, who bore the name of T. Kawagishi. The wife was given charge of a cigar stand in the other corner of the front of the poolroom.

Across the intervening space googoo eyes of a slantish type were made, but they were nevertheless effective. Though Nido interrupted their lovemaking, he was unable to stop it. Suddenly there was an elopement, and Nido reported to the police that all of the cash he had on hand was also missing.

Since Nido had had an American marriage, he decided to get an American divorce. He employed Attorney Morris A. Cain to look after the procedure, and this morning Nido told Superior Judge Thomas of his selection of a wife by catalogue and of the troubles that followed the wedding. The judge gave an interlocutory decree.

Nido is willing to take another chance. He will order another bride by mail, timing her departure from Japan so that she may arrive in this country about May 1, 1916.

OUSTER PROCEEDINGS.

If an action brought in the Superior Court is successful, six fishermen who are living at Serra will be ejected from their cabins and tents. The Dana's Point Company, of which J. O. Forster of San Juan Capistrano is president, has given the fishermen notice to vacate, but the fishermen refuse to go. Hence the suit.

In a beautiful cove a mile northwest of where the Santa Fe tracks reach the coast below San Juan Capistrano is the fishing village. In the shelter of the cove are launches and dories, and on the sands are the nets of the fishermen. The company declares its title goes to high tide line on the beach of the cove.

The fisher folk contend that they have a right to a strip of beach sixty feet wide along the high tide line. They declare that this is public property so far as fishermen are concerned. Close against the picturesque bluffs are the cabins and the tents, within the sixty-foot strip. The point company alleges there is so such fisherman's right, that the villagers are misinformed and must move.

Not only is a writ of restitution asked but also $1000 judgment. The company would have been satisfied with nominal rent, just enough to show recognition of their property rights, but the fishermen refused to pay it.

NEWS BRIEFS.

With a fracture of the skull nearly three inches long and a crack that runs half way around the skull, Thomas Guihan, aged 10, is at the County Hospital unable to tell how he was injured. He staggered to the home of his uncle, J. Wilson, at Buaro, a quarter of a mile from an electric car line. He muttered something about trying to jump on a car or a cart, and swooned. When he revived at the hospital he said he had no remembrance of how he was injured. His chances for recovery are about even.

The Dry Federation of this country has called a convention for May 8, at which eighteen delegates are to be elected to attend a State convention at Fresno on June 2. The State convention is to make plans for another California dry campaign in 1916. The county convention will be held in Santa Ana.

C. F. Hell, manager of the Aliso dairy, has found one of his milk route books in a muss. He charges that Thomas Gould, who drove a delivery wagon for the dairy, evened things up with his employers, who had ordered his discharge, by changing addresses and erasing numbers in the route book. A warrant is out for Gould on a charge of malicious mischief.

PRIEST MAY HAVE KILLED MAN IN WILD SCUFFLE.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

RIVERSIDE, May 1.—Sheriff Wilson and Coroner Dickson have gone to the desert to investigate a mysterious shooting affray which took place near Palm Springs last night and which resulted in the death of Peter Glennon, a ranch hand, and the wounding of Rev. Paul Reinfels, a Catholic priest of Paloma, Ill.

The priest came to Palm Springs only a few days ago to recover his health, which had been seriously impaired by an attack of pneumonia. He established a camp in Chino Canyon, about five miles from Palm Springs, and secured the services of Miss Clara Sherrer of Los Angeles, as nurse.

Glennon, who was employed on the ranch of P. T. Stevens, was apparently jealous of the priest and entered the tent at about 9 o'clock with the announcement that he intended to kill both inmates. Glennon shot the priest in the arm as the latter reached for his revolver, while Miss Sherrer grappled with Glennon, grasping him about the neck.

In the struggle outside the tent, both fell into one of the numerous springs which are to be found in the canyon, and Glennon received his death wound.

Miss Sherrer claims that Glennon's gun was discharged in the melee, inflicting the fatal wound, while the priest admits that he fired one shot, which statement is supported by the discovery of an empty cartridge in the chamber of his revolver.

Rev. Mr. Reinfels was taken to Banning this morning for treatment. Miss Sherrer returned to Palm Springs with the Riverside officers, who will investigate the affair and endeavor to reach Glennon's body, which is far up the canyon, tonight for the purpose of holding the inquest.

The victim of the shooting has been a resident of Palm Springs for a number of years and was known as a quiet and inoffensive sort of man.

QUINCY (Ill.) May 1.—The Rev. Paul Reinfels is one of the most beloved priests in the Quincy district, and is pastor of the churches at Paloma, Bloomfield and Mendon, Ill. Last December his health began to break, but he refused to retire even temporarily from his parish until Bishop Ryan urged him to seek restoration of his health on the Pacific Slope.

Suffering from what was apparently a nervous breakdown, Father Reinfels left for California three weeks ago. Word from him a few days ago said he was rapidly improving and that he hoped to be able to return in a few weeks.

A Personal Word to Parents

The following well known business and professional men of San Diego have joined me in incorporating the SAN DIEGO ARMY AND NAVY ACADEMY which I established in 1910 and which I have maintained since as a private school for boys:

Geo. L. Barney, Real Estate.
F. T. Scripps, Financier.
L. J. Wilde, Pres. U. S. National Bank.
John Lynch Davis, Retired Business Man.
F. A. Garetson, Vice-Pres. Marine National Bank.
C. M. Wood, Attorney.
G. A. Davidson, Pres. So. Trust & Savings Bank.
U. S. Grant, Jr., Financier.
Geo. Burnham, Vice-Pres. San Diego Securities Co.
Admiral H. N. Manney, Member City Council.
John D. Spreckels, President Spreckels Companies.
Dr. [illegible], Physician.
Dan M. Stewart, City Treasurer.
George Marston, President Marston Company.
O. J. Stough, Capitalist.
Wm. Clayton, Secretary Spreckels Companies.
John Forward, Jr., Union Title & Trust Co.
F. C. Spalding, Southern Trust & Savings Bank.
D. C. Collier, President D. C. Collier Co.
M. T. Gilmore, President S. D. Savings Bank.
A. W. Savage, Pres. Savage Tire Co.

Our charter has been received and in accordance with California's new corporation laws, the Commissioner has investigated our company and has issued the necessary permit to sell stock. The authorized capitalization is $300,000. It is the purpose of the company to secure as soon as possible a permanent site and to erect within the coming year new and well equipped buildings necessary for the Academy's needs. The Summer Session, July 1st to Sept. 1st, and the Regular Session, September, 1915, to June, 1916, will be conducted in the school's present quarters.

The Academy although not yet five years old, has received unusual recognition. First: Its graduates have been received without further examination at every college or university where application has been made. Second: The War Department, after inspection a year ago, detailed a regular Army Officer as Commandant of Cadets and Professor of Military Science and Tactics—a distinction enjoyed by only one other school in Southern California. Third: The Academy has secured at the University of California the "index figure" 159, a rating which, in comparison with all schools, public or private, represented last year, would place the Academy fourth from the highest in scholarship average. Fourth: The Academy has been chosen to represent in Southern California the College Entrance Examination Board and to conduct its examinations in June.

We are now concluding the best year's work in the school's history; no faculty has been more earnest and conscientious nor has taken more personal interest in the individual student; the students themselves have been aroused to enthusiastic endeavors and have been happy in their school life; never have patrons been more pleased. Under the new regime the same high standards will be maintained and by united efforts we expect to attain even greater results.

Full information regarding the coming Summer School and the Regular Session will be furnished upon request.

The first meeting of the class will be at the headquarters of the American Ambulance Committee, Bronson building, Seventh and Grand, tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 o'clock.

Ship Captain Entertained.

Capt. Fritz S. Olsen of the freighter Bravo, which arrived at Los Angeles Harbor Friday morning from Christiania, Norway, was entertained at luncheon at noon yesterday at the Athletic Club by R. O. Belland. The guests included H. Jevne, G. Eckdahl, Swedish Consul; C. J. Nordfast, Olof S. Strom, Anton C. Olson, Dr. A. E. Wilson, V. Wandenstrom, Neil P. Olsen, W. D. Howard and John Knagenhielm.

Scandinavian Coffee Party.

Following an ancient custom of the old country, about 100 Scandinavians celebrated May Day at a coffee party yesterday afternoon at Harlow's Cafe. John N. Swenson, manager of the Scandinavian department of the Hellman Commercial Trust and Savings Bank, was master of ceremonies. Mrs. Robert Sheldon pleased the diners with several Swedish folk songs. Several numbers were given by the Swedish male chorus.

Fog Signal.

Announcement that a fog signal station will be established at Los Angeles Harbor about June 1 was made yesterday by United States Lighthouse Inspector H. W. Rhodes of the Eighteenth District in a letter to the Chamber of Commerce. The signal will be a bell, striking a single stroke every five seconds, and will be located in a white frame house at the outer corner of the municipal fill on the left-hand side of dredged channel to the Inner Harbor.

Member in Death's Shadow.

Because Mrs. A. D. Dorrance, one of its charter members, lies in the shadow of death, plans for the May meeting of the Women's Advertising Club have been abandoned. Only women actively engaged in the preparation of advertising are eligible to membership in this club, and the result is a closeness of association and unity of interest that, aside from Mrs. Dorrance's personal popularity, make her fellow-members unwilling to proceed further with arrangements for the dinner and programme when one of their number is in such distressing condition.

Violence.

STRIKES BANKER AFTER ACCIDENT.

MOTORMAN HELD FOR BLOW WITH CONTROLLER GRIP.

Street Car Hits Auto, Words Follow and Motorist is Chased from His Machine by Assailant, Whom Physicians Pronounce Drunk. Arresting Officers Meet Resistance.

After having run a street car into the rear of an automobile driven by W. W. Wood, vice-president of the Citizens' National Bank, the motorman, John F. Rowan, leaped from his car, according to witnesses, and, after striking the banker on the head, chased him along the street. A short time later Rowan attacked Detectives Browning and Bowe, who rushed from Central Police Station to the scene of the fight, and was taken to the station only after a struggle. He was pronounced drunk by the Receiving Hospital doctors and locked up on a charge of assault.

According to the detectives, Rowan was operating a Vermont avenue and Georgia street car. At Tenth street and Vermont avenue Mr. Wood, who was driving his automobile filled with friends, declared to the police, Rowan drove his street car into the rear of the machine. No damage was done the machine.

Motorman Rowan, according to the police, sprang to the ground and cursed Mr. Wood and his party. When Mr. Wood attempted to explain the accident, the motorman is said to have struck him over the head with a controller grip and then chased him from his auto. Mr. Wood did not return to the scene again until the detectives had arrived.

As soon as the police arrived, they declare, Motorman Rowan rushed up and started to abuse them. They arrested him and he tried to resist.

According to J. A. Guthrie, Jr., of No. 1240 Ardmore street and Frank Talum of 631 Title Insurance Building, who were on the street car, the motorman before the accident was running the car at high speed and had every appearance of being drunk. They declared he attacked Mr. Wood without warning.

TO LARGER QUARTERS.

The Foley Furniture Company, located for the past three years at Nos. 937-42 South Los Angeles street, has now moved into much larger quarters at Nos. 945-51 South Main street, to accommodate its rapidly growing business in the retail trade. T. F. Foley, the proprietor, was for many years a member of the Mackie-Foley Co. of this city. He severed his connections with that concern in December, 1911. Mr. Foley extends a cordial invitation to the public to come and visit the new store.

RELIGIOUS WORKER DIES.

As Wife of Pastor She Became Prominent in Philanthropy and Widely Known Here.

Mrs. Agnes M. Leffler, 87 years old, widely known in religious and philanthropic circles of this city, died yesterday morning at her home, No. 4208 North Griffin avenue. Mrs. Leffler leaves five children, W. B. Leffler of Duarte and Mrs. E. M. Winston, Mrs. A. L. Ball, Miss Nessie Leffler and C. B. Leffler of this city. She was the widow of the Rev. Blackburn Leffler.

Mrs. Leffler came to Los Angeles thirty-six years ago with her husband from their home in a little town of North Carolina.

The Rev. Mr. Leffler became pastor of a small Presbyterian church in this city. As the city grew, he went to a larger church. His wife took an active part in this work and became well known as a charity worker. When her husband died several years ago she continued her philanthropic work.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock at Highland Park Presbyterian Church, of which Mrs. Leffler was a prominent member. Interment will be in Evergreen cemetery.

GOES TO NEVADA.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

HIGHLAND, May 1.—The many friends of Mrs. Clare Welton Goode, secretary of the Woman's Club here, were surprised to learn today that she left home during the early hours of last evening without telling any of the family that she was going. She left a short note for her mother, saying that she was going to Nevada. Her many friends here cannot account for her sudden decision, but feel that she is capable of taking care of herself. She was married several years ago to Fred Goode of Colton, but has made her home most of the time with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Welton.

The Home Beauty Parlor
by Betty Dean

Madeline: To make your too-fat figure round and just right, dissolve 4 ounces of parnotis (from drug store) in 1½ pints hot water. When cool, strain and take a tablespoonful at meal time. This is a rational, harmless treatment and gently dissolves the fat without leaving the skin wrinkled or the flesh flabby. The parnotis treatment acts differently from other reducing methods, inasmuch as it restores the graceful lines of the figure without dieting or exercise, and when the weight is sufficiently reduced the treatment can be discontinued.

Betty: I am certain a daily use of this vegetable cream-jelly, which is easy to make at home, will soon eliminate your wrinkles and clear the skin of local impurities, leaving it smooth and velvety and give to it the pink and white bloom of youth: Get from your druggist and dissolve in ½ pint cold water 1 ounce almozoin and add 1 teaspoonful glycerine. To remove the wrinkles apply a little of the cream-jelly lengthwise of the creases, leaving over night. The starved tissues quickly respond to this treatment and assume their correct proportions; then the skin will be smooth and wrinkleless. The almozoin cream-jelly is especially good to cleanse the skin of pimples and blackheads.

Diana: Your daughter can easily protect her skin against freckles and from spring winds by using this simple lotion: Dissolve 4 ounces spurmax (from drug store) in either ½ pint hot water or witch hazel and add 2 teaspoonfuls glycerine. Apply sparingly to face, neck and arms and rub lightly until it vanishes. The spurmax lotion is superior to powder because one application lasts an entire day and seems part of the skin. Spurmax makes shiny skins, oiliness, pimples and other complexion blemishes disappear quickly and it is a benefit to the finest complexion.

Flo: Yes, it is easy to keep your hair fluffy and soft if you are very careful about what you use in shampooing. I always use canthrox. It will quickly remove all dandruff, excess oil and dust, making the scalp so clean and healthy that the hair grows heavy and long. I prepare such a head wash at home at a cost of about three cents a shampoo by dissolving one teaspoonful of canthrox in a cup of hot water. This keeps my hair so lustrous and fluffy that it seems much heavier than it is.

THE WEATHER.
[Official Report.]

LOCAL OFFICE, U. S. WEATHER BUREAU, Los Angeles, May 1.—[Reported by Ford A. Carpenter, Local Forecaster.] At 5 o'clock a.m. the barometer registered 29.68; at 5 p.m., 29.70. Thermometer for the corresponding hours showed 41 deg. and 50 deg. Relative humidity, 5 a.m., 84 per cent.; 5 p.m., 74 per cent. Wind, 5 a.m., northeast, velocity 5 miles; 5 p.m., southwest, velocity 12 miles. Highest temperature, 55 deg.; lowest, 41 deg. Rainfall for season, 16.17 inches. Barometer reduced to sea level.

WEATHER CONDITIONS.—The only area of high barometer in the United States is located over North Dakota and Minnesota. Elsewhere the pressure is low, the irregularly shaped depression extending from the Pacific Coast southeasterly, easterly and northeasterly into the New England States. Moderate precipitation occurred generally in this region. The greatest amount, .96 of an inch, fell at Rapid City. Snow fell throughout Nevada, the higher elevations of Arizona, and in Southern Utah and Colorado. Heavy frost occurred Saturday morning at Roseburg and [illegible], and light frost at Portland, Or. At Los Angeles the minimum temperature of 41 deg. was the lowest May temperature for thirty-four years, being equalled but once (May 22, 1881) in the history of the station. The proximity of the widespread area of low pressure will prevent a return to normal weather conditions in Los Angeles and vicinity, so that the weather will continue unsettled, with probably light showers at intervals.

LOCAL FORECAST.

For Los Angeles and vicinity: Unsettled weather Sunday; probably occasional light showers; northwesterly winds.

For Southern California: Unsettled weather Sunday; probably showers.

STATE FORECAST.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 1.—Weather forecast: San Francisco and vicinity: Unsettled weather, probably showers, Sunday; light west wind. Sacramento, Santa Clara and San Joaquin valleys and Southern California: Unsettled weather, probably showers, Sunday; light west wind.

Glimpses of yesterday's striking historical display,

The pageant "Story of the Golden West." One of the notable features of the parade was its exposition of the evolution of the California Indian from his aboriginal condition to that of modern civilization as found in the Sherman school.

Evolution.

SOUTHLAND HISTORY UNROLLED IN PAGEANT OF GOLDEN WEST.

Summer of Glitter and Glory Opened with Three-mile Story of California Told by Her Sons and Daughters in Beautiful Street Spectacle.

THE story of the Golden West, a narrative three miles long, was told in a symbolic evolution of the Southland in the streets of Los Angeles yesterday. It was a street pageant which unfolded the romance of the successive control of the West, and inaugurated a series of Fiesta affairs to be given this summer for the entertainment of our visitors.

The pageant, which traversed nearly four miles of downtown streets, passed through crowding lanes of sightseers, applauded from either side. The spectacle was witnessed by 150,000 persons who lined the sidewalks, street intersections and filled all available space in hotels and office buildings, while roofs were densely populated during the progress of the parade.

The Indians who first controlled California, represented by their civilized progeny, were followed by the padres in history and in the parade; the reign of the Spanish don, succeeded by the accession of the Forty-niners, the Westerners, and finally by that highly evolved type of humanity known as the politician, followed each other in the pageant as in life.

The attempt to give the people a parade out of the ordinary was a refreshing success; the narration of California's golden story was an epochal event that will be remembered, for it portrayed the evolution of an empire with a freedom of expression that is typical of the West.

ANCIENT AND MODERN.

The ancient Indian in his tepee was followed by the modern Indian in his uniform of a cadet; the aborigine squaw found her modern counterpart in the neatly dressed Indian girl, strumming the mandolin, in a modern kitchen or as a trained nurse in a modern hospital.

The old Spanish era was depicted in a float upon which a miniature hacienda with the romantic flavor of another day gave an idea of the life in early California. Behind came a cavalcade of Spanish caballeros, gaudily bedecked and led by Louis Rico.

Upon the clatter of hoofs came the sound of the mission bell, and a great replica of the old mission with the padres and the Indians.

Along in the procession came the cowboys, and the cowgirls, men and women riders from the great ranges of the West. Faces familiar in motion pictures, names known in many a rodeo were recognized in the great troup.

HO. THE POLITICIANS.

Later on, and still following the story of succession of power, came the politicians, who now control. To be exact, some of them do not, but would like to. "Tip" Casselman, a candidate for Mayor, rode the front seat of an antiquated stage and lent grace to an occasion not wholly without merit otherwise.

Sheriff Cline headed the Cline division. The Sheriff looked ill at ease astride a plunging black charger. His saddle had one day's output of the Denver mint on it and behind him came all the rest of the Clines—George Cline, Harry Cline and others of the Cline family, eligible to ride in that division. It was by no means the least of the parade.

The music of the parade was one big feature; there were a dozen bands. The Cowboy Band, headed by Jack Sinclair, made an instantaneous hit.

The Westerners, organized in Los Angeles, assembled the best riders of today and many veterans who in the past won much fame on the range and many a prize in competition. This organization was the backbone of the pageant.

NIGHT PARADE IS POSTPONED.

Because of weather conditions the great electrical pageant, "Queen Flora, a Feast of Flowers," was postponed from last night to Tuesday night. The pageant will leave the starting place, Jefferson street and Grand avenue, at 8 p.m., and will move on Grand avenue to Sixteenth street, to Hill, to Third, to Main, and south on that street to Jefferson street and thence to the place of starting.

PARADE IN DETAIL.

Heading the parade was a platoon of mounted police under the command of Officer Jaques. The Grand Marshal, Sheriff Cline, rode the beautiful black stallion Night with saddle and trappings almost wholly of silver. The little group of boy and girl standard-bearers in their outdoor costumes preceded the big Cowboy Band of Los Angeles, all players in spurs, chaps and sombreros.

TOMORROW'S PROGRAMME.

Great Floral Pageant in the Morning and Rodeo in the Afternoon.

Tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock another pageant, La Fiesta de las Flores, under the direction of A. J. Bertonneau, with Brig.-Gen. Wankowski as grand marshal, will pass the reviewing stand at Eleventh and Hill streets. The parade will move north to Ninth, east to Broadway, north to First, east to Spring, south on Spring to Ninth, and disband.

The floral parade will consist of six divisions: First division, Pasadena Knights of the Rose tournament, with Queen Sybil Mather and court; second division, floats of the municipalities of Los Angeles county; third division, decorated automobiles escorting Chinese dragon; fourth division, Los Angeles fire department and special floats; fifth division, men and women Westerners; sixth division, marching clubs.

The Rodeo at the stadium, Thirty-seventh street and Hooper avenue, will continue through the week. It begins at 2 o'clock p.m., daily.

Driving a pair of striking black horses, a dark-eyed senorita sat in a horn buckboard. "The Days of '49 in Los Angeles" was the legend worked out in the horns of cattle and two heads of longhorns, with great spreading prongs, were a striking reminder of a vanishing past. Troop A, the Westerners, under Capt. Roller, came riding along in their blue leather puttees. In brighter array were the women riders of the same troop under the captaincy of Jane Bernudy.

SHERMAN INDIANS.

Most interesting feature of the parade, perhaps, were the Sherman Indians, with numerous floats, band and marching soldiers. They were preceded by three big chiefs, Antonio Apache, Standing Bear of the Mohawk tribe and Dark Cloud of the Sioux. Chief Standing Bear wore a beautiful shirt, covered with bear and elk teeth, while his brilliant feathered headpiece contrasted strikingly with the same wearing apparel of Chief Dark Cloud, who, true to his name, was in more somber garb, largely of beads.

Under the direction of Bandmaster J. R. Wheelock, the forty-piece band of the Sherman Institute was given much applause all along the line of march, for the quality of music produced, as well as for the neatness of the blue uniforms. The uniforms of the military contingent, three companies, the correct and proper carriage of the Indians under the command of Maj. H. L. Carner, U.S.A., was also well received.

The floats were most interesting, depicting as they did the advancement of the Indian from the tepee to the higher professional careers of the white man. The first float showed a family group in gay blankets, squatted about a camp fire before the willow wickiup. Then came the float showing a group of girls engaged in the present-day domestic science of cookery. Their kitchen was a model of white enamel and their table was spread in most approved fashion.

A group of Indian warriors with their tom-toms gathered about a fire indicated the possible warlike pursuits of the old days and just at the rear was the hospital room, indicative perhaps of the treatment they might receive now, were they injured. The nurses in their neat uniforms, their medicine and even their patient in bed was a well-carried-out theme.

The Mandolin Club, of thirty girls, the majority playing the instrument mentioned and others strumming the guitar or other stringed accompaniment occupied the next float. The final one carried a class of girl gymnasts who throughout the time of parade occupied themselves in an Indian club drill.

THE STAGE COACH.

No feature of the pageant was more interesting than the scenes depicting the evolution of express service covering a period of sixty-five years, commencing with the slow and not always sure, stage coaches of '49 and ending with present-day equipment for speed and dependability. A genuine oldtime California stage coach, drawn by four of the best ponies to be found on a western range and driven by a man unafraid of redskins or bandits, but armed to the teeth for any emergency, was in the lead.

As the coach approached it was not difficult for the crowds to forget

Police Estimate.

HUNDRED FIFTY THOUSAND SEE FIRST GREAT PARADE.

LOOKING up or down any of the streets through which the pageant passed yesterday one might have thought that everybody and his brother was in the crowd. The official estimate of the number of spectators is 150,000. It was a wonderful gathering and the parade committee declared the outpouring beyond expectations.

Extra street cars were operated on all of the suburban and city lines and as early as 7 o'clock men, women and children commenced to arrive for the big event. Long before the parade was started, the sidewalks were packed from curb to building line while hundreds of the more fortunate secured points of vantage in automobiles and office or store buildings.

"Hully gee, I wish they had never

WHICH ROSES ARE FINEST?

"The Times" Show will Help to Find the Answer.

Several Hundred Varieties to be Exhibited.

Why Results in Different Communities Vary.

> The prizes offered by The Times for the best amateur rose gardens will be awarded in accordance with the decision of the judges next Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Gold will be paid to the first four winners and orders for rose bushes given to the other six. The award will be made in the assembly room on the second floor of The Times Building where the exhibit of cut roses will be in progress.
> The prizes are as follows: first, $200 in gold; second, $75 in gold; third, $50 in gold; fourth, $25 in gold; fifth, $25 worth of roses bushes; sixth, $20 worth of rose bushes; seventh and eighth, each $15 worth of rose bushes; ninth and tenth, each $10 worth of rose bushes.

Where are the finest rose gardens? What community produces the highest class of blooms? These are some of the questions answered to some extent by the inspection of the committee of judges for The Times rose garden contest.

Every district in Los Angeles has one or more entries. Hollywood is a conspicuous factor in the contest, not only because of the large number of gardens entered from there, but because almost all of them possess merit. Whittier, Alhambra, Pasadena and other outlying communities have beautiful rose gardens, and the entries from those places have had to be considered. Monrovia's entries are high-class and several beautiful gardens in Glendale have scored high on points.

It is noticeable that climatic condition affecting rose culture vary noticeably. A variety that will thrive and bloom in perfection in the low-lying, heavy soil south of West Adams street and in the western portion of the city will not do as well two miles farther north. Some yellow sorts in the same gardens, with thrifty red and pink varieties, fade more rapidly in certain districts and fail to come up to standard in color.

Gold of Ophir hedges have never bloomed more beautifully anywhere than along Covina fences. In Inglewood and Hawthorne, where the influence of sea air is felt, most varieties perform excellently, particularly some of the choice introductions from English nurseries. In Glendale and Pasadena yellow and copper tea roses and hybrid tea roses appear to be at their best. Experienced rose culturists of Southern California have learned to observe carefully the habits of each new variety. Many of them have discarded bushes from their gardens because they did not do well, although they knew that the same varieties produce exquisite blossoms under slightly different conditions in neighboring communities.

INSTRUCTIVE, EDIFYING.

The judges have found this phase of the Southern California rose situation one of the most interesting of their work. Thousands of rose lovers of Los Angeles and vicinity will have an opportunity to make similar observations at the show of cut roses to be held on the second floor of the Times Building next Wednesday.

Weather conditions have been so unfavorable that most of the exhibitors are not sure that they can control their blooms for that date just as they would like, but even at the worst there will be a great quantity of diversified blooms. Several hundred different varieties will be represented at the show, and it is probable that the character of the blooms will be shown to vary, in accordance with the localities where they are produced. One or two Glendale exhibitors are planning to show some vivid yellow buds of various sorts. There will be enormous deep red roses from the black soil districts of Los Angeles, and the widely-beautiful range of pink sorts will be represented by the exhibits from every community.

Inspection by the judges has been continued as rapidly and effectively as possible in the past few days, and will probably be entirely completed by tomorrow night. Many of the gardens visited in the past week have been injured by rain and wind. The judges have taken these things into consideration, however, and are confident that no entrant will suffer in any degree because of temporary setbacks to their gardens. The system of judging by points reduces the problem to such an exact result that there can be little or no difficulty in deciding upon the relative merits of two or more gardens.

The awards will be announced in The Times next Wednesday morning. That culmination of the contest which has been held for the purpose of encouraging amateur rose growers of Southern California to strive for higher standards will be followed by the cut rose show by the contestants and other rose growers. Everyone who desires to bring or send roses Wednesday morning is invited to do so, whether it be two or three buds or several dozen.

The show will be open to exhibitors only during the morning. Beginning at noon and continuing through the evening, everybody who is interested in roses is welcome to come and see what Southern California conditions can produce in the way of roses when the bushes are given proper care and attention. There will be opportunity for rose growers to compare notes, to see and learn of some new and excellent variety, and to exchange information concerning effective methods of treating the plants. Frank Lewin of the committee of judges will make an exhibit from his Hawthorne garden and will be at the show nearly all day. Other members of the committee will be there at some portion of the day, and there will be opportunity to get useful information concerning roses from men who have gained their knowledge through long experience and much experimenting.

Timothy Nicholson,
One of the notable men of the Quaker church, who is visiting here.

Pillar.

STRONG MAN OF QUAKER FAITH.

STURDY DISCIPLE OF WILLIAM PENN GUEST HERE.

Man Who United the Friends of North America and Who Saved Their Religious Scruples Against Bearing Arms Visits Local Church in His Eighty-seventh Year.

Eighty-six years of age, hale and active, Mr. Nicholson has been for many years and still is a controlling figure in the Quaker Church, or, as its own members refer to it, the Society of Friends. Made into a unified whole through the personal efforts of Mr. Nicholson, the church on this continent now numbers over 100,000 members and is a tower of strength in the movement for world peace, for free and universal education and for many other phases of modern civilization not commonly known to be among its objects of interest.

Thirty years ago Mr. Nicholson succeeded in calling together, for the first time in Friendly history, the fourteen grand divisions of the Quaker Church in North America and uniting them in a single body. This first conference of the fourteen American "Yearly Meetings," as they are called in Friends' parlance was held in Mr. Nicholson's home city, Richmond, Ind., in 1887. Since then they have met at intervals of five years and at each meeting Mr. Nicholson has been chairman of the delegation from his home division, the Indiana Yearly Meeting, the largest in the world. It has a membership of 21,000 Friends, the London Yearly Meeting being second with about 20,000.

Mr. Nicholson's greatest achievement as a churchman was the securing of passage of the amendment to the Military Service Act which exempts from military service all United States citizens who have conscientious scruples against bearing arms. This famous piece of legislation, commonly known as the Quaker Amendment, was passed in 1907 through the efforts of the Legislative Committee of the Five Yearly Meeting, of which Mr. Nicholson was chairman.

Mr. Nicholson has been for forty-nine years a member of the board of trustees of Earlham College, one of the largest Quaker institutions in the world, and for the same length of time a member of the Permanent Board of the Indiana Yearly Meeting. He was a trustee of the Indiana State Normal School under three Governors and a member of the State Board of Charities for nineteen years. He has held many high offices in his church, but he considers as one of his chief claims to credit the fact that, with the exception of James Wood of New York, president of the American Bible Society, he is the only Quaker living who has attended every one of the Five Yearly Meetings.

TRANS-ATLANTIC TO WEST COAST.

BIG STEAMSHIP WILL SOON MAKE REGULAR CALLS AT THIS PORT.

The Finland is an old trans-Atlantic liner of 22,000 tons displacement, built in 1902, by Cramp & Sons of Philadelphia. She is 560 feet long with a sixty-foot beam.

Because of the precarious condition of trans-Atlantic travel during war time, her owners transferred her to the Pacific trade. The first itinerary mapped out did not include Los Angeles Harbor. When it was seen that this port could not be omitted for business reasons, the managers of the line hastened to change their plans. Although she will not make Los Angeles Harbor this voyage, it has been arranged that when she again passes south from San Francisco, she will begin making this harbor a regular port of call.

The Finland has on board 508 first-cabin passengers and 272 second-cabin. There is no steerage.

Among several of the best-known passengers on board are Chester Allan Arthur, son of former President Arthur; Mrs. Cornelia C. Chaplin of New York; Hon. George E. Chamberlain, member of Congress, and Col. and Mrs. J. H. Cunningham of Boston.

Vote For a Greater and Richer Los Angeles

It is for every citizen's interest to vote YES on the pending district annexation propositions.

Annexation of San Fernando district means addition to the population and wealth of Los Angeles—more property to help pay taxes.

Annexation of San Fernando District will increase the city's revenues, will provide a large and quick income from the sale of surplus water and will lift the city's big debt.

What are the facts about San Fernando? What are the facts?

1. A great rich and well populated section is knocking at the city's gates. The people have vote to bond their district for $2,606,000 to pay for their own distributing system for using for ir gation the surplus waters of the Los Angeles Aqueduct.
2. The city must sell this water in order to get any revenue from the $24,000,000 Aqueduct, an there is no other immediate customer for it except the San Fernando Valley. Unless the Sa Fernando Valley district is annexed this water will continue to go to waste and the city will lo thousands of dollars.
3. Under the terms of annexation the San Fernando district must pay water rates annually fix by the city. It must pay all city taxes and taxes for all water, power and harbor bonds. must turn its distributing system over to the city free of cost.
4. The "Big Syndicates" that once had large holdings in the San Fernando Valley have sold ou and the people seeking admission are small holders who want water for their personal use an are willing to pay for it. There are over 3000 of these small land-holders. No one individu owns one per cent of the land in the district. The report that the "Big Syndicates" want an nexation is a falsehood circulated by the Power Companies.
5. The big Power Companies and "High Line" Graham, who have fought Bill Mulholland an the Aqueduct from first to last, are now fighting against annexation. These are the on "Big Syndicates" interested.
6. The report that the San Fernando people will get water cheaper than the people of the city another Power Company falsehood. The San Fernando people will pay for domestic us exactly the same rates that other people in the city pay—and the rate for irrigation that othe users pay.

The Aqueduct surplus water is now running to waste. Annexatio will bring about the sale of this water at rates fixed by the city and large and immediate income to help pay the city's taxes and develop th municipal power project.

San Fernando Valley Annexation.

LOS ANGELES, May 1.—[To the Editor of The Times:] One of the most important issues ever brought before the voters of Los Angeles will be settled at Tuesday's election. It is the duty of every citizen who has not done so to become thoroughly familiar with the advantages and disadvantages of annexation of the San Fernando Valley to Los Angeles. This magnificent supply of water has been tied up for several years, producing practically no revenue, thus placing a burden on taxpayers of nearly $5000 per day. Selfish property owners, whose impractical projects were overwhelmingly defeated by the voters of Los Angeles, are using unfair tactics, subterfuge and unworthy innuendos against men like William Mulholland and J. B. Lippincott, in their efforts to defeat the proposed annexation. If the San Fernando Valley is annexed and that territory absorbs all of the water it can use during the next few years, the city of Los Angeles will still have probably 15,000 additional inches of Owens River water to dispose of. Not owning one dollar's worth of property in San Fernando Valley or near there and not having any interest in the so-called selfish projects of large land owners in the valley, I am actuated only by the honest conviction that annexation will be of great mutual advantage to the present city of Los Angeles and San Fernando Valley—our new northwest.

The N.E.W. Commercial and Improvement Association strenuously opposed all efforts of San Fernando Valley property owners to obtain aqueduct water until they consented, by almost unanimous vote, to become annexed to Los Angeles. N.E.W. and Greater Los Angeles, official organ of the association, has urged that the same action be taken.

Now that the property owners in the proposed annexed district are willing to share the burden equally with those of the present city—5 cents per inch per hour for domestic water and 1 cent for irrigation water—besides the bonded indebtedness, paying for construction of their own pipe lines, etc., and last, but not least, in view of the fact that the aqueduct supply (regular flow and water stored in reservoirs,) will be sufficient to supply the needs of the present Los Angeles and territory three times the extent of San Fernando Valley, I would say let them come in by all means and thus form a continuous and symmetrical city, from the mountains to the sea.

PATRIOTISM OR MURDER?

Gamut Club Audience Applaudes Strong Playlet by Local Woman, Attacking Theory of War.

A critical audience of 300 literary and dramatic folk gave a cordial reception Friday evening to the premiere of the playlet "The Patriots," by Florence Haines-Reed, a local clubwoman and writer. The piece, consisting of a single swiftly-moving act, presents in a vivid way war's travesty on patriotism as seen by its victims and by the enlisted men who have nothing to do with international quarrels, but who have to do the killing.

The scene is set in the unpretentious living-room of a family belonging to one of the embattled European nations. The old father has himself served his Emperor on bloody battlefields and now, too old and crippled to go himself, has sent one son into the army and is about to send the other, although the mother's heart is nearly breaking. But while he is away watching the troops march through the village the elder son bursts into the room, dishevelled and bleeding from his latest battle, and passionately announces that he will never murder another man. His mother hides him away from the father's wrath, but the latter finds and drags him forth, trying with bitter accusations of cowardice, to force him to return to his regiment. In the middle of the stormy scene conscription officers enter with an imperial order bidding the youngest son to enter the army at once. To these officers the stern old father delivers his elder son to be shot as a traitor and his younger to be food for cannon, only to find too late that his act has stricken dead the feeble old mother.

Max Pollock, as the father, has the leading role. Wendell Wilson was August, the elder son, whose passionate denunciation of murder in the name of patriotism was the feature of the piece. Mrs. Wilfred Simpson gave a good interpretation of the mother's part, while the minor roles were taken by Miss Arri Rottman, Miss Helen Taggart, Alfred Drew and Fay Emmons. The piece was put on by the Civic Repertory Company.

BAPTIST PASTOR RESIGNS TODAY.

LEADER OF CALVARY BAPTIST CHURCH TO TAKE UP BROADER WORK.

A new and broader field has claimed the services of Rev. W. Leon Tucker, popular and aggressive pastor of the Calvary Baptist Church. He announced yesterday that he will present his resignation to his congregation this morning.

Beginning in two months, Mr. Tucker will devote his time to Bible conference work in America and abroad. He will be special lecturer for several theological schools. His first appearance in his new work will be at Cleveland. In September he will be at the First Baptist Church in New York City.

The Calvary Church has made remarkable progress under the pastorate of Mr. Tucker, increasing in membership in eight years from 149 to 700. The church is noted for its liberal gifts to missions, contributing more to this cause than any other Baptist Church on the Coast with one exception.

In his busy life as a pastor, Mr. Tucker found time to establish a magazine devoted to Bible study, "The Serial Bible Course," and to obtain for it prestige and a wide circulation. Under the leadership of Mr. Tucker, Calvary Church established a gospel wagon and [illegible] other progressive religious enterprises.

USING SOAP SPOILS THE HAIR.

Soap should be used very sparingly, if at all, if you want to keep your hair looking its best. Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is just ordinary mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and greaseless,) is cheaper and better than soap or anything else you can use.

One or two teaspoonfuls will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at any pharmacy, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months.

PAINFUL RINGWORM ON BABY'S SCALP

Itched and Burned. Hair Came Out by Handfuls. Seemed Dead. Dandruff Scaled Off. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Healed. Now Beautiful Hair and Nice Clean Scalp.

136 6th Ave., Durango, Colo.—"I first noticed a small spot on my baby's [illegible] that seemed brown. The more I washed it the bigger it got until there were spots all over her scalp which itched and burned very bad. Her hair came out by handfuls and seemed dead and the dandruff scaled off and [illegible] plainly. There was a place as big as a dollar and [illegible] as your hand. It was very sore. I was told it was a form of ringworm but nothing helped to stop it.

"I got a box of Cuticura Ointment and some Cuticura Soap and after a very few treatments I could see an improvement. In a month I could see a lot of new hair coming in and now she has a beautiful head of hair and a nice clean scalp. Cuticura Soap and Ointment completely healed her." (Signed) Mrs. Maud A. Park, August 11, '14.

wonders of civilization and prog- and imagine the thrills and ex- ment of the epoch-making period frontier life in the Golden State. battered and rickety old vehicle tires sprung, hubs split, seat wob- windows uncurtained and noth- left but blisters to show it was fresh and new with paint was in nothing to recall the dis- of transportation in the days.

picture was so vivid and so that one old man, bent with the of more than four score years, has spent all his life west of the and more than half a cen- the southwest, who came in the mountains of San Bernardino just to see it, broke down and He is Old John Saunders, one picturesque characters of the "Them was great old days," the patriarchal frontiersman in voice. "Of course the folks would think it a terrible to have to travel in that but then we didn't know any- and we thought it was fine. It's true that we had to for our mail and it took to get somewhere but we mind it then and I guess you either if stage coaches was all you ever seen. You know I could never forget one of them coaches if I lived a hundred more years, for the beginning of the happiest part of my life was in a stage coach. Nigh on to fifty years ago me and one of the nerviest and best gals that the California sun ever shone on, got into a coach way up there in the San Berdoo mountains and came to Los Angeles where the parson tied the knot that made us the happiest pair in the country. The gal is dead now, but I can't ever forget her and just such scenes as this keeps a bringing her to my mind." The grizzled pioneer drew from his pocket a red bandana, wiped a tear from his cheek and started away. "I must be goin'," he said. "I'm goin' back on a choo-choo, but don't think it is by choice. If I had a chance I would get in one of them things that just went by and I know I'd get there even if it did take a day or two longer."

OLD AND NEW.

Fifty years ago it was an all-day journey from Los Angeles to Mt. Wilson, but now several round trips can be made in a day, the horses and rickety wagons being supplanted with the modern six and eight-cylinder auto busses, one of which followed the old stage coach. It was entered by the Mt. Wilson Auto Stage Line Company, the contrast being most interesting.

A couple of ponies ridden by vaqueros and equipped with early-day saddle bags were next in line, recalling the period of the pony express when by terrific riding messengers were able to negotiate the route from Los Angeles to Chicago in ten days, charging as much as $5 and $10 for carrying a message over the continent. Then came a replica of one of the first stage coaches ever put in commission by the Wells-Fargo company.

On the high seat of the coach with the lines in one hand and a long blacksnake whip in the other was Col. A. Y. Ross, who has been in the employ of the Wells-Fargo company for forty-six years. Col. Ross made himself famous in early western history by capturing the notorious bandit, "Black Bart," the mention of whose name at one time sent a thrill of terror through the heart of all stage-coach drivers. He was one of the most desperate road agents who ever held up a coach and many murders have been credited to him. Col. Ross captured him after a memorable struggle, a single-handed fight.

Several express wagons with rubber-tired wheels and ball bearings and equipped with the latest devices for speed making, completed the picture of express evolution.

THE FORTY-NINERS.

A mining scene of '49, the days of the famous rush of gold seekers and fortune hunters to California, was depicted on a mammoth float. Two prospectors were busy washing gold by the old panning system and their shouts of joy upon finding an honest-to-goodness bit of the glittering ore made the scene so realistic that a couple of kids at Fifth and Spring streets contributed the following:

"Is that real gold that little miner just picked up?" one of the boys asked his companion.

"Course it is, didn't you never see gold before?"

"Sure, I seen some once in a bank, but you can't tell me they're getting real money out of that dirty old rock."

"That shows how much you know about gold. It all comes out of rocks and dirt. Anyhow, didn't you just see him put it in his pocket. You don't s'pose he would be fillin' his pocket with it if it wasn't real stuff do you?"

THE "MOVIES."

Following the historical reminders came a number of floats entered by moving-picture concerns. In the lead was the Universal Film Manufacturing Company's float. Preceded by the Glendale Municipal Band, the exhibition was distinctly an interesting addition to the pageant. A miniature cavern was built and in its many crevices were seen wild animals in their native haunts. Real live bears, tigers, lions, coyotes and other denizens of the forest were there. Incidentally, the management of the picture concern declares all of the animals are perfectly harmless, those that would bite having had their teeth extracted and those that might scratch having their nails carefully and closely manicured.

On top of the cavern, gracing each corner, were four pretty "movie" actresses, representing comedy, tragedy, art and literature, and in the center was the Universal's immense revolving globe.

The Occidental Film Manufacturing Company was represented with a pretty display of actors and actresses astride horses and ponies and a particularly attractive float. Upon this was depicted a Southland garden scene, a number of pretty girls sitting at a table under a bower of roses, enjoying refreshments to melodious strains from a Hawaiian orchestra.

A float entered by Bostock's Animal Show came next. It was marked by a jungle scene showing a hunter and trophy. Two baby elephants also were interesting features of this exhibit.

FOR SENTENCE WEDNESDAY.

Clyde Allen, Herbert Allen and N. E. Whitman, convicted of concealing the assets of the Sunset Grocery Company, defunct, which did business at No. 128 North Spring street, will come up for sentence Wednesday before Judge Bledsoe.

Thousands See Parade.

put those palm trees on the sidewalk," a husky, fine-loking patrolman said after he had waded through a few hundred women and children to compel some persons to get off one of the concrete boxes in which the trees are set. "We have orders to keep these boxes clear and it is no easy job. They make dandy seats and a fellow has to be pretty cruel that will make a tired woman or kid leave them."

Only newspaper reporters, messenger boys and police officers were allowed within the lines and the patrolmen had their hands full in keeping the others back. They did so without resorting to extreme measures, however.

The streets were never more promptly cleared or traffic set in motion after the pageant than yesterday and fifteen minutes after it was over not a trace of traffic congestion, more serious than on an ordinary business day, was noticeable.

Purse snatchers, pickpockets and room workers, the three varieties of thieves which crowds attract, were on hand and busy. Although 275 patrolmen and more than thirty detectives and plainclothesmen were protecting the sightseers several instances of purse-snatching and attempts at pocket-picking were made.

William H. Carroll and Will Weller, suspected of picking pockets, were arrested by Detectives Ingram and Cowan while rushing persons in a manner most attractive to the profession.

Those who lost purses are Mrs. C. F. Doyle, No. 1126 Orange street, $2; M. Filler, Inglewood, $16; Mrs. A. Mathewson, No. 1136 West Twenty-fifth street, $5.50; Mrs. Jessie D. Meadows, Eighth and Broadway, $7.

In each instance the person losing the purse was so intently watching the parade that the purse was not missed until after the thief had disappeared in the crowd.

Conductor F. P. Patrick of the Pacific Electric reported to the police that two pickpockets were operating on the Pacific Electric trains running under heavy loads of beach visitors. Special deputies were appointed to watch as many of the beach trains as possible during the day and night.

Two Indian boys, Gilbert Arrow and Chules Seonia, were taking advantage of the excitement of the passing pageant to ransack rooms while housewives were on the front porch. Seonia was shouting as if he were enthusing over the parade, but his rooting was to drown the noise of the hurriedly-working Arrow, who was pulling drawers and overturning furniture in the rush of looting. They were caught as they attempted to leave a house at Ninth and Hill streets with a bundle of stolen goods.

TWELVE GALLANT GENTLEMEN.

A jury in the Federal court found all of the male defendants guilty in a certain case and all of the women innocent. This strikes us as true gallantry. Your real Californian is nothing if not chivalrous.

NERVES AND BUNK.

Right now the magazines of the country, and especially the weekly papers, are printing considerable fiction on the text of temperament. We don't care how much of an exposure they make of it. It is generally only a kindly term for tantrums and eroticism.

FREE FOR ALL.

Gov. Philipp of Wisconsin has vetoed an anti-tipping bill because it interferes with personal liberty. Certainly a man should be free to distribute largesse if he is so minded. Yet this is the sort of interference with personal liberty that Titus Wad, for instance, would not object to very strenuously.

EVERY MAN'S CHANCE.

No habit is so strong that it can overthrow an attitude that is firmly taken, and the right attitude may be struck at any minute. That is why there is hope just as long as there is life. Of course the sooner you face the light the further you will go because a man's work is done while his power is with him.

SCARCELY MODERN.

Benjamin Franklin was born when his father was 51, while his father's birth rank was 57, his mother's 50, and his parental grandfather's 65. This made less than two generations to the century. This is rather too slow for an age when we have grandmothers at 34 and 36 who get themselves arrested for breaking the speed limit through Watts and Tropico.

LOTS OF EDUCATION.

The University of California will confer 1000 degrees on May 12. That is releasing considerable amount of education at one time; we suppose the State can stand it. The rest of us will have to do what we can to compete with these finely-trained young minds in making a living, but maybe our experience will match their diplomas. Anyhow, there is room for us all.

WASHINGTON PORTIA.

Seattle has a woman justice of the peace. Miss Reah Whitehead holds a law degree from the University of Washington, and in her election defeated one of the most popular judges Seattle ever had. As she is 25 years old and good-looking and gets a salary of $3000 a year she should not find it difficult to organize an interesting partnership before her present term expires.

OPEN TO EVERYBODY.

Please, friends, do not wait for a special invitation to make an exhibit in the Rose Show which The Times will give on the second floor of the building next Wednesday afternoon and evening. The paper is not making any effort to extend individual invitations, but everybody is welcome to make entries, large or small, of cut roses, and the general public is invited to enjoy the exhibits.

GOOD INDIANS.

The Indians took Los Angeles Saturday, but they treated us as generous captors. Something like 150 of the boys came down from Sherman with their brass band and their guns, and a mighty fine feature of the parade they made. Marching in good order in their becoming blue uniforms, they went a long way to illustrate the change that has taken place in California since first the Mission Fathers touched foot upon these shores.

UTILIZING PRISONERS OF WAR.

Since one of the European combatants is resorting to Chinese ancient methods of warfare by throwing stink pots at the enemy, and making prisoners of those whom they asphyxiate, why not revert to European Middle Age methods and put the captives at work, if not as slaves at least as honorable prisoners? Prisoners convicted of crime are put at work for the good of the state. Why may not prisoners of war be employed in building roads, and canals, and reservoirs, and public edifices, and in cultivating the soil? It would promote the health of the prisoners and beguile the tedium of their captivity if they were employed in useful labor. A million Frenchmen and Englishmen and Russians could in a few months make Germany blossom like a rose. A million Germans and Austrians could make France, and Russia, and England a network of roads and canals, and when the war was over values would have been created in each nation that would to some extent reduce the costly waste of war.

The Middle Age system of ransoming prisoners might also be revived. A uniform price for privates and officers could be established at which their friends could buy them out of captivity. The only disadvantage of such a system would be that it would discourage exchanges of prisoners. For Great Britain, for instance, to give up a German who was earning more than the cost of his upkeep with pick and shovel on a highway, in exchange for an Englishman who would earn nothing, and who would be fed and paid for doing nothing, would be an economic blunder.

WAR BABIES.

In England, where they take their morals seriously, the increase in the number of illegitimate children due to war conditions is troubling a number of worthy citizens. Church dignitaries and Christian workers are investigating the question of "war babies" and are promising "to take steps." But to what end?

All Britain seems to be agreed that the war must be prosecuted to its disastrous finish, and the church has joined hands with the government to promote a martial spirit. War imposes unnatural conditions. The danger of "war babies" is bringing these home to Christian professors. Priests and ministers are fighting in all the armies in Europe. A spiritual conflict between the cry of Christianity and the call of patrioticism adds a psychical feature to the material struggle.

The elemental takes little cognizance of higher laws; at such crises as the one now confronting Great Britain it is difficult for morality to obtain a hearing. For with the better part of the male population killed off, disabled or rendered mentally unfit, the demand for babies at any price—to perpetuate life—is liable to become irresistible. The ethics of war are so utterly opposed to the ethics of the home that it is difficult to see how Christian leaders can advocate recruiting on the one hand while they decry the illegitimacy on the other.

After all the immorality that leaves children at home for husbandless mothers is no worse than the immorality that sends the fathers abroad to murder or be murdered. The national custom that legalizes the wholesale breaking of the Sixth Commandent can hardly conscientiously balk at the retail infringement of the Seventh. On the state that calls for the life blood of the fathers devolves the duty of taking care of the fatherless offspring, especially those born out of wedlock in the reversal of all human principles that encourages or excuses war.

Are the churchmen who are deploring the danger of "war babies" to public morals willing to see England accept peace terms to be decided according to the decree of an international court of arbitration and not by the power of the British army and navy? The peace babies of a former generation are being sacrificed ruthlessly to avert a national danger. That is the devil's arithmetic of war. Depopulation or the shattering of moral codes is the remainder of the figures. The Church of England dares not discourage recruiting for Kitchener's army. If it accepts war as a "sine qua non," it must accept it with all the consequences, horrible as these may be; it must see as a climax to the valor of victory a possible virtue in polygamy. Otherwise a depopulated country must go down to uphold a moral code.

No church in these days can afford to be illogical, to wink at the breaking of one commandment on the ground of national necessity and be shocked at the breaking of another as a danger to public ideas of decency. When by war you justify an unnatural drain on the male population of a country you come perilously near justifying an unsanctioned supply to meet the deficit.

Because in the last reckoning there is nothing idealistic about war. It is brutal materialism let loose on all classes of the community in its most powerful and most repulsive form. The same men who are patriotically enthusiastic in drumming up recruits for the firing line cannot afford to be morally censorious in the nation's domestic affairs. They can't consistently be materialists on the firing line and idealists in the abandoned homes. Where the world attempts on a large scale to substitute might for right women and children are always the chief sufferers.

Are the English church officials, disturbed about the danger of the "war babies question," anxious to avert this threat to public morals? The question is a serious one. The only way to settle it is to settle the war that has produced it. The longer the fighting and killing continues and the larger the proportion of marriageable women to possible mates, the stronger will be the national need and the weaker the moral restraint for illegitimate "war babies."

CHANGE OUR NATURALIZATION LAWS.

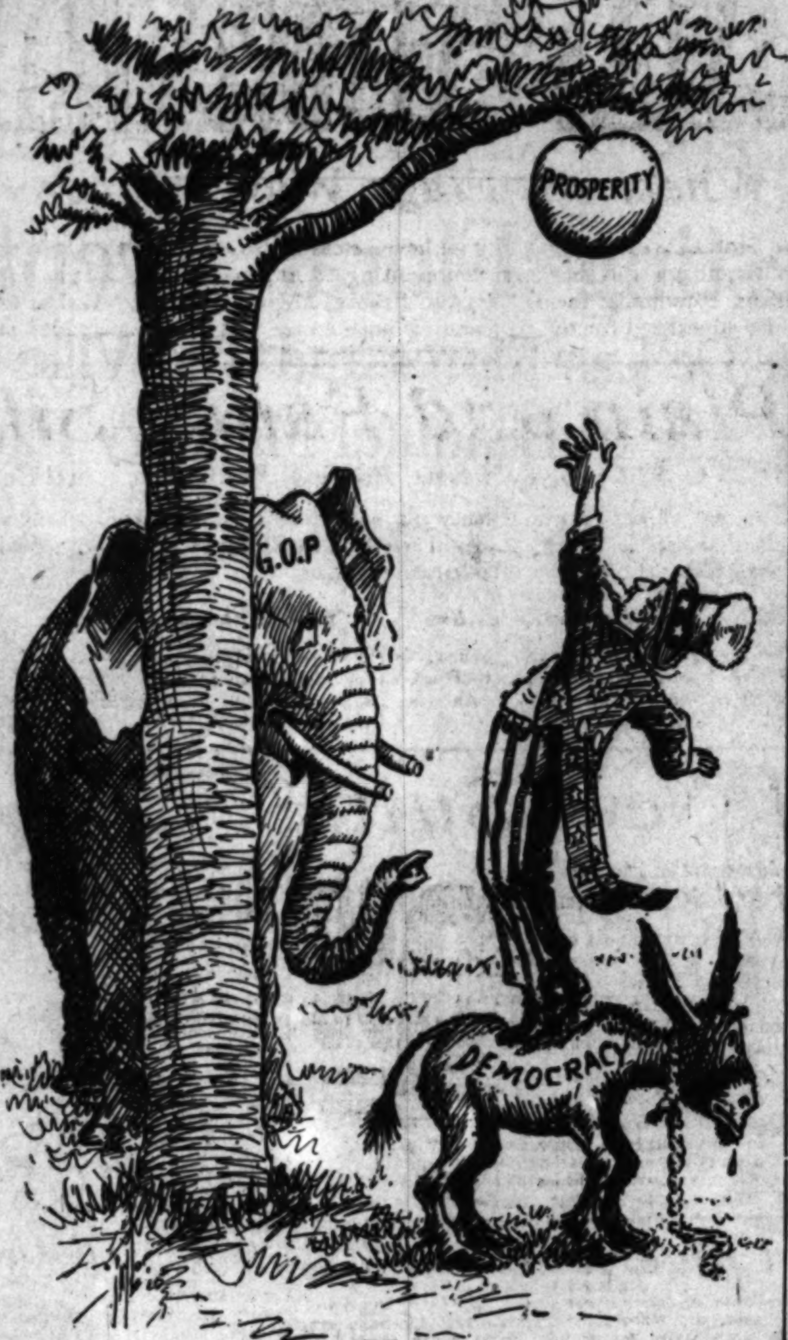
When peace shall be proclaimed millions of men will come out of the war footloose, unemployed and disassociated from former neighborhood, social and business ties. With the industrial plants or mercantile houses closed in which they were formerly employed; with weeds overrunning the acres they formerly cultivated, and, above all, with a colossal load of debt resting upon the nations of which they are subjects—a load of debt so great that to pay the annual interest on it will require three months' wages of every laboring man; while the cost of living will be much higher than it was before the wicked ambitions and folly of a few rulers launched Europe into a sea of blood, what inducement will there be for the disbanded soldiers to return to their former homes and their former avocations? Will not many of them, if not most of them, seek new homes beyond the sea? Will they not flock to our shores in numbers that will only be limited by the facilities of transportation to be obtained.

These conditions are likely to cause to be precipitated upon us a vast number of immigrants that we would be better without, and that we do not want. Seventy-five years ago, when we had less than one-third of our present population, it was our boast that we "welcomed the oppressed of every clime," that here was a "refuge from Old-World tyranny," where the toiling masses of Europe could come and "enjoy the freedom for which our fathers fought."

That was all very well for a peroration to a Fourth of July oration, but, as a matter of fact, our fathers fought for their own freedom and that of their descendants, rather than for the advantage of foreigners. It was expedient and wise, then, to encourage the incoming of both capital and labor from Europe—though we didn't get much capital. There were then forests to be felled, and vast tracts of virgin soil to be tilled, and iron highways to be built, and spindles to be set humming, and forges to be set clanking, and everywhere, from eastern to western seas there were inviting fields for industry.

And therefore we encouraged immigration. We rushed waist-deep into the Atlantic surf to welcome and hug the men and women of Great Britain, and Germany, and France, and Italy, and Austria and Spain.

Change Mounts and Reach It.



Well, things are different now. Instead of 30,000,000 we have 100,000,000 of people; instead of one railroad running from New York to Buffalo we have nine transcontinental roads between the Atlantic and Pacific; instead of a scarcity of factories and furnaces there are thousands of them whose doors have been closed and whose fires have been extinguished by a combination of Democratic stupidity and European folly.

"The man who provideth not for his own household is worse than the infidel." Is it not time to abate our anxiety for the welfare of the "toiling millions of Europe" and look out a little for our own toiling millions? Is it not time to worry about our unemployed Americans—if we must worry at all—and let John Bull, and Andy McFarlane, and Pat Brannigan, and Jean Crapaud, and Hans von Snigglefrits, and Ramon Gonzales, and Tullio Verdi and Ole Olsen look out for themselves?

Is it not time to change our immigration laws and our naturalization laws? An American-born has to reside twenty-one years in the country before he can vote. Why not require a similar period of residence from an alien before placing in his hands the ballot?

"That weapon that comes down as still
  As snowflakes fall upon the sod.
But executes a freeman's will
  As lightning does the will of God."

"HAVING A GOOD TIME."

Opinions as to what really constitutes a good time seem to be as widely variant as the thought waves of the human cabeza. Fortunately, a number of persons are able to agree at one period, and hence we have the grand lodge gathering of the Elks, the Adventist camp meeting and other wholesale diversions.

Also, it is to be noted that the viewpoint of the individual is subject to change. We have in mind a well-known citizen who as a lad played with dolls until he was 15 and then began to crochet tidies for his aunts. Now his idea of a good time is to hire a brass band and lead a grand march through the Barbary Coast district. He plays with dolls, but they are of French build. They roll their eyes and they sing for their supper.

On the other hand, there is the case of our sedate and self-poised financier whose only depravity is raising dahlias and cutting his own hair. When he was 14 years old he had the time of his life in turning loose a flock of roman candles during the dedicatory prayer in the new village church. The structure was burnt down and several worshipers narrowly escaped cremation, but our friend still reverts to the exploit with barbarous glee. Left to himself, he would doubtless have become one of our most eminent and finished pirates, but his environment pinched his soul and chained his steps. He still gets a good deal of interest out of life—in fact, 2 per cent. a month on some of his loans, but his chief dissipation consists in writing East for seed catalogues, which come to him without money and without price.

One man satisfies his passion by collecting decorated china, while another will find a pleasant afternoon in watching 'em kill hogs at the stock yards. Both men are otherwise normal and are reasonably successful in business, love and other mundane affairs.

The pursuit of pleasure is confined to no class or sex. The women are as variant as the men. There is the lovable old maid who taught school for thirty years and now in her retiring days is learning to smoke cigarettes and drink Isabella cocktails with her lunch. She admits that she always wanted to be tough, but being compelled to set a shining example for a generation crimped her for everything but a game of bean bag or a Chautauqua session. Possibly her ambition is to die in an opium joint where her dreams can hurdle, unhampered, down the aisles of time.

On the other hand, the wildest girl in the eighth grade who ran away with a roller-skating professor when she was 14 years old is now the community model for virtue and circumspection, and her only pastime is embroidering prayer rugs for the rector.

To a larger extent than ever before the quest for enjoyment is pursued out of doors—in the open. Naturally this makes California the playground of the world. With two vast expositions in progress and European resorts closed by the mailed hand of Mars, the Golden State holds about all the shrines and temples of the Goddess of Pleasure. Possibly every diversion known to the alert human brain can be attained in the Los Angeles environment. This may range all the way from shooting grizzlies to taking a straw vote—from the bullet to the ballot, to say nothing of the ballet. Furthermore, the avenues of amusing occupation are open all the year 'round. There is no closed season for Momus. When you can't fish for trout in the mountains, you can angle for yellowtail in the sea. When you can't shoot quail in the foothills you can shoot craps in Chinatown. There are eight or nine months of baseball and then the football season grips the pulse. One may indulge in mountain climbing and surf bathing the same day and still have time for a little game of draw. The beach resorts furnish a bewildering budget of games, sports and diversions, ranging from biplane trips to snoozing in the sand. You can loop the loop in the heavens or sink beneath the sea in a submarine. There is the band concert every day and the dance hall all the time. If a man wants to flirt there are a few debutantes, a married woman, a grass widow and a couple of moving-picture actresses who will meet him half way. He need not perish from hunger, thirst or unrequited affection.

The man with the bag of golf sticks can keep moving every day in the year if he doesn't mind a little rain occasionally. The Canadian may even engage in snowballing on Mt. Wilson on a few mornings of each year. We are soon to have an artificial ice rink for skaters and then practically every pastime of north or south will be open for participation.

Anybody having time, a few dollars in money and an inclination to be amused would have no good reason for ever going east of the Sierras. Whether he wants to use a bow and arrow, a broncho, or a white chip he will here find matter for his fancy.

FORGIVEN AND FORGOTTEN.

It is not the proper caper for a lady to drink too much claret. It is not consistent with the highest ideals of marital felicity to throw rocks and dirt at her husband. But it is an indescribable outrage to hurl sausages at him. It is therefore not to be wondered at that Mrs. Wilhemina Davey of San Jose, who obtained an interlocutory decree of divorce from Frank Davey, although in a cross-complaint he charged her with spoiling his newly-laundered shirt with sausages, should now repent her of her cruelty and ask to have the decree set aside, for all is forgiven and forgotten.

"The disasters at sea are appalling!"

"Yes," replied the Englishman who now favors prohibition; "the only thing a man isn't supposed to take a chance on drowning is his sorrow.—[Washington Star.

ITALY AND THE GREAT WAR.

(CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES)

BY JAMES DAVENPORT WHELPLEY,
Author of "The Trade of the World," etc.

IT IS no longer an academic question for Italy as to her place in the final outcome of the great war, for, with the acquisition of Tripoli, the status of affairs in Mediterranean and Black Sea waters became of vital concern to that country. The rejection by Austria of the demands of Italy for the territory at the head of the Adriatic was inevitable and even had Austria yielded it is more than likely that Italy would have still remained unsatisfied. Her statesmen now have wider ambitions, for, with the rearrangement of Balkan and near-eastern political lines which is to come, Italian interests would be in jeopardy should she remain neutral to the end.

There would be nothing heroic in the participation of Italy in the war any more than there was in the position of Rumania in the Balkan wars. Italy stands to gain in any case except that though through neutrality her territory might be increased to the north—her southern interests would not be so well taken care of by the allies as if she came into their councils.

Italy has an effective army of at least 1,000,000 men. It could be raised to 2,000,000 under pressure. Her navy is strong and well up to modern standards. It is not believed that any large Italian force will be sent north through France, nor will much of a demonstration be made against Austria owing to the difficult character of the country along the Italian frontier. The guarding of her northern boundary, the sending of an expedition across the Adriatic to cooperate with Servia and considerable activity on the part of her navy would probably be the general plan of her operations.

It has been stated that Switzerland will permit the passage of troops should Italy desire to move directly to the north. This is interesting and highly important if true, but further confirmation of this must come before it will be believed.

Should Italy enter this war, it means the end of the Triple Alliance, it means the complete political and military isolation of Germany and Austria. It will also demonstrate the extreme improbability of a close and successful political friendship between a Teutonic and a Latin race. There are a few, very few men now in Italy's public affairs who loom large, for the average Italian now concerned with the affairs of his country is more of a politician than a statesman. The economic position of the country is not particularly strong, social unrest is marked and it was but a year or so ago that the nation was on the verge of revolution. Wars are often the refuge of politicians from political dangers, and the proposed outlet for national activities may prove a safety valve and rest it in a solidarity that no other force could bring about.

To ally themselves with the great forces of the allies now apparently on the road to complete control of the immediate destinies of Europe is an alluring vision for an ambitious and emotional Italian statesman in power for what it may bring to his country and incidentally to himself and his friends and opens a wide field of pleasant anticipation. Military service is compulsory in Italy, and those who have served and are discharged remain reservists.

The effect of an Italian war requiring the full possible war strength of the country would have a very great interest for America in that there are several hundred thousand Italians here who, if they responded to the call would be expected to go home. If they did not respond they would not be able to visit their native land in the future. As Italy's war would be one of aggression rather than a war of defense, there would not be that imperative call to the patriotism of her native sons which would mark a war when her people were called upon to resist aggression and invasion. It is likely, therefore, there will be a certain lukewarmness in the response from Italian communities in foreign lands.

If it were not for the desire on the part of all to shorten the present war by every possible means and thus effect the saving of thousands of lives it would be found that sentiment in England and possibly in France would be in favor of a continued Italian neutrality. Her motives are not above question, and she is averting no danger of attack, but all ethics disappear in time of a war like this, and her co-operation will be welcomed by the allies for what it means to them and the entrance of Italy into the field will add tremendously to the crushing force which is now directed toward Germany and Austria.

RIPPLING RHYMES.

WILLARD OF KANSAS.

Let's sing a few stanzas of Willard of Kansas, while people will list to the song, of Willard, the Milo, from barnyard and silo, of Willard the gentle and strong. The White Race was groping in gloom, dumbly hoping that someone with weakness for gore, would take up its quarrel and bring back the laurel that Johnsing triumphantly wore. And Jess, he was feeding the porkers and weeding the corn rows and earning his fare, when quivering over the wheat and the clover there came our loud wail of despair. "I guess," said the giant, all calm, self-reliant, "I'll slope from this sweet, restful scene, until I have swatted Jack Johnson and potted the wreath and a bunch of long green." So, tanned, gingham-shirted, the plow he deserted, and studied the use of his dukes; and critics who saw him were quick to outlaw him and brand him the cheapest of flukes. The prize he was after, nor joshing nor laughter could take his bright eyes from the bays, and we who did score him are bowing before him and sending up paeans of praise. Oh, Willard of Kansas, from both the Nyanzas away to the suburbs of Troy, the White Race is bringing its homage and singing the praise of the Bold Farmer Boy!" WALT MASON.

REDUCE YOUR TAXES!

VOTE "YES" ON ANNEXATION OF SAN FERNANDO VALLEY!

Annexation of territory contiguous to Los Angeles is the only method of securing an immediate revenue from our $30,000,000 aqueduct, and materially reducing the great burden of taxation now fairly breaking the backs of Los Angeles property owners!

Who has been spending thousands of dollars in an effort to block this annexation?

Who would profit by the defeat of annexation?

What interests would gain if our $3,500,000 municipal power plant, which will soon be completed, was rendered useless?

Who would rejoice if (by voting down annexation and cutting off a market for water) this plant was deprived of a sufficient flow of water to generate electrical power?

Do you think the Electrical Power Interests want annexation?

The best legal opinion admits that grave complications will arise if the city sells water outside its own boundaries. In this event it would be compelled to sell water at rates fixed by the State Railway Commission to any part of the 240 miles of territory crossed by the aqueduct—Owens River Valley, Antelope Valley, Mojave Desert, etc.

Los Angeles has everything to gain by annexation of contiguous territory—and nothing to lose.

In what possible way could annexation mean anything but a direct, immediate, financial benefit to you, Mr. Taxpayer?

It may be several years before a drop of aqueduct water is sold EXCEPT through annexing adjacent territory—and you, Mr. Taxpayer, would bear the crushing interest burden in the meantime!

When annexed to Los Angeles, the great and rapidly developing San Fernando Valley will provide a big immediate revenue from the purchase of the water itself, and will also immediately assume its proportion of the city's other heavy bonded indebtedness—harbor bonds, power bonds, etc.

Annexation of San Fernando Valley will mean good, hard round dollars in your pocket!

Vote "YES" at the primaries Tuesday.

Taxpayers' Protective League.

Shall San Fernando Valley Annexation District be annexed to the City of Los Angeles?	YES	☒

BUDGET PRUNING IS NEXT ORDER.

CUT NEAR THREE MILLIONS, COUNCIL'S PROMISE.

Various Departments in Municipal Organization Ask for Large Excess Over Allowances Made for Last Fiscal Year—Committee Promised to Trim Expenses.

Various city departments want an increase of $2,876,802 over the allowances granted by the City Council for the last fiscal year, but they will get a whole lot less than they asked for if the remarks of various Councilmen—mostly candidates for re-election—are to be taken as any indication of how these Councilmen will vote on the budget.

The total figures on the 1915-1916 budget were presented to the Council yesterday by City Auditor Myers and referred to the Budget Committee, consisting of Mr. Whiffen, Mr. Williams and Mr. Conwell, upon whom will devolve the duty of paring off nearly $3,000,000 from the various requests from departments.

Estimated needs of departments for the next fiscal year, $9,815,548.

Allowed departments for 1914-1915, $6,938,746.

Increase asked over last year's allowance, $2,876,802.

Departmental receipts, $435,000.

Income from franchises, interest and delinquent taxes, $190,000.

Income from liquor licenses, $680,000; other licenses, $220,000; total miscellaneous and license revenue, $1,625,000.

Taxes on a valuation of $415,800,000 (the same as last year,) $4,075,000.

Total estimated income for the year, $5,700,000. To this the City Auditor adds a reserve and unexpended fund estimated at $1,300,000. Recapitulation of these figures shows that according to the Auditor's estimates, Los Angeles will have about $7,000,000 income for the year and the exact deduction to be made in the budget pruning operation will be $2,815,548.

Members of the Council pointed out that the City Auditor was inclined to optimism in his estimate of $1,300,000 reserve and unexpended balances in view of the fact that already four raids of $10,000 each have been made on the reserve fund and at least two more raids of the usual $10,000 each will have to be made before the end of the fiscal year. At various and sundry times during the campaign each member of the Council has expressed himself against any action that looks like increasing the assessment for 1915-1916, and this pledge was renewed yesterday.

PARK BOARD PRODDED. VOTERS ASKED TO HELP.

The City Council whittled out a sharp stick and went after the Park Commission yesterday and then voted to turn the prod over to the voters of the city with the request that the public get after the commission for its failure to accept or permit the acceptance of Col. Griffith's offer to provide a Greek theater and an observatory and hall of science in Griffith Park. This was done through a resolution proposing to put on the ballot at the next general election June 1 the following question:

"Shall the action of the Council in accepting the gifts of Col. G. J. Griffith for the construction of a Greek theater, an observatory and hall of science in Griffith Park, and its intention to conform to the conditions of said gifts, be approved?"

The old controversy between the Council and Park Commission came up when Col. Griffith offered $100,000 to start the work providing the Mayor appoint a committee of three to look after the expenditure. The Park Commission stepped in and said that no such work should be done excepting under the direction of the commission—and there the matter has rested.

FIRST KICK REGISTERED. NEW RATES ADVERTISED.

Advertising of telephone, gas and electric light and power rates was authorized by the City Clerk yesterday and, incidentally, tentative "kicks" on telephone rates were started over the wires to the Board of Public Utilities. The first man, name and business unknown to the board, wanted to know "why in the name of common sense and municipal decency" the board proposed to saddle most of the cost of operating the local telephone systems on him. Commissioner Lane referred the inquirer to Chief Engineer J. E. Barker.

"Whaadeye mean I have to pay 3 cents a call when I have 300 calls a day? Don't you know I can't stand for anything like that?" came over the telephone to the engineer. Then followed a conversation which was apparently far from satisfactory on both sides and the business man with 300 calls a day staring him in the face promised to present his protest at the Council at the proper time.

Bits from City Records.

Protests against sewering a block of Tenth avenue from Adams street north and against the assessment district for the acquiring of a long, narrow strip between Verdugo road and the railroad tracks for park purposes were set by the Council for May 12 at 9 a.m.

The City Engineer was instructed by the Council to prepare plans for the improvement by private contract of the north side of the Exposition boulevard roadway between Figueroa street and McClintock avenue.

The bond of Col. Lewis Ginger for the construction of the scenic incline in Griffith Park was approved by the Council.

Routine fire department affairs were handled in short order by the Fire Commission yesterday and after approving the pay roll the commission adjourned to the Fiesta parade.

Appetite Follows Good Digestion

Nearly everyone indulges their appetite and the digestive organs are abused, resulting in a congestion of poisonous waste that clogs the bowels and causes much misery and distress.

The most effective remedy to correct this condition is the combination of simple laxative herbs with pepsin, known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. This is a natural, pleasant-tasting remedy, gentle, yet positive in action, and quickly relieves indigestion, constipation, sick headache, belching, etc. Drug stores sell Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin at fifty cents and one dollar a bottle, and in thousands of homes it is the indispensable family remedy. For a free trial bottle write Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 452 Washington St., Monticello, Ills.

STRANDED WITH ONLY A LETTER.

HUSBAND DOESN'T SEEM TO CARE FOR WIFE HERE.

She Received One Loving Token from Him and it was Written by a Friend—She Wants More, but They Come not, and so She is Suing for Divorce.

Rebecca Tarshes is stranded in this city and it is all because her husband won't send her money to return to New York. What's the use of having a husband when he seems satisfied to have her go her way and he insists on paddling his own canoe? So. Mrs. Tarshes sued for divorce and told her story to Judge Taft yesterday.

One fact stands out clear in her evidence. Once in her married life she received an affectionate letter from Mr. Tarshes. It was a loving letter, but, although it had Mr. Tarshes's name signed to it, he did not write the loving words, because he cannot read or write. The presumption is that a friend wrote it for him and took for granted that it should be the kind of a letter a loving husband writes a loving wife.

Mrs. Tarshes wanted more of that kind of a letter, but she could not get a rise out of Mr. Tarshes. She heard from him no more. Her sons went back to their father because he sent them tickets, but she—well, she did not seem to be wanted.

The court took the matter under submission.

NEW TRIAL IN BYRNES BUNCO CASE.

Presiding Judge York yesterday signed the order which brings James W. Byrnes, convicted of buncoing G. P. Friese at a fake horse race, down from San Quentin to be retried on the charge. Byrnes was tried by Judge Finlayson and convicted by a jury after a hard fight to declare that he was not the man who obtained about $5000 from Mr. Friese. He set up an alibi, but Mr. Friese identified him as the man behind the desk in the betting room at Venice.

On appeal the Appellate Court ordered a new trial on the ground that the court had erred in admitting certain evidence. Mr. Byrnes pleaded his innocence. He endeavored to show he was not at Venice on that day and also that, instead of running a fake betting game, he had been farming on his ranch in the San Fernando Valley.

Mr. Friese came from the Middle West and, according to his story, was approached at the Pacific Electric station and conducted to Venice, where he was inveigled into betting on the races. The scheme alleged to have been worked by the gamblers to ship their victims out of the city failed in the case of Friese, who caused the arrest of Lee Rial, one of the alleged principals, who is doing time in the penitentiary.

SHOULD "BATCH" IT. NO WIFE FOR FIREMAN.

Edward H. Ricks, a member of the Los Angeles fire department, ought to have stayed a bachelor and paid a tax for being a bachelor. This is the conclusion the court reached after hearing the evidence of Mrs. Louisa Ricks in her divorce suit yesterday. She told Judge Taft that Mr. Ricks was content to have her earn a weekly stipend, and when she remonstrated he told her she could trot along.

"I worked two years," she said, "and I got tired. I wanted a home and children, but my husband did not like family life."

Mr. Ricks did not dispute his wife's assertions. He said he was not happy and he did not care to live married any longer.

"Was this frame of mind induced by any fault of your wife?" the court asked.

Mr. Hicks admitted that it was not.

"And you are still of that mind?"

Mr. Hicks admitted that he was. The court told Mrs. Ricks to take her decree.

CHANGE QUARTERS. NEW PRESIDING JUDGE.

Judge York moved his lares and penates from Department One to Department Ten yesterday, and put in the morning signing orders and doing the hundred and one things a presiding judge is called upon to perform. The mounted head of a deer occupies a place of honor. The deer was shot by Judge York in the mountains back of La Crescenta.

Judge Wood, who closed a busy year as presiding judge, moved into Department Fourteen, and Judge McCormick, who held down that bench, goes to Department One. Judge Wood leaves as presiding judge a record for hustling. He instituted a number of reforms which he succeeded in carrying into effect, and worked so hard that his health suffered. Judge York was not next in order to preside, but takes the place of Judge Rives, who desired to continue the work of the Probate Court, where he is an authority.

EXECUTRIX SUIT. REAL VS. WOULD-BE.

Mrs. Annie E. Luscombe promised to make Jennie Morton executrix of her will. When Mrs. Luscombe died and her will was read it was found that Avis E. Angst had been selected. Jennie filed suit against Avis to collect $1000 for services rendered Mrs. Luscombe.

The story is that Jennie Morton was the confidential secretary of Mrs. Luscombe when the latter lived at the Old People's Home, San Francisco. She wrote her letters, kept her accounts, made her purchases and ran her errands. Mrs. Luscombe was old and fretful, weak and incompetent, according to Jennie. After Mrs. Luscombe's death, Jennie sent in her claim for $1000 and it was rejected by Avis.

COURT PARAGRAPHS. PROCEEDINGS IN BRIEF.

WANTS ANOTHER CHANCE. While Miss Hilda Anderson, 19, was on parole from the Whittier State School, she met Edward J. Feig, married and a vaudeville actor. He is 24. The result was that Mr. Feig was arrested and in default of bail went to the County Jail. Yesterday he pleaded guilty and asked for probation. He was released on his own recognizance, to appear before Judge Taft next Saturday. The charge is contributing to the girl's dependency.

"YES," ISN'T IN HER VOCABULARY.

SMALL MISS SHOWS INGENUITY IN AVOIDING WORD SHE HAS NEVER SPOKEN.

There is no such word as "yes" in the vocabulary of Harriet Jane Annan. The 3-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Annan of No. 141 Bond street has steadfastly avoided the use of the little affirmative word from the time she began to talk. It appears she was born with a natural aversion to "yes."

Harriet Jane Annan,

A little miss who refuses steadfastly to add the word "yes" to her vocabulary.

Harriet Jane shows ingenuity in avoiding the use of the word which brings delight to lovesick swains when they ask an important question. She uses the word "no" freely. It was one of the first words spoken by her and is a marked favorite with her.

There are times, of course, when it is imperative to indicate willingness. For instance, if you should inquire of Harriet Jane, "Will you have some candy?" you may be sure she will not "cut off her nose to spite her face" by saying "No." She will do one of three things: Nod her head, give a broad smile of affirmation or simply say, "All right."

"We have been unable to overcome our little daughter's natural aversion to the word 'yes,'" Mr. Annan said yesterday at the Alexandria, where he is a member of the hotel staff. "From the first she appears to have appreciated the full significance of that little word and has let it alone. She refuses to learn it and the very mention of the word irritates her. I think she must get this inclination from her mother.

"If Harriet Jane's aversion to the little word continues, I see the finish of all future admirers. When she doesn't know how to say 'Yes' how will she be able to make a Romeo happy? I think we will have her at home a long time."

GIRLS' MAY DAY FETE.

Twenty-five Young Misses Enjoy Themselves on Lawn of Their School—Have a Queen.

With a May Day queen and a May pole dance as features of the entertainment, the students in the Misses M. Bennette school held their picturesque annual celebration on the lawn of the school yesterday. The May queen, chosen by the students by popular vote, was Miss Elizabeth Ma golden-haired and blue-eyed. Page to her was Genevieve Bennette. The heralds were Clinton Campbell and Llewellyn Scott.

The programme opened with a procession of twenty-five girls in white escorting the queen to her throne. The queen was crowned with pleasant ceremony and hailed with a Coronation May song. A solo dance was executed by Lorraine Pardee. Other features included a piano solo, Dorothy Chase; march and drill, group dance with Irene Young, rythmic movement, fairy queen dance; piano solo by Alice Cherry; vocal solo by Dorothy B ner, English May dance, May pole dance and "Good-by" song.

TEN YEARS' PROGRESS.

Postoffice Figures Show a Steady Increase in Business for the Past Decade.

The local postoffice receipts for April amounted to $186,389.21, as against $182,938.14 for the corresponding month in 1914, or an increase of $3451.07.

RELIGIOUS CONVICT?

Chief Deputy Sittel, in the office of the United States Marshal, will take A. C. Brown, convicted of smuggling smoking opium and sentenced to a year and a day to San Quentin, this morning. Brown professes to have experienced religion and says that after his term he will return to his old home in Imperial county and live an upright life. In the meantime his wife will try to hold the ranch, a proceeding that has been made doubly hard by Brown's own conduct and lack of financial knowledge.

She is also to be the special guest of the San Diego exposition board while in the southern city.

On Thursday, Friday and Saturday of next week Mrs. Pennybacker will be the guest of Los Angeles club women in company with Mrs. Palmer, and is to speak to the club women of Los Angeles district at a public meeting to be held at 3 o'clock Thursday afternoon.

Mrs. Herbert A. Cable as president of Los Angeles district, will be in charge of the first lady in clubdom during her Los Angeles stay, assisted by an able committee composed of Mrs. W. S. Bartlett, president of Ebell Club; Mrs. R. J. Waters, president of the Friday Morning Club; Mrs. J. E. Cowles, Mrs. Carrie Stone Freeman and Mrs. R. C. Shipman, the later corresponding secretary of the Los Angeles district.

While in the city Mrs. Pennybacker is to be the house guest of Mrs. Cowles.

She will join the federation special, which is to carry the presidents and delegates of clubs in the southern part of the State to San Francisco to attend the fourteenth annual State federation, which leaves here Saturday night, the 15th inst., or on the boat, as the Transportation Committee is still awaiting the decision of the ladies before definite plans are made. Mrs. Frank Garrett, Mrs. Frank Caldwell and Mrs. Beatrix Duane are in charge of transportation. The following rates have been secured by the committee: Ten dollars and seventy cents round trip by boat from Los Angeles to San Francisco for 100, or $12.50 for less than 100, leaving Friday, May 14, and returning within thirty days; $13.95 for special train of 100 delegates, going and returning at the same time, leaving Los Angeles at 8 o'clock p.m. May 15, and returning at 8 o'clock p.m. May 24, or $15.00 for less than 100 delegates, leaving May 15 and returning any time within ten days.

Sleeping berths will be $1 to $2.50 extra.

Mrs. Young Coming.

Another distinguished club woman who is on the general federation board and who is expected in Los Angeles on Tuesday, the 11th, for a visit in the J. E. Cowles home, is Mrs. William B. Young of Jacksonville, Fla. Mr. Cowles and Mr. Young are kinsmen. Mrs. Young is chairman of printing on the national board and is en route to the general biennial council meeting in Portland.

On Ventura Visit.

Los Angeles district president, Mrs. Herbert A. Cable, went up to Ventura Thursday to speak before the County Association of Women's Clubs, returning home only Friday. Twenty clubs are represented in the county, with a membership of 649.

Ready for New Move.

Mrs. Cable reports that the county is likely to redistrict, should the proposed redistricting plan carry at the State convention.

This is one of the potent subjects which is to be settled.

Mrs. Ella Westland, who was president of the southern district last year and who refused the State presidency two years ago, is a strong advocate for county federation, as is Mrs. Bradford Woodbridge, who was recently elected president of the northern district—the district which is to furnish a State president for 1915-16.

Speaking recently before club women on the proposed plan, Mrs. Woodbridge, who would be called upon to sacrifice her own official honors should the measure pass, said:

"The club movement has grown so much that the district plan is not altogether successful. The district covers so much territory that it is well nigh impossible for a district president to reach the clubs or for department chairman to personally visit them, since there is no fund from which expenses may be drawn. The district conventions are becoming unwieldy—witness the fact that no invitation has been extended the northern district for the 1916 convention.

"The county is the unit in State government," added Mrs. Woodbridge, "and there is no gainsaying the fact that a woman's club does build up a community wherever it is. The woman's club is now a recognized factor by the Chamber of Commerce, County Boards of Supervisors and County Farm Advisers.

"The county federation would mean the getting together of the live wires of the county; getting better acquainted; discussing county problems; would help settle differences; would overcome petty jealousies; would mean that the women who are organized would be sought after as co-workers in all movements for the upbuilding and bettering of conditions for the county. The County Board of Supervisors, the County Chamber of Commerce, the County Board of Health, the County Horticulturist, County Forester, County Farm Adviser, County Superintendent of Schools; in fact, all county organizations would co-operate and the Women's County Federation would be additionally useful and efficient in advancing the interests of all county undertakings."

While special importance is attached to the explanations given by prominent club women in what they deem to be beneficial to club programs, there are to be found many opposed to the plan. Both sides are to be presented thoroughly before final action is taken.

Tuesday District Meeting.

The conference called by the district president for Tuesday afternoon brought together over 100 clubwomen, either in their capacity of club president or delegate to the coming State Federation. By a vote of the Executive Board, the meeting was called for the purpose of discussing and deciding in conference what to do with the proposed changes in the constitution and by-laws governing the State body, and the redistricting plan, though the latter was quite overshadowed by the constitution-by-law changes.

Mrs. Henry DeNyse of Riverside was present to champion her redistricting measure, as was Mrs. Calvin Hartwell, chairman of the Special Committee on Revision of By-laws. Other prominent clubwomen included Mrs. W. C. Mushet, the State vice-president; Mrs. Andrew Francisco, State auditor; Mrs. Robert Burdette (whom it seems good to have back in active club work;) Mrs. William Jones of the revision committee; Mrs. Lloyd Harmon, district secretary; Mrs. Ella Westland of the southern district; Mrs. H. J. Slater, who is on the nominating committee for Los Angeles district; Mrs. Charles Wiley of the credentials committee; Mrs. Bartlett of Ebell Club, and others.

Miss Margaret Townsend,

A young violinist, who was featured at the Montebello Woman's Club social Thursday evening, and the new Greenwood school, where the event was held. It was really the dedication of the pretty structure.

Mrs. I. W. Gleason, district parliamentarian, ruled that there was nothing in the State constitution and by-laws to prevent the body indorsing measures, though they cannot legislate, inasmuch as they are but a part of a higher body. They took no action, however, on any proposed measure.

Mrs. Cable presided.

The Los Angeles district headquarters are to be at the Cadillac during the convention.

Tuesday's conference was notable for one thing in particular—a strong expression in favor of annihilating political proclivities in State Federation. Women actively engaged in politics were praised for the splendid work they are doing in public service, but the consensus of opinion was strongly for barring them from the board, allowing them to center their efforts in public service. There were many who opposed it, understand, but had the subject been put to a test vote, it would have carried.

One thing was accomplished in the meeting—a broader vision of the proposed changes and an awakening to the possibilities of manipulation of clubs by political parties.

And the women will go to the State Federation better able to discuss and act intelligently as a whole, rather than according to individual opinion, which, after all, was largely accomplishing the desire of the meeting.

Personally, Mrs. Hartwell is pleased that the State board has not indorsed her measures, from an ethical standpoint. It leaves the federation body free to act, without pressure, which, after all, is best.

Festival of Great Beauty.

The Friday Morning Club has presented some wonderful programmes, but none will go down on club annals as a greater success than Friday's "Festival of Festivals," which was conceived by Mrs. Randall Hutchinson, chairman of art, and arranged by her, assisted by Mrs. Estelle Heartt Dreyfus, chairman of music, and Mrs. Benjamin Goldman, chairman of drama.

The production was exquisitely costumed, and presented in a garden of great beauty, with a wooded background with flowering boughs of pink and white blossoms and a statue of "Peace" conspicuously placed on a high pedestal—the model of Julia Bracken Wendt's great work, which was given to the public's view for the first time upon this auspicious occasion.

Seemingly all the good things that have been made immortal in literature, told in story or sung in rhyme, from the remotest period of early times down to the modern present were embodied in the pretty festival—doubly attractive coming as it did on the eve of Los Angeles' great fiestas.

O'Shea's canvasses were hung on the auditorium walls, as if to prepare the great audience for the spring scenes to be presented.

Our city's best musicians were present, to carol songs typical of the countries in lovely pageants, among the artists being Mrs. Gertrude Ross, whose desert songs were important features, sung by Mrs. Permelia Gale, a delightful song bird of Chicago, whose passage of flight brought her to Los Angeles for just one day and who gave some charming songs. Mrs. Grace Widney Mabee and Mrs. L. J. Selby have never been heard to greater advantage nor in lovlier settings, giving their selections en costume. Mrs. Lucia Forest Eastman, whose harp selections held those present enthralled, gave for an encore Mendelssohn's "Spring Song."

The Friday Morning Club recently observed its twenty-fourth anniversary and the birthday of its pastor emeritus, Mrs. J. A. Osgood, in delightful fashion. Mrs. Cornelius Cole sent hundreds of roses with which to decorate.

Hollywood.

The Wednesday programme of the Hollywood Woman's Club will consist of a business meeting, annual reports and election of officers, and musical numbers by Miss Annie Merrill, planiste. Hostesses for the day are Mrs. E. J. Wilbur, Miss J. H. Dwire, Mrs. George H. Dunlop, Mrs. J. E. Owen, Mrs. B. C. Edwards and Mrs. Bernard Brown. On next Wednesday, also, there will be a meeting of Mrs. Garrett's Shakespeare class at 10:30 o'clock and a meeting of Mrs. Gardner's civics section at 1:30 o'clock, with an address by Mrs. Lawrence Ernst on "Universal Peace," to both of which sessions club members will be welcome.

D.A.R. Meeting.

On Wednesday the Los Angeles Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution will be entertained at the residence of Mrs. C. W. Bozarth, No. 2057 Harvard boulevard, Mrs. Marion P. Waite assisting. A board meeting, presided over by the Regent, Mrs. C. C. Cottle, will precede the regular meeting. Annual reports for the closing year will be read, and the election of officers for the ensuing year will take place.

Ebell Club Delegates.

Los Westcott Beck is to appear before the members of Ebell Club tomorrow on his lecture, "A Prospector and His Dog on the American Deserts."

Mr. Beck has spent years in saving lives and in discovering water holes and marking them for the benefit of humanity.

The following delegates are to represent Ebell Club at the fourteenth annual California Federation of Women's Clubs in San Francisco next month: Mrs. C. C. Ashley (chairman,) Mrs. Felix C. Howes, Mrs. Lyman Farwell, Mrs. E. C. Gates, Mrs. N. E. Wilson, Mrs. Arthur Holliday, Mrs. T. McCaffery, Mrs. William R. Mall, Mrs. Robert J. Burdette, Mrs. L. A. Gould, Miss Ada Dryden, Miss Grace Monk, Miss Winifred Waite, Miss Augusta Lamb, Mrs. T. W. T. Richards and Mrs. C. W. Allen. Mrs. B. E. Jackson will go as alternate.

The music section of Ebell, under the curatorship of Mrs. Harmon D. Ryus, has made a real "find" in the person of Mrs. Ethel Graham-Lynde, a recent newcomer, who held the brilliant audience attending the music section on Wednesday in rapt attention as she gave an interpretative lecture of two operas, Tschaikowski's "Eugene Onegin" and Richard Strauss's "Ariadne," also talking upon modern opera tendencies. Mrs. Lynde's recital proved a scholarly interpretation of these masterpieces, painted deftly into a word picture with masterly power. Miss Marjorie Hicks gave the musical illustrations perfectly.

Already plans are afoot for the one big musical climax at Ebell which is the event of the year, if one may judge from last year's scintillating programme. The talented curator is just perfecting her outline and will give out no details as yet.

Tropico Club.

The Tropico Thursday Afternoon Club will be entertained at the home of Mrs. A. H. Gaarder, No. 323 North Glendale avenue, Thursday afternoon. Mrs. Gaarder will be assisted by Mrs. Mary Ayres, Mrs. Frank E. Peters, Mrs. J. A. Stone and Dr. Jessie A. Russell. The annual election of officers will be held.

City Teachers' Club.

At its meeting Monday afternoon in Trinity Auditorium the City Teachers' Club elected on the nominating board Miss Minnie Hughes, Miss Ida Glasscock, Mrs. Harriet Hollingsworth, Miss Everina Mayne and Miss Marbutt. This committee will prepare the ballots and send to each of the 1200 members a sample, which will be filled out and returned, showing the preferential ballot. Election will be held in a month.

Woman's City Club.

May 3—No meeting.

May 10—"Some Things I have Learned," Katherine Philips Edson.

May 17—"Two Important City Departments;" Public Library, Dr. Joseph Glass, Everett R. Perry librarian, and Gertrude Darlow; Nursing Commission, Mrs. H. R. Boynton, assisted by members of the commission; primary election.

May 31—Short talks by candidates for the City Council; annual election.

June 1—Annual address by the president; installation of officers and members of the board.

A Candidates' Committee has been appointed to receive suggestions for nominations for the primary election May 17; Mrs. J. J. Conaty, chairman, phone 20821; Mrs. W. H. K. Bent, phone 31444; Mrs. P. P. Morrison, Boyle 2800.

Since Mrs. E. R. Brainerd's consent to allow her name to be put up for president her unanimous election is assured. Mrs. Brainerd is a universal favorite and it seems likely that there will be no other name presented for the highest office it is in the power of the hundreds of women who compose the personnel of the club to bestow. Mrs. Frank Garrett is slated for vice-president.

To Hold Exhibit.

Members of the Crafts Study Club will have an interesting exhibit next Thursday at the Clark from 2 to 5 and from 7 to 10 o'clock p.m. Among the members of the club who will exhibit specimens of their work are Mrs. F. M. Dimick, Mrs. C. L. Powell, Mrs. D. L. Peters, Mrs. Henry Henderson, Mrs. Fred Bacon, Mrs. Everitte Barnes, Mrs. William Thomas, Mrs. William Colwell, Mrs. J. H. de La Monte, Mrs. George Baker Anderson, Miss Lillian Fletcher, Miss Charlotte Crane, Miss Rose Conner and Miss Ruth Holder. Crane, basketry; Miss Mitten, bookbindery; Miss Wolvogel, embroideries; Miss Gertrude Lewis, books and boxes; Miss Leta Horlocker and Miss Daisy Stout, keramics.

Wilfert and Miss Mabel Kennedy were hostesses, assisted in receiving by the executive board and Mrs. Ella D. Townsend. The punch bowl was presided over by Miss Martha Duncan, assisted by a number of girls.

Congress of Mothers.

The annual meeting of the First District Congress of Mothers was held yesterday at Blanchard Hall. It was an all-day session, beginning at 10:15 o'clock in the morning. The principal speaker was Prof. W. L. Stevens, superintendent of schools at Long Beach, who took for his subject, "Vocational Guidance and Industrial Education." He stated that he is very much in favor of vocational training in all public schools. A motion was unanimously carried that the District Federation send its president, Mrs. C. H. Ritchie, to the national convention, which convenes in Portland, Or., shortly, with instructions to vote against changing the name of the Mtthers' Congress to the Child Welfare Congress; also to vote against raising the national per capita dues from 5 to 10 cents.

Officers elected are Mrs. C. H. Ritchie of Venice, president; Mrs. Charles Dillman of Pasadena, Mrs. Harry Huston of Los Angeles, Mrs. Philip Crockett, Mrs. McKennedy of Pomona and Mrs. D. Z. The Doctor's Advice

by Dr. Lewis Baker

The questions answered below are general in character, the symptoms or diseases are given and the answers will apply in any case of similar nature.

Those wishing further advice, free, may address Dr. Lewis Baker, College Bldg., College-Ellwood Sts., Dayton, O., enclosing self-addressed stamped envelope for reply. Full name and address must be given, but only initials or fictitious name will be used in my answers. The prescriptions can be filled at any well-stocked drug store. Any druggist can order of wholesaler.

"Young Women:" "For several years I have doctored for distressing stomach symptoms, such as sour stomach, belching, accumulations of gas, heartburn, drowsiness after eating, sleeplessness, coated tongue, bad breath, inertia, and I am getting thin and weak, my complexion is poor, and so far have not been improved by the medicines I have taken."

Answer: Your need is medicine to aid digestion, overcome dyspepsia and tone up the stomach, liver and bowels. I advise you to take "double-four stomach and bowel medicine," sold in sealed packets, by druggists, with complete direction.

Miss Adele writes: "My hair is combing out, my scalp itches and dandruff is very annoying, and I want something to cure these conditions."

Answer: For hair and scalp troubles I have never found anything to equal the beneficial results of a thorough treatment of plain yellow minyol. It is cooling, cleansing and invigorating, and thousands now use it regularly as a hair and scalp tonic.

Henry J. C. writes: "Something seems to be wrong with my system and I don't know what it is. I have huge puffs under my eyes, my eyes are bloodshot in morning and my feet and ankles are swollen. Sometimes I have chills and feel weak and tired most of the time."

Answer: Your eliminating organs, such as liver and kidneys, are in need of treatment. Begin taking balmwort tablets at once. Get them in sealed tubes with full directions of any well-stocked druggist.

C. M. C. asks: "Please relieve me of a coated tongue, foul breath, headache, constipation and general ill health.

Answer: If habitually constipated, you should take three-grain sulpherb tablets (not sulphur) and arouse the organs which eliminate waste material from your body. These tablets purify the blood and improve the health by acting on the liver, kidneys and bowels. Obtain in sealed tubes with full directions.

"Sarah" says: "Can anything be done for one who is bothered with rheumatism? If so, please reply."

Answer: You can be relieved of your rheumatism if you take the following: Mix by shaking well and take a teaspoonful at meal times and at bed time and you will soon be relieved. Comp. essence cardiol, 1 oz.; comp. fluid balmwort, 1 oz.; syrup sarsaparilla comp., 5 ozs.; wine of colchicum, one-half oz.; sodium salicylate, 4 drams; iodide of potassium, 2 drams.

Miss Bertie L. asks: "What remedy can you recommend to reduce obesity safely? I want to reduce about thirty pounds."

Answer: I rely on five-grain arbolene tablets as being the most effective and convenient treatment to reduce abnormal fat. Druggists supply this in sealed tubes with complete directions. After the first few days a pound a day is not too much reduction.

Mrs. M. D. D. asks: "Do you think it is possible for me to increase my weight from 97 pounds to about 125 pounds?"

Answer: Yes, I believe that the regular use of a special tonic tablet will do this for you, as it has for thousands of others. Ask your druggist for three-grain hyponuclane tablets in sealed package with full directions. Take them for several months to get the full benefit.

"Ray" writes: "Can a sufferer from bronchial trouble be relieved? Doctors do not seem to help me. What would you suggest?"

Answer: To relieve chronic cold, sore throat, bronchitis, I would advise the use of concentrated essence mentho-laxene. Purchase this at any drug store in 2½ oz. packages and mix according to directions given on bottle and you will very shortly be relieved of all bronchial trouble. This will not only relieve, but will correct, and is very pleasant to take.

M. G. W. asks: "What can one do for a bad catarrh condition? I have suffered a long time and am unable to find relief. In addition to catarrh in throat and nostrils, I am also affected with Pelvic Catarrh (or leucorrhea.)"

Answer: A good tonic and builder such as three-grain hypo-nuclane tablets, should build up your vitality, while using antiseptic Vilane Powder for local treatment. Get either a two or eight-ounce package of the powder and complete directions with package will tell you how to use.

John C. L. writes: "I find my natural strength and nervous system failing me. I do not recuperate as of yore. My food and rest seem not to benefit as they should. Am weak, despondent and unable to perform the duties which were assumed earlier in life, while my ambition for work and pleasure is slowly going."

Answer: I think a powerful, harmless tonic and nervine medicine will rejuvenate and restore the functions of digestion, assimilation and elimination by invigorating the nervous system. Obtain three-grain cadomene tablets, packed in sealed tubes, and take as per directions accompanying.—[Advertisement.

Women's Clubs.

D.A.R.

The Daughters of the American Revolution of Southern California recently held a reciprocity luncheon at the Union League Club. Preceding the luncheon the State Regent, Mrs. Maynard Force Thayer, had called a meeting of the advisory board, consisting of State officers, State chairmen and regents of chapters or their alternates. Fourteen of the twenty chapters in the southern district were represented. Two interesting plans for the future were discussed—a picnic on Flag Day, in which Sons of the Revolution and Children of the American Revolution are to be invited to join and at which a programme appropriate to the occasion will be carried out; also a garden party for September, when Mrs. William Cumming Story, recently elected president-general, and several hundred eastern Daughters are expected.

About 100 were present. Among those speaking were Mrs. Frank Gibson, on "Citizenship;" Mrs. Caleb S. Denny of Indianapolis, former State chairman for Indiana of the National Old Trails Road, told of her experiences; Mrs. A. S. C. Forbes told of her work in having the El Camino Real marked with mission bells through the old trails road. Many visitors from other States were present.

Highland Park.

While no chairman has been appointed and the list is but tentative, it is expected that Mrs. C. A. Heyward, Mrs. Jane Beatty, Mrs. McKinney and Mrs. W. D. Neil will represent Highland Park Ebell Club at the coming State federation. Mrs. Frank Trask, the president, is also going.

Eschscholtzia Chapter.

Eschscholtzia chapter, D.A.R., will meet at Ebell clubhouse Tuesday at 2:30 p.m., Mrs. James Hyde Forbes presiding. There will be the election of officers. Visiting daughters and guests admitted at 3 p.m.

Glendale.

A booster tea will be given Saturday, both afternoon and evening, at the residence of Mrs. Mattison B. Jones, No. 106 Orange street, for the purpose of completing plans for the Glendale Festival of Fruits and Flowers, which is being held under the auspices of the Glendale Tuesday Club, assisted by other prominent civic organizations.

The candidates for queen will be presented and the contest for the selection of the queen will be inaugurated. The winner of the contest will ride in a beautiful float of Shasta daisies in the queen's night parade Thursday, the 27th, and the queen will be crowned at the High School building during the floral programme. There will be a poster contest among the school children for the drawing of festival posters, the winner to be selected at the booster tea social Saturday. Another feature will be a better baby contest, with medals for the best babies. A baby parade will be held Saturday afternoon. A free auto ride is to be given visitors every hour of the day. The exhibits of fruits and flowers are being arranged.

South Side Ebell.

The recently-organized South Side Ebell Club appears to fill a long-felt want in the community, as each succeeding session shows increased attendance and interest. In view of the near approach of the primary election, the meeting of Thursday morning was under the auspices of the civics section and a number of candidates were present to present their views and attitudes on the various subjects now claiming public attention.

Alhambra.

One of the largest assemblages of the season gathered at the Alhambra Wednesday Afternoon clubhouse to listen to the programme arranged from the Peer Gynt suite and given by Mrs. J. R. Fleming. Preceding her interpretations Mrs. Fleming told the story of the poem.

Wednesday promises to be one of the busiest occasions of the club year, as the election of officers will be held, and much of the business incident to the welfare of the club discussed. On the 12th and 13th inst. the first flower show in the history of the city will be given under the auspices of the Wednesday Afternoon Club. For this event all energies are being directed as it is hoped to make of the affair an annual custom.

Who the Men and Women Are that Seek Your Franchises, and What About Them—A Guide for Careful Voters in Los Angeles.

WHAT do you know about the individual qualifications of the 166 candidates to be voted for next Tuesday?

Seldom has there been a field clogged with so much mediocre timber; rarely has there been a municipal primary in Los Angeles where the few really qualified candidates have stood out so prominently in a group of aspirants lacking in experience, training and in many instances even ordinary intelligence.

Political aspirants have made a field of seventy-four candidates for Council and of this number there is no wide variety of class; only a few standing forth as well fitted for a place in that important legislative body. It is a sad commentary on the condition of our politics that truly big men of Los Angeles have shied from the responsibility that such a position entails. The city is passing through a civic crisis in which many tremendous questions must be solved, and yet the voters are compelled to go down through a list of candidates, most of them irresponsibles, to winnow out the worthy and discard the unworthy.

For Mayor, City Attorney, Auditor and Assessor the task of selection is not so difficult and the danger of selecting a totally unfit person is minimized. There are more cranks than political adventurers seeking places on the Board of Education and on the Board of Freeholders. Neither of these institutions offers the opportunity for personal aggrandizement that is offered by a seat in the Council; the legitimate remuneration is not so great.

To guide the voter through the confusion created by the overflow of raw material, The Times has endeavored to learn something of the qualifications of each candidate, what fitness there may be found, if any, in those who are asking for public support. In a spirit of fairness to each candidate, the results of this investigation are given for the benefit of the voter, that the accompanying list may be taken to the polls and used as a guide.

Who the candidates are, what they stand for and what may be expected of them, with recommendations when that seems advisable—this is the purport of the following list:

FOR MAYOR.

(Vote for One.)

Robert M. Allen—Real estate man, clean business record; not well versed in municipal affairs, however; a Republican; generally supported by the so-called liberal element; the politicians who helped elect Mayor Rose are supporting him; not an orator; member of the Police Commission; is 38 years old, and has lived in Los Angeles nearly all his life, making a campaign for a "careful administration," whatever that may mean.

D. C. Casselman—Deputy Public Administrator; clean, active young man with record as good organizer; Past Exalted Ruler of the Elks and high in other fraternal orders; was Republican city chairman for years, and is campaigning as a Republican; makes good appearance; stands for a continuance of the policies outlined in the last two years, and, like other candidates, is against the special assessment district plan of improvements; native of Ohio, where he was prominent in politics.

Ralph L. Criswell—Printer and Socialist; stands for the unionite closed shop; put forth by the iniquitous coterie of walking delegates and other union-labor parasites; advocates all the socialistic fads and frills and would have a permanent fund to entertain the unemployed "tourists" throughout the winter. A dangerous man, who should be discouraged in his ambition to hold office.

H. S. McCallum—Lawyer, sometime Republican; offers nothing constructive in the way of improving the administration; rather advocates a destructive policy of ridding the city of all present officials; campaign of negation; nursed and coddled improvement associations and later employed them in his behalf to further his candidacy; practiced and skillful politician; lacks balance; organized Clean Sweep League and nominated himself for Mayor.

C. E. Sebastian—Chief of Police under suspension by own request; made enviable record at head of the police department for four years, prior to which time his record as police officer and lieutenant was above reproach; his campaign interrupted by arrest on framed-up charge of consorting with children; should be handsomely treated as a rebuke to that sort of politics, providing he can establish innocence.

Frederick J. Whiffen—Real estate man; has been in the Council five years and chairman of the Finance Committee for four; "watchdog of the treasury;" at times an uncertain old party, but generally safe and always conservative; is honest; surrounded by admiring freaks; campaign managed by a man recognized by the liberal element as of entirely different type; a substantial citizen and a credit to the administration. The logical candidate for Mayor.

FOR CITY ATTORNEY.

Albert Lee Stephens—A capable, proficient, hard-working lawyer, who for the past two years has shown a quick and comprehensive grasp of city affairs; is not only a legal adviser of the city, but is a keen, far-seeing adviser on matters of policy; has made good, and it would be a calamity to retire him at this time, when he is in the midst of a direction of vitally important litigation.

John W. Luter—Young attorney who clung to the pay roll of a corporation until it was pulled from him; then resented reference to his former affiliation; indorsed by the Clean Sweep League; has no particular qualifications for office, and slight experience as attorney.

James H. Ryckman—Perpetual candidate for office; Socialist in excellent standing with the "reds;" subscribes to the policies put into practice by the walking delegate, organized thuggery; not entitled to the slightest consideration.

FOR CITY AUDITOR.

David T. Johnson—Socialist; a carpenter; knows nothing about auditing.

J. Henry LeSage—Clean Sweep candidate; book-keeper and accountant; has good record, but not well known.

John S. Myers—Present City Auditor; a careful, capable official and should be re-elected at the primaries.

FOR CITY ASSESSOR.

A. M. Beebe—Running as independent; a salesman with considerable business experience; possesses wide knowledge of California assessment laws.

E. E. Johnson—Running as independent; former Tax Collector, in which position he gave good account of himself.

Walter Mallard—Present City Assessor; deserves re-election on his record.

W. B. Osborne—Clean Sweep League candidate; in real estate business for many years; has no particularly noticeable qualifications.

A. M. Salyer—Socialist candidate; piano dealer; well known in a business way.

FOR BOARD OF EDUCATION.

(Vote for seven.)

The Times approves of the so-called Administration ticket, which is pledged to support Supt. Francis during the next two years of his service. This ticket is composed of the following:

J. H. Bean—The only member of the board seeking re-election; a business man of excellent standing who has made a good record in the Board of Education.

N. E. Crandall—A contractor; product of the Los Angeles public schools and the University of California.

Fred E. Golding—In the lumber business; has been active in educational, civic and charitable matters for years; graduated under Supt. Francis.

Charles H. V. Lewis—A business man of long standing; long interested in school work; the only candidate residing south of Adams street.

C. J. McCormick—A real estate man associated with O. E. Farish; secretary of the Northwest Civic Center Association and a recognized authority upon many phases of educational work.

William A. Spalding—Former newspaper man; resident of Los Angeles for more than forty years; widely known in business, social and scientific circles; educated seven children in the Los Angeles schools and later at various universities.

For the seventh place on the Board of Education The Times suggests that one of the following be voted for: Walter Bordwell, R. Morgan Galbreth, Pearl P. Morrison.

FOR THE CITY COUNCIL.

(Vote for nine.)

Josias J. Andrews—Retired banker and fruit grower; elected on Good Government Council ticket in 1909 and re-elected; a fussy gentleman, aged 73, whose loquacity has clung to him tenaciously through the years.

Ranson S. Barry—Clean Sweep candidate; no occupation; not even industrious as an office seeker.

Martin F. Betkouski—Plaster and stone contractor; bears excellent public record since 1907, from which time he served as Fire Commissioner and three terms as Councilman; strong advocate of annexation, and one of the best-equipped men in the present Council; should be re-elected.

Joseph Boylson, Jr.—An independent candidate with the backing of prominent and substantial citizens; shrewd business man and regarded as possessing unusual qualifications for the office; men like "Joe" Boylson are needed in the Council.

Robert T. Brain—Formerly in superintendent's office of Southern Pacific; later Under Sheriff under Sheriff Hammel; good Republican and level-headed young fellow; has been in auto accessory business and has good backing; should be placed on the primary ticket.

William Francis Brown—Energetic young attorney, now in City Prosecutor's office; clean, conscientious young fellow, but almost too young for office.

David Bryon—Good Republican; served as justice of the peace in New Jersey. Has lived here four years and has taken interest in civic affairs as president of the Compton Avenue Improvement Association.

Walter J. Bunker—Resident twelve years; is traffic cop on leave of absence; former tobacconist and ice inspector; recommended for return to police traffic squad where he has proven valuable.

F. S. Cary—Former City Treasurer of Wilmington and for four years president of the Wilmington Chamber of Commerce; has excellent business record; is backed by the northern end of the Harbor district.

Frederick M. C. Choate—An attorney who will some day be elected to office if there is any reward for keeping everlastingly after a job.

J. S. Conwell—Present Councilman; president of Motor Car Dealers' Association until elected to the Council in 1913; stands for city-county consolidation, annexation of San Fernando and other propositions that mean the betterment of Los Angeles; has sane ideas on municipal efficiency and is chiefly responsible for giving the city what little efficiency in administration it has received; he is a stable, reliable, sound legislator who is invaluable to the city's service. The next Council should find Mr. Conwell responding "Aye" to the roll call.

Thomas M. Coughlin—A railroad mechanic, running as independent candidate; well known among railroad employees who are supporting him; has lived in Los Angeles twelve years and came from Kansas.

Sidney P. Dones—A young colored attorney.

Charles H. Dougherty—Real estate man; has no public record upon which to base a guess as to his qualifications and has never made his influence felt in civic affairs.

R. W. Dromgold—Served in the Council for three years, ending with 1910; defeated for re-election; now in the real estate business; has wide knowledge of civic affairs and has been in touch with city business for many years.

O. O. Farmer—Never held office; formerly with telephone company and later engaged in paving and road-building business.

George E. Ferguson—A young motorman employed by the Los Angeles Railway, never having had experience with civic affairs; indorsed by the Trolleymen's Welfare League. Not well known.

W. G. Finch—Young man in auto business; running on his father's record.

Clara Shortridge Foltz—Suffrage leader and attorney; devoted Republican; an untiring worker for women and the cause of woman; has been instrumental in securing beneficial legislation; is indorsed by the Clean Sweep League and is better fitted than a lot of the men.

Thomas Foss—Former railroader backed by Independent Civic League and other disturbers; a gumshoe man in the City Prosecutor's office when he works.

John J. Goldsworthy—A civil engineer, well trained, capable and honest; would represent the harbor; runs as an independent; is familiar with engineer work through having been in the city engineering department for a number of years.

Henry A. Greene—Investment and real estate broker; successful business man, but has never held office; has good backing among business men.

Guy G. Hall—If he lives in the city the directory has failed to discover him.

E. C. Hampton—The man who helped to put Hollywood on the map; a big business man of recognized standing and worth; one who would bring an element of conservatism to the Council; has taken the lead in the development of the Hollywood district, both prior to and subsequent to annexation, and should be elected.

H. A. Hart—A Socialist and a dangerous one; the pestiferous creature who tried to halt the development of the aqueduct; a perpetual office seeker and disturber; not entitled to the slightest consideration.

David G. Hathaway—An attorney with a perpetual itch for office; an associate of Guy Eddie.

George J. Holmes—Real estate man and former dairyman; has some backing in the northwestern section of the city; never held office.

Arnold R. Holston—A red card red-shirt Socialist; attorney; on nearly every ticket as a candidate for a number of years.

Arthur D. Houghton—White hope of the Twilight Sleep League; formerly served in the Council; a free publicity-seeker, who has no particular mission except to be in the limelight; not fit Councilmanic material by any means. Spooks!

Emery B. Hunt—Socialist; labor walking delegate of railroad men; safety last.

Arthur H. Jones—Clean Sweep League candidate; former policeman; a professional politician.

Richard W. Kelly—A staunch defender of the northwestern portion of the city, where he has property interests; a long-time resident and is strong on special improvements.

J. T. Kiggens—Former attorney and right-of-way agent for Illinois Central Railroad; resided in Los Angeles twenty two years; not prominent in municipal affairs.

Charles W. Kingsley—Socialist; has served in Assembly, to no particular credit to himself or his district.

Frederick C. Langdon—Present member of Council; elected in 1911 and again in 1913; a valuable man in the Council; chairman of the Harbor Committee and member of other important committees; has always been independent of sinister influences, has maintained a conscientious, courageous course throughout his service; a gentleman and a scholar, and is entitled to cordial support for re-election.

Evan Lewis—Former City Assessor; also deputy bank examiner and receiver; has record for honesty and good service; a Republican; has wide support and deserves recognition at the primaries.

Estelle Lawton Lindsey—Socialist; newspaper woman, and a smart one too; has been a high school teacher; recently was expelled from the red card Socialist organization because she turned up her nose at one of the rules which is contrary to a State law; aside from her qualifications for the Council, she is a perfect lady, and her husband is a giant.

H. C. Lucas—Took out nomination papers, but is not now making an active campaign.

Alexander MacKeigan—An outdoor sportsman, real estate man and well known civic worker; ran in 1913 and was defeated.

William V. Martin—Former stool pigeon in District Attorney's office; cheap politician whose candidacy is a reflection upon all good men who seek the office.

J. Gustave Maulhardt—In the delicatessen business and has a good business reputation. Has been here only a few years; is generally supported by the German element.

R. A. Maynard—Former attorney and newspaper man; Socialist of the worst type.

MULHOLLAND FOR ANNEXATION.

Los Angeles, Cal., April 30, 1915.

To the Citizens of Los Angeles:

Having been asked to define my position on the subject of annexation in relation to the distribution of Aqueduct water, I desire to state as follows:

I have always promised the people and held the opinion that it would not be necessary for the citizens of Los Angeles to incur further bonded indebtedness to distribute the water of the Los Angeles Aqueduct.

I have always consistently maintined that any new territory requiring extension of the water system to serve it, should at least bear the burden of such extension.

Since it is manifest that the water to be delivered by the Los Angeles Aqueduct plus the water already owned by the city (and which has served it for years) is too great in amount for the area at present embraced in the city limits under any imaginable density of population in the future, the proper thing to do is to extend the city's boundaries to cover such area as may be properly and adequately served with this water.

The considerations guiding the selection of this area should be such contiguity as will make a compact territory having within its limits land requiring the use of water for its development temporarily for agricultural purposes and ultimately for more and more intensive use. These conditions should be insisted upon whether the territory to be served lies within the San Fernando Valley, the San Gabriel Valley or in any other near-by section where a supply of water from the Aqueduct is needed and apparently is destined ultimately to go.

In the present instance the city of Los Angeles is fortunate in the fact that close by her very doors lie extensive areas of available land for this purpose, requiring the least possible expenditure for the construction of adequate waterworks to serve it. It is fortunate, also, that the people owning and occupying those lands evince a keen desire not alone to build such works and wholly exempt the present city from any tax, direct or indirect, in connection therewith, but they are willing, moreover, to shoulder the common burden already assumed by the city in the way of bond issues for her three great municipal undertakings, namely: the Aqueduct, the harbor and power development.

On the other hand, the lands designed to be covered and served by Aqueduct water by anti-annexationists are not alone not contiguous to the city, but are occupied and held by people who have never manifested the least desire in any way to help the city with her present burdens or even to contribute a single dollar toward the building of the works necessary to reach their lands, although such works would have to be constructed over a route presenting formidable engineering difficulties and necessarily entailing an enormous outlay, funds for which would have to be provided by bond issues of this city aggregating a total of $7,000,000 for the trunk lines alone.

As to the claim that the water would sell for more money in one district than in another, it should be remembered that the City Council is the rate-making body for the water where it is distributed inside the city limits and the rates can always be adjusted to make such return as wisdom dictates from time to time. If, however, water is distributed in outside territory without requiring annexaton, the city thereby subjects the same to the jurisdiction claimed in behalf of other bodies in respect to rate-making and other forms of control.

But this question has been presented to the people at a former election and was thoroughly canvassed at that time. It was emphatically rejected by a vote of 34,762 to 15,888.

Is the city to remain wholly without revenue from its great enterprise until this same question is again submitted to the voters and several years elapse to accomplish the necessary construction of these works should the building of them be ratified by the people imposing a tax upon themselves for that purpose?

We should ever keep in mind that the waters of the Los Angeles Aqueduct are brought here for the city's use and such use should be confined to the city as it is at present and as it is to be.

Therefore, I recommend that on the question of annexation vote "YES."

Respectfully yours,
WILLIAM MULHOLLAND,
Chief Engineer
Los Angeles Department of Public Service.

MONSTER DAMS IN MOUNTAINS

Flood Control Engineers Outline Plans.

Pacoima and Big Tejunga to be Controlled.

Provides Protection for San Fernando.

Construction of two great impounding dams in the upper reaches of Big Tujunga and Pacoima creeks to hold back devastating flood waters from the San Fernando Valley will be recommended in a report which the board of engineers, flood control, will make the Board of Supervisors about June 1 in summing up plans for country-wide flood control.

Though the construction of seventy-six other impounding dams will be recommended, those for the San Fernando Valley back-country are to be the leviathans of the tribe. The others will vary from a few feet in height and storage capacity as low as one-half acre on up to about half the size of the big affairs proposed for the Big Tujunga and Pacoima creeks.

Bridging the canyon of the Big Tujunga at Hoyt's ranch, the dam that is to be thrown across that stream, according to plans now being prepared in the office of the County Surveyor, will be 140 feet in height and will impound about 4900 acre feet of water. The Pacoima Creek dam will be slightly smaller, 165 feet high and will impound 1967 acre feet of water. It will be located at Hutchings place.

Though the capacity of either reservoirs is large enough to assure a water supply for a good-sized town, engineers estimate that either would be filled in four hours by the maximum stream flow in the big flood of two winters ago.

SKIM FLOODS.

But, in filling, the flood would be skimmed of its destructive crest, except in the case of a deluge of unprecedented size. At any rate, the devastating flow of floodwaters down into the San Fernando Valley will be lessened by three or four hours' fall of rain.

Though the two impounding dams are merely links in a scheme to solve the county's flood problems effectively, they will also be efficient instruments of conserving much water for irrigation that is now wasted. They will also provide access water by seepage for the reinforcement of the underground reservoirs of the Southland.

The importance of this last was made patent in a protest which Frank A. Vanderlip, owner of the Palos Verde Rancho, made the United States Board of Engineers, for Rivers and Harbors, some months ago, against the plan proposed by Maj. R. Raymond, district engineer, to throw a big dam across the lower reaches of the Los Angeles River and thus divert its waters away from the harbor. Mr. Vanderlip, on good engineering advice, protested that such a scheme would be calculated to rob the underground reservoirs of the Palos Verde Rancho of much water which is badly needed for the development of this property.

WATER TABLE FALLING.

That the water table of the Los Angeles Coastal plain has consistently fallen within the past ten years was pointed out by Chief Engineer Mulholland of the water department in a report made the Board of Public Service Commissioners some months ago. His conclusions were drawn from the consistent lowering of the water level in the city's wells in the Los Angeles River. This dropping of the water table is explained by the always-increasing pumping of water for irrigation purposes, due to the rapid settling up of the country.

However, as many have pointed out, this lowering of the water table is not proof of an inadequate supply of water, rather a waste of water, for the reason that sufficient water, by actual measurement, rushes down the washes of the San Gabriel, Los Angeles, and other rivers into the sea every winter to irrigate half the State. Consequently, there is a demand that some of this water be saved in connection with the plans to carry off the portion composing the flood crest. The impounding dams will provide both reserve supply and will insure reinforcements of water for the underground reservoirs. Extensive planting of bare watersheds to trees will also be used as a means to conserve the supply, as these trees will hold much water in suspension, in and about their root systems, for discharge gradually. In this way, the trees themselves will be a medium of protection against floods.

SAN PEDRO'S GOOD PLACE.

"They Don't Need a Police Court There at All," Says Crawford.

Justice Hugh Crawford, who presides over the destinies of the justice mills at San Pedro and University police stations, takes decided exception to what he considers an inference made by Justice White before the City Council Friday that San Pedro is lacking in court facilities.

"San Pedro doesn't need a police court any more than a dog needs a tin tail," said the jurist yesterday. "It's a plumb waste of money. I get on a car every morning and go down there, get on another car and come right back. In four months I have never had one enough to keep me until noon at San Pedro. It costs the taxpayers 17 cents each way each day for myself, a bailiff and a clerk for transportation alone, not to mention the value of the time lost. I should recommend that a twice-a-week court be established there instead of getting another police judge."

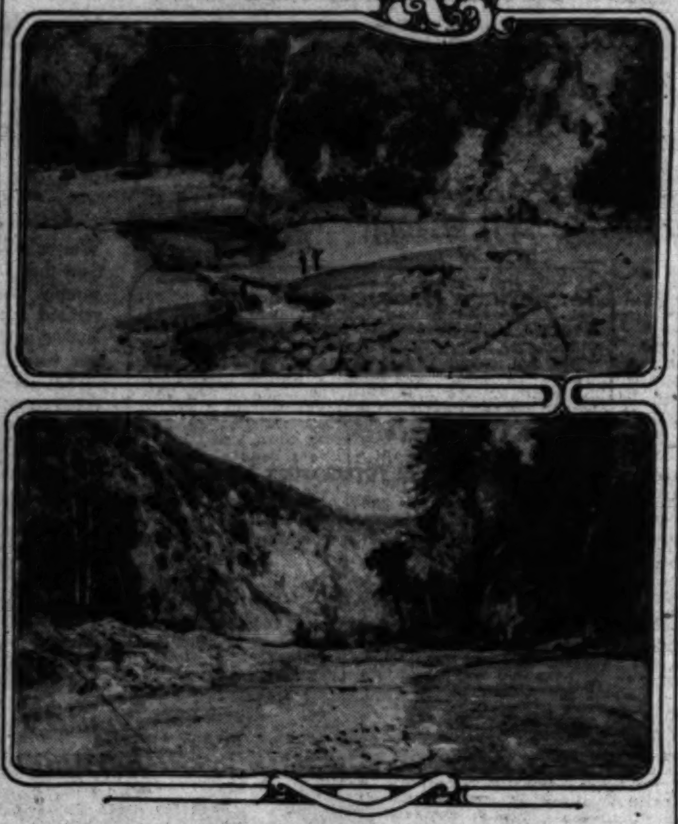
For Conservation of Mountain Water.



Site for mammoth dam on big Tujunga Creek.

Under plans of the County Board of Engineers, flood control, an immense retaining reservoir is to be created by building a concrete dam 140 feet high across canyon of this stream near Hoyt's Ranch. The upper picture shows the small power dam on the site, with men as mere specks near the spillway, and the lower some of the canyon country that will be drowned.

Interest.

KEEN RIVALRY MARKS PROSPERITY CONTEST.

Candidates in "The Times" Big Event are Keyed up by Unusual Opportunities and Remarkable Activity is Demonstrated in the Splendid Display of Credit Evidence—Participating Advertisers Active.

THE Times great Prosperity and Trade Contest continues to engage widespread attention, not only from the contestants who are entered for the fine prizes that are offered, but also on the part of the hundreds of others who are interested in the success of the candidates.

The contest, which has for its object the emphasizing of prosperous conditions in and about Los Angeles, is daily fulfilling its appointed purpose. No contest of the kind has ever produced the volume of interest shown in this big trade event, and the enthusiasm manifested by the participants is growing with the development of the number of credits accumulated by the prize contenders.

It is worth one's while to get a glimpse into the storeroom where are gathered the cancelled coupons, returned coffee cans, flour sacks, bread labels and the other multifarious evidences showing the expenditure of hard cash in the many lines of trade represented in the contest. Reduced to dollars and cents, the contest to date represents more than a third of a million dollars, spent with Los Angeles merchants and others in adjacent towns.

With a record such as this The Times Trade Contest gives ample evidence of its reason for being and shows how active have become the contestants in their endeavors to accumulate the sales slips which are good for credits in the struggle to obtain prizes in this remarkable event.

Some of the districts which at first showed little activity in the contest are now forging to the front as contestants have awakened to the large opportunities offered for material rewards to active workers. Then, too, the efforts put forth by many merchants in outlying towns to develop interest are bearing notable results, so that where few credit coupons may have been saved and gathered on behalf of contestants a few weeks ago, hundreds are now being turned in by the same candidates.

Keen rivalry is manifest all through the big list of candidates and the race promises wonderful possibilities before the finish mark is reached. Some of the contestants who started comparatively late in the contest have rolled up some pretty large scores and there is no reason why others entering now cannot accomplish as much by equally active effort.

The Contest Department continues to emphasize the necessity of systematic effort on the part of contestants if the best results are to be accomplished. Individual effort is splendid, but if a number of individuals are joined together in the endeavor the net result will be proportionately greater, and accomplished the more quickly. Therefore, every contender for prizes in The Trade Contest ought to be supported by the efforts of as many others as it may be possible to enlist.

To the merchants associated with the contest there has been added of late the Murray Baking Company, whose products are favorably known throughout the contest territory. There is also the New Method Laundry, which is energetically engaging in publicity features to emphasize its connection with the contest and offers special assistance to contestants interested in securing laundry credits.

Hauser Packing Company, advertising Violet Brand Shortening, is also one of the new advertisers participating in the benefits conferred by Trade Contest activity.

Tomorrow's issue of The Times will contain a complete list of contestants and their standing to date. Other candidates may enter by using the coupon printed on this page today. We will be glad to welcome newcomers and give every aid we can to make their participation a success.

Epworth League.

YOUNG PEOPLE COMING FROM THREE DISTRICTS.

THE Epworth Leagues of the Los Angeles, San Diego and Pasadena districts of the Southern California conference, represented by about 1500 delegates, will hold their first tri-district convention at the Boyle Heights Methodist Episcopal Church, beginning next Friday.

An excellent programme has been prepared under the direction of the Executive Committee of the Southern California Conference Board of Epworth Leagues, composed of the following: Rev. Charles H. Scott, Rev. Don S. Ford, Dr. Lehman Lowder and Dr. H. E. Beckwith.

Special music will be rendered by the Epworthian chorus of 100 voices, and many interesting addresses will be made by prominent speakers, such as Dr. Walter Rousenbush of Rochester, Dr. Matt S. Hughes of Pasadena, and Dr. Charles Edward Locke, Dr. W. E. Tilroe and Dr. James A. Francis of Los Angeles.

The Methodist Churches of the city will furnish lodging for the out-of-town delegates, and luncheon and supper on Friday and Saturday, will be served in the banquet room of the convention church, thus affording an opportunity for all Epworthians to stay during the entire session each day.

FOUR MOTORISTS HURT.

Car Skids Against Curb, Tips over and Throws Them Violently to the Pavement.

Skidding wheels of a rapidly moving touring car caused an accident yesterday opposite No. 1300 North Broadway, which necessitated taking the four passengers to the Receiving Hospital for treatment. The wheels slid to the curbing and the car tipped on its side, throwing to the ground Miss Gertrude Hovey, No. 1725 El Cerrito place; Edwin Cooke, the driver, and his mother, Mrs. Thomas F. Cooke, No. 7024 West Hawthorne avenue, and Miss B. Graham, No. 1535 Hudson avenue.

Miss Hovey and Mrs. Cooke were severely cut about the head and neck. Miss Hovey's forehead was gashed and the skull bruised. Miss Graham suffered concussion of the brain. None of the injuries are serious.

FOR A GREATER LOS ANGELES.

To Enrich the City and Reduce Taxation—The City Council's Appeal for Annexation.

To the Citizens of Los Angeles City:

Resolved, by the Mayor and City Council:

The city of Los Angeles should at once begin the actual distribution and sale of the surplus waters of the aqueduct, in order:

(a) To secure revenue from the sale of water.

(b) To safeguard the city's title to the water of the Owens River by putting the same to beneficial use.

Two years ago the voters of this city, by a vote of 2 to 1, rejected the plan of selling surplus water to un-annexed territory, through distributing trunk lines to be built and paid for by an additional bond issue of the city of Los Angeles.

We now submit for your approval a plan for selling approximately one-third of the city's surplus water in the San Fernando Valley, by a method which does not call for any further bond issue by the city. The terms of this plan are as follows:

First—The San Fernando Valley must annex to the city, subjecting itself to regular city taxes and to taxes for all aqueduct, harbor and power bonds.

Second—The San Fernando Valley, at its own expense, must construct the local distributing pipe line system for the purpose of receiving the water from the aqueduct and distributing it to the lands to be irrigated, and must turn this distributing system over to the city, free of charge.

Third—The San Fernando Valley, like all other portions of the city, must pay the price for water which the city shall annually fix.

Fourth—That territory of the valley annexed to the city must not expect greater municipal service from the various departments of the city government than what the taxes paid by this territory will pay for.

We believe the consummation of this plan will be of great advantage to the city of Los Angeles, and we therefore unanimously urge upon the voters of this city that they vote in favor of annexation.

Should this plan meet with your approval we will at once proceed with the work of developing other markets for the 10,000 or 12,000 inches of additional surplus water which the city will still have to dispose of.

We desire at this time to correct certain misleading statements in regard to the price of water, that have been made in circulars opposing annexation.

No permanent price for water has been fixed. Under the provisions of the charter no permanent price for water can be fixed. The price for water, for any and all purposes, will be fixed each year by the City Council. When so fixed the price of water for the same character of use will be uniform throughout the entire city. The San Fernando Valley will have to pay the same price for domestic water that may be fixed for the rest of the city, and the same price for irrigating water that may be fixed for the rest of the city.

Light on Candidates.

diana ten years ago; not known politically.

J. E. Parish—Running as independent; formerly in dry goods business; first attempt at this sort of thing; not widely known.

William H. Pierce—Served in Council from 1899 to 1902 and with credit; now in the undertaking business and has been successful; good substantial citizen and worthy of general support; conservative business man, old-line Republican and a man with considerable knowledge of municipal affairs.

M. T. Poling—Attorney, indorsed by Clean Sweep League and by Boyle Heights residents; was City Attorney of Bloomington, Ind., at one time; hopes to step into Mr. Bryant's shoes as the Boyle Heights statesman.

M. R. Proebstel—Running as independent; business not stated; makes good appearance on the stump, but is not well versed in city affairs.

S. G. Ramsey—Aged resident of Boyle Heights; formerly in the street department; out of touch with city affairs.

S. H. Rigby—Real estate man and vice-president of Temple-street Improvement Association; is making active and apparently effective campaign; has constructive ideas which, if put into effect, would be helpful.

W. A. Roberts—Present Councilman, having been selected to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Charles McKenzie; former member of Legislature; with Councilman Bryant he flew in the face of engineering facts and played to the galleries by fixing the 40-cent gas rate; then he advocated spending $15,000 to demonstrate he was wrong.

M. A. Schofield—Lives in Gardena; slightly known, politically.

Horace W. Skelton—Out of it.

Irene M. Smith—Socialist; a small busybody with a loud voice.

W. M. Spear—Young man of many trades and occupations; not widely known.

J. A. Strawn—Clean Sweep League candidate; peddles pickles when not playing politics.

Joseph I. Taylor—Socialist; 'nuf said.

W. J. Thompson—Colored man, well known among members of his race.

Joseph W. Toms—Has been active politically for many years and has sought office before; has no special indorsements.

John Topham—Former Councilman, police commissioner; now the manager of the Western Oil Company; made good race in 1913 for reelection, but was defeated; is strong campaigner; favors subway, no more assessment districts for general improvements and one telephone system, among other things; should be given more than a casual once-over.

Charles H. Treat—Dealer in lands; member of "Progressive" County Committee, not regarded as especialy fitted for the place.

M. A. Treosti—Running as independent, but not making active campaign.

Robert M. Whaling—Former professional ball player and later inspector in street department; not well known politically.

Fred C. Wheeler—Socialist; ran for Mayor at the Harper recall election; was elected to Council in 1913; has served with credit as chairman of the Public Welfare Committee, to the everlasting disappointment of the red-card Socialists with whom he is not in entire accord at present; he has been perfectly sane as a rule in his conduct in the Council; has stood with conservative forces in the Council on many important questions; at other times has been extremely radical; however, his record during the last two years in the Council has been satisfactory.

Alex M. Williams—Real estate man; has had business training both here and in Chicago; not known in public affairs.

E. L. Williams—Jack of all trades, finally winding up as secretary of the Jitbus Association; advocates the single shot, the selfish method of any candidate where more than one is to be elected; has nerve enough to run for anything.

George Williams—In the present Council since resignation of Haines Reed; formerly served two years in Council; on the whole, possesses a good record as Councilman; is a successful grocer; usually takes programme from President Whiffen; independent of the union laborite walking delegate; entitled to serious consideration on his merits.

Thomas W. Williams—Socialist; one of the red ringleaders of the party in California; a hazardous bit of humanity who would be a constant disturbing element in the Council; should not be nominated.

Edward D. Woollam—Real estate man; Clean Sweep League candidate with indorsements from other sources.

Foster C. Wright—Attorney; former newspaperman; secretary to Mayor Snyder during his administration; secretary of Fire, Police and Health commissions; capable, active, alert; would add brains to the Council, if elected; is running as an independent, but has the support of many prominent business and professional men and many organizations; "Tossie" Wright should be nominated at the primaries Tuesday.

For the Board of Freeholders there are three tickets and a number of independent candidates. The charter conference named twenty-three candidates and the Council added seven more; the Union League Club named a ticket. All organizations managed to include most of the usual charter cranks, but there are some level-headed men on each ticket.

Because the product of the Freeholders will eventually go to the people for adoption or rejection, no recommendations as to the personnel are made at this time; thirty candidates are to be named Tuesday, following which the lines will be more clearly drawn as to what the various candidates stand for in the way of a new charter for Los Angeles.

The final propositions on the ballot to be voted upon are the annexation of the San Fernando district and the Palms district.

How Mrs. Harrod Got Rid of Her Stomach Trouble.

"I suffered with stomach trouble for years and tried everything I heard of, but the only relief I got was temporary until last spring I saw Chamberlain's Tablets advertised and procured a bottle of them at our drug store. I got immediate relief from that dreadful heaviness after eating and from pain in the stomach," writes Mrs. Linda Harrod, Fort Wayne, Ind. Obtainable everywhere.—[Advertisement.

KING'S THANKS WAR'S STAKE.

Fifty-million-dollar Royal Grant in Dispute.

Los Angeles Hadleys Seek to Recover Great Tract.

How Princely Gift was Won and Then How Lost.

The Los Angeles descendants of William Hadley, a brave and adventurous English soldier who lost his life in the Crimean War, have begun a contest for possession of a $50,000,000 estate in Australia, which they allege was given to the hero as a crown grant in return for valiant services. Mrs. Matilda Hadley, widow of Francis B. B. Hadley, a grandson of the grantee, of No. 1671 East Forty-second street, is taking the lead in instituting a legal contest which will bring to light many a story of adventure.

The land in question involves about 4000 acres, adjoining Sydney, and is the site of several thriving suburbs. Mrs. Hadley and the other heirs have employed Attorneys William Durham and William M. Morse, Jr., to try to reduce the estate to possession.

Attorney Durham will leave for England within a few weeks to consult records and begin the first stage of what is expected to be a long legal battle with the present possessors of the soil of the "Hadley grant." The last stages of the contest will be fought out in Sydney, after the attorneys have armed themselves with records from England.

THE HEIRS.

Besides Mrs. Matilda Hadley other heirs are her children, W. S. Hadley and Mrs. Matilda Hadley Brock of Los Angeles, George H. Hadley of Pomona, Frank Hadley of San Francisco and S. W. B. Hadley of Huxley, Alberta, Can.

B. S. S. Hadley, grandson of the grantee, lives in Santa Ana and his sister, Mrs. Lillian Courtney, is a resident of Boston. Other heirs, more distantly related but, nevertheless, entitled to a share of the estate if it is recovered, live in England.

In 1820 William Hadley, son of a colonel in the British army who had fought against Napoleon in Belgium, Spain and France and against Andrew Jackson's men in Packingham's army before New Orleans, was sent as a civil administrator of the English government to Australia. He was also a major in the British army and combined civil and military functions in his Australian duties, occupying an office which now would probably be comparable to that of the Viceroy of India in his sphere.

While engaged in his responsible duties Maj. Hadley was confronted with the probability of a great native uprising, but handled the situation with such tact that a war was averted. For this service he was awarded by crown grant a great tract of land in and near what is now Sydney, stretching from the ocean inland to the desert.

At the height of his success as an administrator, Maj. Hadley was called home by the outbreak of the Crimean War and in the struggle he lost his life. His son, Capt. William Hadley, was at the time of his father's death serving in India.

MANAGER DECAMPS.

Not wishing to quit the army and having no liking for Australia, the son sent a representative to manage the estate his father had secured and partially developed. Some months after his arrival in Australia the manager decamped with considerable of his employer's money and later, at Hongkong, blew out his brains at the end of a debauch.

From that time to the present no member of the Hadley family has seen the great tract of land. In the meantime the great city of Sydney has grown and thrived and so have its suburbs, one of which Palamatia, is now said to be builded upon a portion of the neglected grant.

END OF LIBEL SUIT.

The District Court of Appeal affirmed the finding of Judge Houser denying a new trial to the plaintiff in the action brought by Otto des Granges against Ada Crall, John C. des Granges and Joseph P. des Granges for damages for alleged libel alleged to have been uttered in matters relating to a sale of orange land. The judgment was for the defendants.

BRITISH TO FROLIC.

The British Overseas Club will give a concert and dance at the Fraternal Brotherhood Hall next Wednesday evening. It is to be a farewell for the visiting Australian boys, and will be preceded by a banquet at the Shatto-street home of Mrs. May Jackson, the club organizer. The concert music will be furnished by the Australian Boys' Band. The affair is for all Britishers.

BUY ACRE PARCELS.

Emil Firth reports having sold an acre of ground, improved with a four-room house, at Somerset Acres on the Santa Ana line, B. F. Bagent being the buyer. William F. Mills has recently purchased an acre in the same vicinity and will, it is announced by Mr. Firth, raise rabbits and poultry.

RESERVES BANK SITE.

The Janss Investment Company reports that it has reserved three lots in the townsite of Yorba Linda for a bank building and that tentative plans for this structure are now being drawn. Yorba Linda is in the center of the Yorba Linda citrus district in the La Habra Valley.

TO SPRING STREET.

The offices of F. E. Woodruff have been removed from 212 Grant Building to No. 525 South Spring street. Bell Flower Acres and Half Acres, tracts owned by Mr. Woodruff, are to receive special attention in the new location. Mr. Woodruff has secured the services of E. L. Mills as sales manager.

Just the Reverse.

[Chicago News:] One afternoon a party named Bowers had business at a State penitentiary in the West, and on returning he spoke of the visit to a number of friends.

"The prisoners down there," said Bowers, "were having some kind of Saturday-afternoon holiday, with a brass band and speeches to match. And say, maybe the leader of that band wasn't some wonder in the choice of appropriate music! What do you suppose he was playing?"

"Search me," responded one of the friends. "Some sad hymn, I presume."

"He was not!" declared Bowers, emphatically. "He was playing 'This is the Life.'"

Mrs. Matilda S. Hadley,

Who has begun a legal contest for a fifty-million-dollar estate in Australia, said by her to have been given to her late husband's grandfather as a crown grant for valiant service in the English army. Her attorneys will go both to England and Australia to consult titles.

NEW PLAY AND STARS TODAY.

Anspacher Drama is to Have Premiere at Burbank.

Yiddish Players Coming to Mason this Week.

Pavlowa, Dancing Queen, is Due Here Soon.

"The Unchastened Woman," a new play by Louis Anspacher, author of "Our Children," will be given its initial performance at the Burbank this week, opening this afternoon.

Emily Stevens, niece and protege of Minnie Maddern Fiske and Christine Norman, both well-known New York actresses, will make their Los Angeles debut in the two leading roles. They will be supported by Forrest Stanley, Grace Travers, Lillian Elliott, Edmund Lowe, Louis Bennison and Winifred Bryson.

The story deals with a great struggle for supremacy between the two principal women of the cast, one of whom strives for the conquest of men, while the other fights to retain the love of her husband who is in the danger zone.

The piece will be staged in the usual elaborate manner characterizing Morosco productions.

Mason.

The Lenox Theater Company, billed as "The Original Yiddish Company," direct from New York, will open at the Mason Operahouse, on Tuesday evening, May 4, and will appear during the remainder of the week in a repertoire of musical plays, as follows: Tuesday evening, "Mothers' Heart;" Wednesday evening, "The False Step;" Thursday evening, "A Year After Marriage;" Friday evening, "Lost Happiness."

The stars of the aggregation are Rosa Karp, Leon Blank, Bella Gudinsky, and Elias Rothstein.

Gorgeous scenery and electrical effects are announced as special features of the productions.

On Monday, May 10, Mlle. Anna Pavlowa and the Russian ballet will open at the Mason for a week's engagement. The programme will vary from day to day, as follows:

"Puppen-Fee" (The Fairy Doll) and the vividly spectacular "Walpurgis Night." Because of its great popularity, "The Fairy Doll" will be repeated on Friday night and Saturday matinee, and "Walpurgis Night" will be seen again on Thursday night, with programmes otherwise changed.

Tuesday night will feature "Amarilla," a gypsy love tale, and "The Dances of Today." "Amarilla," said to be one of the most sensational ballets presented in years, will be repeated for the Wednesday and Saturday matinees, with programmes otherwise changed. The Wednesday matinee is also to include the musicianly "Chopinisma."

Wednesday and Saturday night, "Ramonda," a medieval story of wild passions and superstitions, expressed through the medium of a spectacular ballet, will be given.

"Flora's Awakening," mythological in theme, will be a part of Thursday's programme, and "Seven Daughters of the Ghost King," a ballet of mystic symbolism, will be presented with "The Fairy Doll."

Morosco.

Creatore and his celebrated band will open at the Morosco Theater next Sunday. He will give performances every afternoon and evening during the week, using an entirely different programme for each concert.

"Mission Play."

"The Mission Play" is in its fourth year. Its production has been a growth and development through this lapse of time, with the result that it is at present not only a faithful reproduction of historical events and atmosphere of the old mission days, but one of the most beautiful spectacles ever staged.

Tourist parties are thronging to each performance.

Orpheum.

The Orpheum will join in the celebration of Fiesta week by offering what promises to be an unusually attractive bill, of which music is the keynote. Tomorrow's matinee will witness the change in the list of acts.

The two bill-toppers are the B. A. Rolfe production of "The Bride Shop," written by Fred de Grassac, with music by Mr. Rolfe, and Lina Abarbanell, creator of the stellar role in the original American production of "Madame Sherry."

"The Bride Shop" is said to be a brilliant bit of musical comedy, with pretty girls, a clever comedian, Andrew Tombes, and a prima donna of merit, Lola Wentworth.

Lina Abarbanell comes in a repertoire of songs and gowns.

Others on the bill are the Seven Colonial Belles, headed by Dorothy Sherman, in a costume musical playlet; Lew Hawkins, "the Chesterfield of minstrelsy;" and the holdovers, Hyams and McIntyre in "The Quakeress," and Mme. Yorksa and Company in a tabloid version of "Camille;" the Kerville family of trick billiardists, and Parillo and Fabrito in their musical offering.

Hippodrome.

Will Abram and Agnes Johns, the most popular sketch team which ever played at the Hippodrome, will return on Monday afternoon in their newest departure "Outwitted," which they have given with much success.

The holiday crowds should be pleased with the remainder of the bill, which includes the Cox Family, in "The Italian Music Master;" Mme. Lloyd, vocalist; Gilmore and Romanoff, who promise snappy song and dialogue; Curtis and Sutherland in their skit, "The Belle of Joytown;" Caesar and Caesar as "The Bootblack and the Actress;" and Karlton and Klifford in a novelty act entitled "Illuminated Art."

Pantages.

Bothwell Browne will headline the new Pantages bill, opening tomorrow, in "The Serpent of the Nile," in which he, himself, impersonates Cleopatra. The production is a historical ballet, portraying the death of Cleopatra after the defeat of Anthony. A notable feature of the act is the work of Kephron, the queen's messenger, by Francis Young, who also performs a sword dance and "the dance of death." There are said to be some beautiful girls in the act.

Other attractions on the bill are

SUNNY SOUTHLAND AS THE WORLD'S BIGGEST STAGE.

BY HENRY CHRISTEEN WARNACK.

IN THE beginning God created the Ince motion picture ranch, with Europe, Asia and Iowa as by-products and after-thoughts worked up from the waste material. Its original discoverers named the site America, but subsequent explorers called the center of its immediate activities California. Thomas H. Ince saw the ranch that it was good, but being unable to assimilate the whole works, he was obliged to simulate satisfaction by closing a lease on a meager 18,000 acres, which left a nice little corner of the State on which the Universal company might found an empire.

It is the idea of most motion picture studios that they can be neither moving nor studious if they are not spread all over the earth. When Shakespeare said, "All the world is a stage," he was undoubtly thinking of the motion picture business.

Without knowing any more about the industry of canned drama than the law allows, I am inclined to think that the spatial idea is overdone by most companies and that this is only one of many instances in which picture production is carried on with unnecessary extravagance.

I doubt if any other business half so large is conducted so loosely. A lot of managers are probably "film-flamming" themselves and don't know it.

The little Lasky studio out at Selma and Vaile streets in Hollywood occupies only three or four lots and appears to have only three or four companies at work, but I doubt if any outfit gets bigger results for less money than Jesse Lasky and his people. This company is managed by four men, the eldest of whom is only 36, and their whole idea seems to be compactness and order. The atmosphere of their studio is one of stolidity and efficiency. It also is the acme of artistry.

Of course, they also have a ranch, as perspective, sky line and riding scenes are absolutely necessary to this work, but their Hollywood studio might have been built by the tailor efficiency commission and seems to be operated on the same plan. It would be hard for a business engineer to find a leak in that establishment. They do not have an army of employees, but they have all they need and they know where every man is every minute of the day.

The Ince people also have all of their regular people in stock and all of their extra people on salary, so that every man and woman reports for work and quits at a regular hour and there is no trouble in having the directors know just who would be useful in any special scene.

Detail is another nice point on which I believe a good many outfits are going wrong, both in expense of stage properties and the selection of types and localities.

In some cases perhaps this is a good thing. When David W. Griffith was making "The Clansman," which in the East is called "The Birth of the Nation," he sent for every living person who knew anything about the death of Lincoln and paid their fares from the East to Los Angeles, and return in order to interview them on the subject. The result was a wondrously faithful picture of this great world tragedy, although I never was able to enthuse over the particular actor who was cast for the part of Lincoln himself.

Now, it strikes me that this was not the most economical manner of securing this information, although the result is something for which the public should be profoundly grateful. It seems to me that barrels of money are wasted along such lines as this incident indicates.

Detail is a good thing from the artistic standpoint, if it does not become tedious and detract from the importance of the central theme. Such details as the wind among the reeds, with a bird on the bough, its tiny throat swelling with song, is the marking of a great artist in Mr. Griffith to me, and I still think that his "Avenging Conscience" is the most perfect picture ever filmed. I do not mean that it compares in magnitude with "The Clansman," nor in mass with "Cabiria," which is a very great spectacle and an atrociously bad play, but that it is the one picture I have seen which is absolutely consistent and which properly exhausts its possibilities.

The man who dragged himself through eighty days of travel in order to go around the world was either lame or had so much time on hand that he did not know what to do with himself. The feat can really be accomplished in eighty minutes from Los Angeles, if you have that kind of a machine and the motor cops do not see you doing it.

The world is really out at Universal City in 400 acres with a fence around it and a little unfenced ranch of

MAY LEAD WAY TO A NEW ERA.

"FAIRYLAND" PRODUCTION TO MARK TURNING POINT.

Metropolitan Conductor Believes its Success will do Much to Stimulate Opera in America—Active Preparations for Producing Ninth Symphony Here.

BY EDWIN F. SCHALLERT.

The arrival of Alfred Hertz, the well-known conductor of the Metropolitan Operahouse, in this city last Thursday, signalized the fact that preparations for the production of the prize grand opera "Fairyland" are now well under way. Not only will this production prove an event of unusual import to the musical world of America, but it is anticipated that it will mark the opening of a new era in the development of opera in this country.

Mr. Hertz is a hearty enthusiast on the subject of opera in America. He believes that the success of the "Fairyland" production will do a great deal toward stimulating the efforts of American composers in this form, and that further it will pave the way for the establishment of grand opera companies in many different cities. Once a movement is started in this direction, Mr. Hertz believes it will bring quick results.

"Fairyland" will be the second prize opera by Horatio Parker, brought out under the genial conductor's direction for he also directed the first performance of the composer's "Mona." Mr. Hertz says that Mr. Parker has caught more of a popular spirit in his latest work, while he evinces all his usual command of musical potentialities. The orchestration is masterly and the work as a whole very melodious, Mr. Hertz declares.

Friday afternoon the first rehearsal of the chorus under the conductor's baton was held. He is very much pleased with the voices, and considers the quality excellent. The need for more first tenors is still felt.

Mr. Hertz is accompanied by his wife, who was Lilly Dorn, the distinguished singer, who visited this Coast on a concert tour several years ago. The conductor's assistant, Paul Eisler, is also here. The latter had several important engagements to fill in Europe, but was unable to do so on account of the war.

Mr. and Mrs. Hertz will take a bungalow during their stay here. They will remain until some time in the summer. Mr. Hertz will make a flying trip to the East the end of this month to conduct the open-air performance of "Siegfried" at the Harvard stadium, where Mme. Schumann-Heink is to sing the role of Erda.

Also Coming Soon.

Albert Reiss, who is to create the part of Robin's tenor buffo role in "Fairyland," will arrive here early in June. He is scheduled to sing in the production of Siegfried at the Harvard stadium. He created one of the parts in Parker's opera "Mona" under Mr. Hertz's baton. A letter was just received from him by the American Opera Association, expressing his pleasure at having been chosen to create the part in the new prize opera.

Another artist who will arrive in the near future is Albertina Rasch, solo danseuse, who will appear in the magnificent ballet which will feature the first act of the opera.

W. W. Hinshaw, basso, has been selected to create the part of Corvain, and Kathleen Howard that of Myriel. The principal feminine role of Rosamund is, of course, to be filled by Marcella Craft, who is famous for her artistic interpretations of such roles as "Salome" and "Madame Butterfly" and "Marguerite."

Would Compose Opera.

Mrs. H. H. A. Beach is so impressed with California that she may decide to spend every winter here. Her present visit is the first since she was a child, and she has been spending the past month enjoying herself thoroughly.

While she has achieved very unusual success in many forms of composition, it is now Mrs. Beach's ambition to compose an opera. She has had difficulty in securing a proper libretto, but now has several under consideration, of a promising character.

"The theme must have a broad human appeal," she said yesterday. "It need not necessarily be American, though I would be doubly gratified if this were the case."

Among her latest compositions have been a "Prelude" and "Fugue," and some other piano pieces which she is still preparing for publication. One of her most recent compositions is the "Panama Ode," a short choral work, which was recently given with marked success in the East.

Mrs. Beach expects to spend the summer in California, and will probably make her headquarters at San Francisco. She will play her own Concerto with the Symphony Orchestra here at the coming music festival. She has not been composing since her stay in California, but says she believes she will find much inspiration for work here, when she has more available time.

With Symphony.

Soloists for the production of the Ninth Symphony, to be given May 17 and 18 at Clune's Auditorium, will be Mrs. Robert Smith, soprano; Mrs. L. J. Selby, contralto; Roland Paul, tenor; and Clifford Lott, baritone. The solo parts in the "Ode to Joy" of the last movement of Beethoven's great work are unusually exacting, as is also the music for the chorus.

The Los Angeles Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Adolf Tandler, and the Ellis and Lyric Clubs, under the baton of J. B. Poulin, have been holding frequent rehearsals, in order to master the difficulties of the score.

The "Ode to Joy" (Schiller's "An der Freude") is a triumphant hymn upon the theme of the brotherhood of man. Music and words are welded into a wonderful song of love and liberty, with effects that only Beethoven, in his masterly fashion, knows how to achieve. The melodic and harmonic structure throughout the great work is lighted with that nobility of purpose which only his great genius could radiate.

Recital at Hollywood.

She was assisted by Mrs. Charles Edwards, violincellist, the Misses Edith Sinclair, Ruth Patton and Dorothy Dukes, with Mrs. Carl E. Jacobson at the piano.

Miss Ryerson included several Schubert numbers on her programme, and songs by Cadman, d'Hardelot, Allitsen, Willeby, Del Riego and also "Lieti Signor," from "Gli Ugonotti," and "Connais tu le Pays" from "Mignonne."

Beverly Concert.

A programme of songs of war and peace will be presented tonight at the Beverly Hills Hotel by Estelle Heartt Dreyfus, contralto, assisted by Glenn Knight, accompanist, and the Beverly Trio. It is as follows: "Scherzo" (Napravnick;) the Beverly Trio, songs of war, "War" (James Rogers,) "The Little Irish Recruit" (Mary N. Everett,) "The Lament of the Spanish Gypsy" (Sturgis,) and "After the Battle" (Moussorgsky;) by Mrs. Dreyfus. "Melody" (Faure;) the Beverly Trio, songs of peace, "Peace" (Lehmann,) "The Holy City," by request (Adam,) "Faith, Hope and Charity" (McDermid;) "A Perfect Day," by request (Jacobs-Bond,) by Mrs. Dreyfus.

Cosmopolitan Programmes.

A notable feature of the programmes which Dr. Karl Muck has arranged for the twelve subscription concerts which the Boston Symphony Orchestra is to give at the Panama-Pacific Exposition beginning May 14 is the cosmopolitanism represented in the works which will be played. The total number of composers whose names appear on the programmes is thirty. These comprise seven Germans, seven Frenchmen, four Italians, four Russians, three Austrians, two Americans, one Bohemian, one Hungarian and one Finn.

In time of composition the works cover practically 200 years, extending from Bach in the early part of the eighteenth century to such moderns as Debussy, the Frenchman; Sibelius, the Finn, and Richard Strauss, the German.

The three "B's," Bach, Beethoven and Brahms, are represented by characteristic masterpieces, while Wagner has the largest representation in works owing to the fact that at the fifth concert Dr. Muck will play all the preludes and overtures of Wagner's music dramas and will represent "The Ring" with the funeral music from "Gotterdammerung." In addition to these, at one of the concerts, he is to play the "Siegfried" Idyl.

Choral Symphony soloists.

Mrs. L. J. Selby, contralto, and Harry Clifford Lott, baritone, who will sing solo parts in Beethoven's Titanic Ninth Symphony, to be given May 17 and 18.

MUSIC NOTES.

Olga Steeb, the brilliant young American pianiste, continues to score successes in the bay region. She has made five San Francisco appearances, two at Century Club Hall, two at Festival Hall, and one at Colonial Hall in the St. Francis Hotel. She has also appeared in Sacramento, Palo Alto and Stockton. Her greatest success was won last Friday night when she was greeted at Festival Hall by an audience of 3500 persons, who gave her a veritable ovation after her performance of the "Midsummer Night's Dream" music.

A very pleasing programme was given by Gabrielle Chapin-Woodworth, lyric soprano, recently returned from Italy, where she has been singing in grand opera, at the Rex Arms apartments. She featured arias from "Lucia" and "La Boheme," and also sang two charming Italian songs, "Riflessi," by Santoliquido, and "Il Bacio," by Arditi, and a number of selections in English. Accompanying was Mrs. William H. Schweppe.

A delightful recital was given by Miss Virginia Goodsell, soprano, Thursday evening at the Burlington apartments. She was assisted by Mrs. M. Hennion Robinson, accompanist; Miss Lucy Stanton, violiniste, and Miss Araminta Zechock, reader.

Apropos of the production of the work by the Los Angeles Symphony Orchestra this month, an interpretative recital featuring the "Ninth Symphony" of Beethoven, will be given by Mme. Mathilde Ruforg, at her studio, No. 243 Carondelet street, Friday afternoon. She will be assisted by Horatio Cogswell.

A programme of the music of Brahms was given by Mrs. May MacDonald-Hope before her class in musical history last Wednesday, at the residence of Mrs. D. J. Cahill, No. 2325 West Eighth street. This is the last of the series of programmes.

The Girls' Glee Club and the string quartette of the State Normal School will give a concert Tuesday at the Melrose-avenue Methodist Episcopal Church.

A musical department has been added to the courses of the California Military Academy. It will be a branch of the Davis Musical College.

The College of Music, University of Southern California, announces a piano recital by Miss Catherine Lennox, of the senior class, in Symphony Hall, tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock. She will be assisted by Miss Rachel Smith, soprano. The programme will include the Beethoven Sonata in E Flat, the Bach-Busoni "Chaconne," Liszt's "Gondoliera," Finale, from Grieg's Sonata, three Chopin preludes and the Godard "En Route." The public is invited.

Mrs. Louise Rieger, soprano, and Brahm van den Berg, pianiste, will give a joint recital, May 27, at the Hollywood Clubhouse.

Ignace Paderewski arrived in New York April 14, and his purpose is now to be in America for about six weeks. His entire time will be devoted to organizing committees and furthering the cause of Polish relief. He plans to be in New York about a wee kand spend some days in Boston and Chicago. He will then go to California, primarily to take the mud baths at Paso Robles, where he received such benefit a year ago.

Mme. Melba will come directly from Australia to America and not by way of London, as she first intended. She expects to sail from Sydney in the early part of August and will go to San Francisco, probably making a stop of a week or so in Honolulu. This will bring her East the middle of September and as already announced her work will begin with two appearances at the Maine festival the end of that month.

ACTIVE WOMEN.

Mrs. A. R. Canfield, 75 years old, has been elected Mayor of Warren, Ill., and will receive a salary of $1 a month. Mrs. Canfield was in the employ of the Pinkertons during the Molly Maguire troubles in Pennsylvania, and at that time learned some tricks of the police business that she expects to bring into play in Warren. She has already announced that she has observed some deals that appeared to smack of graft, and that one of her first acts will be to drive boodlers and grafters out of town.

Miss Laura Tygett, who was elected City Clerk of Herrin, Ill., last week, has the distinction of being the first woman in the State of Illinois to be elected to this office since women were granted the ballot. She received 1185 votes. In national politics Miss Tygett is a Republican. She was elected on the dry ticket.

Miss Annie M. Evans of St. Louis has been appointed an investigator of women's rural organizations by the United States Department of Agriculture. Miss Evans is an attorney by profession.

Mrs. Zelia Nuttall, who has won fame as an archaeologist; Miss Jane Addams, founder of Hull House in Chicago, and Miss Katherine B. Davis, Commissioner of Correction in New York City, and noted for the reformatory work among girls, are declared to be the "three most noted American women" by the women's board of the Panama Exposition.

Mrs. J. B. White, chairman of the Patriotic Educational Committee of the Kansas City chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, has started a movement to make the birth anniversary of Abraham Lincoln, February 12, a legal holiday.

Mrs. Mary W. Harper of Atlantic City, N. J., is the originator of the project to have every woman who runs her own automobile contribute to the construction of the great Lincoln highway, which is to span the United States from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

THE UNCHLOROFORMED.

Capt. William H. Thurston of Sunbury, Md., one of the few of Rickett's Battery of Gettysburg fame surviving, has celebrated his seventy-seventh birthday anniversary. When the color-bearer was shot down and things looked bad for the Yankees, Thurston, then in the ranks, rushed forward, seized the colors, and his action rallied the forces of Ricketts. Several wonderful charges were made and the day was saved. Mr. Thurston's act did not go unnoticed. He was brevetted to captain on the field.

With the seventy-seventh birthday celebration of William K. Cowan and Mrs. Mary Motsinger at her home near Grant City, Mo., it is believed the oldest twins in Missouri have been located in Worth county. They were born in Champaign county, Ohio, and removed with their parents to Crawford county, Missouri, when 6 years old. Twelve years later they came to Worth county, where they have lived ever since.

Mrs. Rosanna Hoffman of Pittsburgh, Pa., spent most of her ninety-second birthday anniversary reading a German Bible which appeared to be quite as old as herself. Besides one son, she has fourteen grandchildren and eight great-grandchildren.

Frank Hall, who said he was 104 years old, danced his way to freedom when arraigned before Judge Owen P. Mahon in Police Court at Elizabeth, N. J. Hall was arrested on the charge of trespassing on property of the New Jersey Central Railroad near the Broad street station.

"I meant no harm, judge," said Hall. "I was just exercising in the yard when the officer grabbed me."

"Exercising? What were you doing?" asked Judge Mahon.

"Just clap your hands a little, judge," said the aged prisoner, and started a lively buck and wing dance.

The court gavel stopped the exhibition and Judge Mahon said:

"If you must dance at your age, do it where it will be appreciated. Discharged."

Hall said the cold weather always made him feel like dancing.

SCIENTISTS, EDUCATORS.

Ernest William Brown, who has been awarded the gold medal of the Royal Society of Great Britain in recognition of his remarkable work on lunar tables, has been professor of mathematics at Yale University since 1907. He is a Fellow of the Royal Society of England, the American Philosophical Society and other scientific bodies. He has written many papers on the lunar theory and on celestial and general mechanics. He is also associate editor of the Astronomical Journal. A mechanical feature of the preparation of the new tables is the fact that they must be printed on paper which can be guaranteed to last for at least 200 years.

Dr. Arthur Amos Noyes of Chicago has been presented the Willard Gibbs medal for eminent research in theoretical on applied chemistry. The medal named after the leading figure in American chemical annals, was originated by William A. Converse. Dr. Noyes is the fifth to receive the medal.

Prof. Herbert Gardner Lord, professor of psychology at Columbia University, surprised one of his students recently by calling on him out of turn and the young man had the alternative of swallowing the gum he was chewing or being marked a flunk. He swallowed and choked, whereupon Prof. Lord seized the opportunity for a lecture on gum masticators. The gist of the talk was that a man who dissipates his energy in chewing gum is wasting unlimited power. With students, he said, the results are extremely bad, because after a chew of ordinary duration the average student's jaw is too tired to wag out an answer.

Dean Frank P. Graves of the school of education of the University of Pennsylvania, has been offered the presidency of the University of West Virginia, and has received more than 300 letters from West Virginians urging him to accept the position.

Ex-Gov. Cruce has been suggested as a good man for president of the Oklahoma Agricultural and Mechanical College. The presidency has been vacant for about a year.

Surgeon-General William C. Gorgas is outlining a campaign against the mosquito for the city of Baltimore. He suggests the dividing of the city into districts and the employment of some of his old inspectors who helped him to clean up the Isthmus.

GARDEN ON BROADWAY.

And it will be Novel Summer Institution on the Top Floor of Swelldom.

A novel top-floor summer garden will be opened tomorrow at the Swelldom, one of the specialty stores of Broadway. Personally supervised by Jacques Fournier, an artist, the work has just been completed. Attention was paid to every detail with the object in view of making the floor appear in exact reproduction of an outdoor summer garden.

The mural decorations will be Spanish and colonial designs. The flooring has been made over to represent a green lawn, with cement walks dissecting it. There will be vine-covered trellises, eucalyptus woodwork, and special ventilation, making the air as fresh as if the garden were without a roof. A panoramic view of Central Park may be had from the rear windows.

This innovation will be used as a showroom for the latest models in summer gowns. By combining a restful showroom with moderate prices, the management expects to give special satisfaction to its patrons.

The room will not be given up to idle lounging or pink teas, but the real innovation lies in the fact that Swelldom will actually sell merchandise in this garden on Broadway. The whole floor consisting of 300 feet of selling space, will be given over to summer dresses and such summer apparel as is washable and so popular in California.

Betty Nansen in "The Celebrated Scandal," Miller's.

Hazel Dawn as "Niobe," Tally's Broadway.

The novel on which the film drama is founded has been the subject of controversy all over the civilized globe, some holding that Anna is the prototype of the misunderstood woman, and others pointing to her as a modern Magdalen. Miss Nansen is said to give a subtle and intelligent interpretation of the character.

Miss Nansen's supporting company is headed by Edward Jose. The production was staged in Montreal, Can. The added attraction is the fourth of the new "Elaine" stories.

Tally's Broadway.

Hazel Dawn, in a photoplay version of Harry and Edward Paulton's fanciful comedy, "Niobe," will be the attraction this week at Tally's Broadway Theater, commencing tomorrow.

"Niobe" is the story of a Greek statue of the ancient mythological character which becomes incarnate. Miss Dawn is said to be thoroughly bewitching in the role, which gives much opportunity for spirited comedy, and shows her loveliness and dramatic art to perfection.

The photodrama is said to be superbly mounted.

Alhambra.

"The Outcast" is to be repeated this week at the Alhambra, the film having proved very popular. In it Mae Marsh, the star of the "Clansman," plays the leading role.

"The Outcast" is a vivid photodrama from the novel of Thomas Nelson Page. Robert Harron supports Miss Marsh.

Next week Mrs. Leslie Carter, in "The Heart of Maryland," will be the offering.

Clune's Auditorium.

The eleventh week of "The Clansman" is announced for Clune's Auditorium.

The photodrama deals with the reconstruction period of American history, following the Civil War, and in twelve reels telling the story the South is shown before, during and after the war. The significance of the photoplay is revealed in the vivid portrayal of the story of individual lives which welds the film into an absorbing spectacle.

Earl Williams and Anita Stewart, in "The Girl Who Came from Heaven," will be the featured photodrama on the programme for the first part of the week.

Other features will be a Charlie Chaplin film comedy and Katherine [illegible] in a drama of present-day [illegible] Thursday and for the remainder of the week Arthur Johnson and Lottie Briscoe in "Who Violates the Law" will be the feature.

Moving-picture plays

To be shown at the local theaters this week and the stars who will be featured therein.

Woodley.

"Hearts in Exile," filmed from John Oxenham's novel of the same name, will be the Woodley offering during the present week, commencing tomorrow. In this photodrama Clara Kimball Young plays the part of Hope Ivonovn, a beautiful Russian girl who is in the tragic position of being married to two men, both of whom sincerely love her.

Features of the film story brought out in the unraveling of the problem are the treatment of prisoners exiled to Siberia, Cossack fights and a wolf chase. One of the most sensational incidents of the story is the pursuit of one horseman by another on a frozen river, and the subsequent plunging of the pursued through a fissure in the ice.

The cast is said to be excellent.

Garrick.

Wilton Lackaye, matinee idol, will appear during the coming week at the Garrick in the original role that he created in the famous stage representation of "Reb" Shemuel, the aged rabbi in Israel Zangwill's "Children of the Ghetto." Ruby Hofman, the Russian actress, supports him.

The atmosphere of the Jewish home, the touching comedy drama of Jewish life, and the sacred and serious purpose of the right-living Jew are said to have been clearly defined and delicately visualized on the screen in this offering.

Optic.

"A Charlie Chaplin Revival" is to be continued at the Optic this week. The pictures which have helped make Mr. Chaplin famous are being shown in a revue. Manager Augur is planning some surprise novelties in connection with the showing of the latest Chaplin comedy, "By the Sea," next Thursday.

Palace of Pictures.

The second number of the "Who Pays" series will open at the Palace of Pictures on Monday. It is entitled "The Pursuit of Pleasure," and tells the story of a frivolous wife. It is said to give Ruth Roland one of the best opportunities of her film career. The wife's pursuit of vanity and neglect of motherhood until an accident makes it too late for her to know the joy of tiny arms about her neck makes a strong theme for the photo playwright. Numerous thrilling episodes are promised.

IN THE LIMELIGHT.

Brig.-Gen. George H. Harries, commanding the District of Columbia Militia since November 30, 1897, and a member of the organization continuously for more than twenty-six years, has applied for retirement. Under the law, Gen. Harries is entitled to retire with increased rank, and it is understood that a new commission will be issued to him by the President of the United States as major-general, retired.

Chauncey M. Depew celebrated his eighty-first birthday anniversary on April 23. "I am glad to have lived so long," he said. "Really, it is a good world to live in, for it has so many good fellows in it."

Gen. Roger A. Pryor, who was offered the opportunity of firing the first shot in the Civil War and refused that "immortality," now lives in New York City, a hale and active citizen, although 87 years of age. Gen. Pryor, who was born in Virginia in 1828, was member in turn of the United States Congress and Confederate Congress, and general in the Confederate army. He was captured as a spy and saved from death only through the intervention of Lincoln.

Gustav Lindenthal, who is building the Hell Gate bridge at New York, the greatest structure of the kind in the world, which will have a length of three and one-half miles, is an Austrian by birth. He received his technical education at Brunn and Vienna, and before coming to this country in 1874 he had had considerable practical experience in railroad building. His first work in the United States was as an assistant engineer on the force constructing the centennial exhibition buildings. He became a citizen and took up railroad building. Some of the greatest bridges which he has built span the Alleghany and Monongahela rivers, though he has also spanned the Mississippi and other streams. Though famed as a bridge builder, he prefers to be known as a man who has had more to do with laying out railroad routes.

Dr. Joseph Goritar, formerly Consul-General at San Francisco for the Austro-Hungarian empire, has taken out naturalization papers in Chicago and expressed himself as desirous of becoming an American citizen. Dr. Goritar will shortly make a lecture tour, his first engagement to be before the Chicago Association of Commerce, at an early date.

"Uncle" John Donnelly of Kansas City, Mo., president of the fire and water board, has refused to accept a new commission on the board. He is 74 years old, and has been in the service of the city forty-six years.

Southland as Stage.

1600 acres on the other side of the Lankershim road. The Universal people have $300,000 worth of permanent buildings, including what appears to be miles of stage.

In reality they have the largest stage in the world and sometimes sixteen of their twenty-one companies are at work on it at the same time.

When I was out there the other day they were filming a play in which there was a circus performance and the thing was set on a magnificent scale. They had a sawdust ring with horses in it, flying trapeze and a procession of wild animals.

A section of their studio was given up to wild animals, and a man has to look twice out there to see whether the next actor he meets is going to be a grizzly bear or only an elephant. They also have an aviary, but only the parrots take speaking parts.

In California a jack rabbit does not dare to cut his own trail for fear he will be converted into a motion picture actor. Being a timid hare, he falters before the camera, but aside from a female Chinese, he is the only creature alive that seems to do so.

A few years ago when a disappointed father found that his son was good for nothing else on earth he encouraged him to study for the ministry. Nowadays when an individual discovers himself to be a human misfit he turns in confidence to filmdom.

Motion picture managers often see people they admire, but for one reason or another, they refuse to support them. The mania to act in pictures seems to be a sort of spreading disease, and a man without the nerve to read the responsive lesson in a Sunday-school class above a whisper, expects the motion picture director to receive him with open arms and put his name on the bill boards of every exhibitor in the country.

Motion picture actresses are often divorced women or little girls who never intend to be married. All of them want fame, money and independence. Heaven is obliged to spend most of its time at the motion picture studios in order to keep up its reputation for protecting the working girl. Judging by the looks of them in wholesale lots, some of them deserve it and some do not—and not all of them require it.

Moving picture actors are also, roughly speaking, divided into two parts, the same being youngsters who have not yet tried to do anything and are not very good at that, and middle-aged men who have tried to do a little of everything and have fled to the movie monasteries as a last resort.

To be sure, out of the thousands who try their hands, or rather, their faces, at pictures for the first time, a considerable number develop talent and a rare few blossom into geniuses. They become of the elect and adopt this as their life work. They feel the blessed satisfaction of having discovered themselves. A certain number have had training in stock or other branches of the spoken drama, and they find paying work to do with the movies. A very large majority of the movie stars were professional actors before their shadow ever crossed the camera shuttle.

The average director is not particular about the previous experience of the candidate for movie honors. A person with any natural aptitude for the work, who is possessed of clear features and ordinary intelligence, can meet the director's requirements under all ordinary circumstances. Of course, the more he learns about acting and the making of motion pictures the more useful he will become and the better his wages will be. What every director does prefer is a person who desires to make motion pictures the work of his life.

It is often necessary to employ races and types by the thousand; sometimes whole colonies of foreigners in Los Angeles are engaged in the movie work for a week or two at a time. One manager could not get enough Italians in Los Angeles for a picture he was making and was forced to take some of the scenes in the Latin quarter of San Francisco. At another time he used 500 Mexicans down below the Plaza in rehearsals and pictures for two weeks and once he had to advertise for Japanese men and women who thought they could act and he used 1000 of the applicants for two weeks.

Just thinking of the matter casually one would hardly suspect that there are more than 1000 Japanese actresses and actors in this city. Well, they were not all actors by any means. Most of them were fishermen, gardeners, house-cleaners and billiard players. As for the women of this race in Los Angeles, they are exceedingly scarce and they demanded and received twice the wages of the men. Two of the Japanese proved to be actors of fine ability and one of them is now in stock with Thomas H. Ince.

Of all movie actors who come without training and never get any, the cowboy type is the most successful. Nearly all the cowboys in the Southwest are permanently employed by the different studios in and around Los Angeles. They do not get very big wages and they do not work very hard. They stay on the ranches of their companies and ride like the wind before the camera whenever this is required of them. Then they go back to their frijoles and cribbage until they are sent for again.

Naturally, many good actors can ride well and they are compelled to in order to make good in many big parts. Dustin Farnum is one of these. He has been off the last week away up in Topango Canyon as the star in a big feature picture, which the Ince people are making, and in which the Topango is supposed to be the Grand Canyon and is doing its best to look the part. It seems to be Farnum's specialty to make some place look like what it isn't. Next week he has to go up to Mt. Baldy and be photographed along trails in the mountains of Alaska.

A mountain simply cannot tell what it is nor where it is until it has been in consultation with Dustin Farnum. He has a geography all his own and the liberties he takes with topography are something beyond the limit.

That "Sign of the Rose" picture, by the way, was pretty badly scattered geographically before it got itself together on the screen in a shining total. The Ghetto scene was made in New York, the snow scenes were taken on Mt. Baldy, the Santa Claus story and nearly all the scenes of the plot were made at the Ince studio, known as the old "101 Ranch" of the Millers in Santa Monica Canyon, and some of the street scenes were done in San Francisco.

In one sense, the stage settings of motion-picture scenes are hollow mockeries. Out at Universal City you would think that you were looking at a great pyramid or at some colossal gateway of an ancient city, and when you walk behind the structure your eyes are greeted by emptiness. Motion-picture scenery has only two dimensions—length and breadth. It has no thickness. They build whole towns on this system.

When I went into one of the restaurants on the grounds I was afraid to lift the lid of my egg sandwich lest the egg did not exist. The egg was there, though, and so were the lettuce and the pickle, and I felt a sense of guilt in eating it lest I was destroying the only reliable and bona-fide piece of property in the whole of this make-believe world.

These restaurants are for the accommodation of the actors. Usually they are rough shacks, unplaned and unpainted, after the order of mining and railroad camps. Those at Universal City, however, are made of concrete and give nice service. The Universal outfit employs something like 1100 men and women, so that the caterers do not starve.

Universal City has a fire department of its own, has built miles of standard road at a cost of about $5 a foot and has scores of automobiles which go flying about like police ambulances on a riot call.

On May 16 the Ince people are going to give a Rodeo at their ranch while they are making a picture and the general public will not only be made welcome to the free show, but will be fed at a handsome barbecue, consisting of roast pig. The pork is now being grown on the ranch and is rooting about its thousands of acres, blissfully unconscious of the fate that awaits it.

All of these things are as they should be since nothing is so permanent as the illusion and since pictures are the immortal souls of the ephemeral. This is the place of all places for this work, because all California is a picture anyhow—just one big splash of heavenly color and colossal detail smeared upon a gigantic palette in the elbow of the universe.

BY BETTY BELLAIRS.

"Can any one tell me," remarked Dorothy, with the air of requiring information on international diplomacy, "what progress poor, dear Emma is making with her feet?"

"Really, my dear, you are extraordinarily crude. Why not be satisfied to have inquired after Emma, we should all have known what you meant?"

"Yes, I suppose the dear martyr is all feet just now," sighed Dorothy, unashamed. "They tell me she turned up at the Jones's party the other day in a dainty pair of No. 4's double A. Strolled heroically round the Italian garden, greeted dozens of friends, made a handsome contribution for the Belgians, took an entirely graceful and dignified departure, met her doctor at the gate, held up her hands in guilty pleading, took him in the machine and exhibited an enormous pair of shoes lined with floss silk, which she assured him in a stage whisper that she would don the moment the rug was over her knees. Said doctor is understood to have shrugged his shoulders disgustedly and washed his hands of her."

"And that," said Mabel, solemnly, "is but the history of a score of fashionable dames with unquenchable social aspirations just now. Feet, my dear, are one of the hidden tragedies of society. Il faut suffrir pour etre belle. The high heels, the dancing vogue and a certain conservative loyalty to the narrow partician ideal have distorted the modern female foot into a fiercy deformity. And some of them will retire from the social whirl long enough for even a partial cure. The only chance feet have nowadays is a long illness that keeps their owner on her back."

"Yet, of course, we are all going to the Kendis dance on Saturday night and any other dance we happen to be invited to. And shall feel ourselves forlorn and neglected if we don't dance every dance and aggravate our tootsies into further diabolical revolt. It's a cruel world."

"How do you think the returning bride looks?" asked Marjory, who takes a passionate interest in brides.

"Are we all friends here?" demanded Molly, naughtily. She looked round at each one severally as she twirled her cigarette in the modish manner. "In that case," she said, with deliberate cautiousness, "in that case, we consider she looks perfectly sweet and adorable."

"We should be grateful to Mr. and Mrs. J. Langford Stack. Those distinguished honeymooners will give us the occasion of a series of really stylish parties. Everyone is tumbling over each other to do them honor. Seems kind of appropriate that Stacks should live at a place called Wheaton, doesn't it?"

"Really, Mildred, your jokes are of the weakest. Don't try to be humorous, dear, it doesn't suit your style at all. You should specialise in coy sweetness and demure Quakerish gowns."

"Oh, ah, talking of gowns. Let us open a debate. Do men really admire the ultra-fashionable?" Molly looked earnestly inquiring, and we all lighted new cigarettes that we might concentrate on this great subject in soothing mood.

Helen has three brothers who always have a houseful of young men friends, so we felt she was in a position to contribute valuable pointers.

"They do not," announced Helen emphatically. "If you are dressing for women, that is, to make other women envious and malicious, see to it that you have the last word in sartorial hyper-superishness. You can rely upon the covert respect and the open criticism of women if you go the limit. But if you are dressing for men, believe me, they plump for conservative neatness every time. Especially neatness. It is most illuminating to hear our boys and their friends when they come home from a fashionable function. They never fail to ridicule the ultras, and there is a strange unanimity of opinion on the subject. When skirts were tight and narrow, they stood shoulder to shoulder in admiration for the woman who gave herself ample leeway to sit down and who demanded an extra inch or two to walk in. And now that skirts are full they give their entire approval to she who modifies her frou-frous so that the lines of the figure are not entirely lost."

"But men are such humbugs. They only admire that conservative neatness in their own women but they will pay ostentatious attentions to the fashionable young woman who belongs to somebody else."

"Only if said ultra-fashionable young woman has a great deal besides her clothes to recommend her, my dear. And even then their attentions are more than half ridicule. We all get the sort of attentions we invite."

"Oh!" remarked Ivy. "I see." And we recollected that Ivy always has a great deal of attention at parties but it never seems to go any further. We perceived that Ivy was in meditative mood.

"Kate is settling down to be quite a seasoned society hostess, isn't she? She has entertained with numerous small affairs now and each has gone off with quite an atmosphere."

"Well, you know, she and Jimmy had been friends so long—everybody thought they were engaged long before it was announced—that they were probably able to settle down to married life a little further in advance of the newer affairs."

"Brides are having a good innings this season. See what a good time Mrs. Mendel Meyers is having. The garden party today at the Miles's place promises to be a charming affair."

"I like garden parties. Seem the ideal mode of entertaining in California. Often wonder why more of those lovely gardens are not utilised for the purpose."

"Helen Holmes had a darling wedding, didn't she? It was essentially youthful wedding, everyone in short round skirts, and the bridesmaids' mittens were the finishing touch. Do you remember that old-fashioned picture 'Quite Ready,' where the small maid is sitting on the stairs dressed in a poke bonnet and mittens. They reminded me of that."

"Oh, go on. Weddings and debutante parties and complimentary parties and all the other kind of parties are all alike. How anyone can keep on working up sentimental emotion or enthusiasm of any kind about 'em is a perpetual miracle."

We all looked sternly at Florence. Such heresy. Certainly the parties that any of us give are "quite different."

"Pleasure is a treadmill" persisted Florence. "It uses one up horribly. Some of us girls look fagged and forty before we are out of our teens. And we are all under an obligation to go to somebody's party because they came to ours. And when we give a party we have to pet and coax and fuss and flutter to get all the right people on the same night and then the ones we want most fail us and only the ones we guessed we'd better have but didn't want at all turn up."

"Pining for the mountain solitudes all by myself with one" surmised Ethel. "Pretty bad case for Florence. Did he go off trout fishing for three months with some horrid men, then? And took all the glamor of the season with him. The brute!"

Florence deliberately blew a mouthful of smoke into Ethel's hair. "Oh, I'm so sorry, dear," she murmured. "And Richard loathes smoke, doesn't he?"

THE WEEK.

PARTIES, RECEPTIONS, DINNERS, WEDDINGS AND THE LIKE.

SOCIETY has been flitting to the mountains and wooded retreats and alluring country clubs with a vengeance recently. And neither is it to be marvelled at—this exodus to the peace and quiet and beauty of the wonderful valleys or hills for a day or two—offering as it does a delightful contrast to the busy whirl of society with its countless dinners, teas, dansants, card and theater functions, to say nothing of the lovely luncheon parties which have quite absorbed Milady's calendar.

That we find the acme of enjoyment in the placid rusticity of the country causes no wonder, these days, for just now God's good out-of-doors are at the heighth of their beauty, the roadways bordered in wild flowers, and hills a mass of yellow from the wild mustard and fields aglow with rich golden poppies, with a bit of blue mixed in for color in Nature's landscape.

Surely in California lies the promised land. No place quite equals our own sunny Southland.

Absolutely nothing which tends towards real attractiveness of setting seems to have been overlooked in the planning of things. Incomparable macadamized roads stretching into the vast, illimitable distance in whatever direction you turn and leading whither one's inclination desires—to majestic, penetrant heights of the Sierras or well equipped, comfy country clubs—all through winding fields of flowers and orchards permeating the air for miles around with the sweet fragrance of orange blossoms and other fruits in the embryo—always to placid silences. Every opulent outlook of nature seems to be offered us, and within the radius of an hour's motoring.

The Crags Country Club was wondrous gay the last week-end, when the W. M. Garlands and their adorable son, Jack, the Fred Flints, Cheneys, R. R. Rogers, John Motts, Nat Myricks and Russell Taylors were guests over the week-end. Mr. and Mrs. J. Langford Stack, who are the motif for so much entertaining just now, motored out with the parental C. Modini-Woods and the Joy Clarks and were tendered an ovation. Every room in the beautiful clubhouse was taken. The Garlands, of course, occupied their charming bungalow. By the way, their sister, Miss Olive Rosamond Garland, who has been a precious houseguest of the Garlands since Christmas, has gone to New York, much to the regret of her many friends. She departed Friday.

Speaking of the Stacks, this popular young couple are leaving on Saturday for their eastern home, just out of Chicago. And every day before their departure is to be crowded in with social attentions. The Willis Booths are giving a Sunday night supper for them tonight, while J. Greenbaum, is to contribute a much anticipated dinner at his studio tomorrow night. Mr. and Mrs. Loren B. Sale are to give a dinner on Tuesday night, to be followed by a party at the Orpheum and supper later downtown. Wednesday evening Mrs. Ygnacio Sepulveda is to have dinner guests in honor of Mr. Stack and his charming bride, and the W. D. Woolwines are to have them for honorees the following night. Mrs. Ralph Hagan is desirous of doing something handsome for them, but time may curtail any further affairs. Now that the time comes nearer for Mrs. Stack to leave her girlhood home, there is really sadness creeping in, though she will be a frequent visitor. No more popular debutante has ever come out in Los Angeles than Elizabeth Wood, and her contemplated departure is the only regrettable feature in connection with her recent happy marriage.

Carrol Gates was host at a dinner dance given at the Crags on Wednesday night, when the W. I. Hollingsworths and their guest, Miss Marguerite Buckler Stevenson, the Alexander B. Barrets, J. T. Fitzgeralds, Miss and Mr. Somers, Miss Nina Robinson, Herbert Eaton, Mr. and Mrs. John Newton Russell, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Roland Paul, Miss Gardner, the Schroders, Mr. and Mrs. Guy Cusner, the Bannisters and Mr. Rhoades motored out for the affair. An orchestra went out from town to furnish music. The table was exquisite with Mariposa lilies.

Alhambra.

FOR a week the promises for a merry month of May have enticed society into many delightful pleasantries, and the evidence of yellow and white everywhere has betokened the advent of the loveliest month of the year as well as the presence of many fair guests within the hospitable gates of the city. For three days of the week, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, the State convention of the P.E.O. held forth here and yellow and white flowers were used in profusion during the visit of the distinguished guests. On May 12 and 13 the first flower show in the history of the city will be a notable social event, and already society is on the qui vive for the affair, which will doubtless become an annual custom.

One of the merriest of social functions during the week was the dinner given by the Woodmen of the World camp on Tuesday night. Attired in their stunning new uniforms, the members of the drill team made an imposing appearance, and a delightful spirit of good fellowship prevailed during the evening, which was one of the pleasantest of the numerous delightful functions given by the order.

Of great interest to many in Alhambra was the elaborate 1 o'clock luncheon given on Saturday at the Alexandria in Los Angeles to Mrs. May Wright Sewall of Indianapolis by Mrs. Edward J. Harwick of Sierra Vista avenue. The guests were all members of the school conducted for girls in the eastern city by Mrs. Sewall, and was preliminary to the organization of a California branch of the school, over which Mrs. Sewall will keep a close touch. Mrs. Sewall, who has gone to the northern part of the State for a brief sojourn, will return later, and Alhambrans are looking forward to an opportunity to hear the gifted visitor.

Miss Geraldine B. Hunter, who has been the guest of friends in Alhambra and vicinity for the past fortnight, returned to her home in San Francisco on Saturday.

In a beautifully-arranged setting, in which May baskets and red roses predominated, the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Slater of South Curtis street was the scene of one of the most attractive of the spring parties on Wednesday evening, when about thirty of their friends were bidden to spend the evening dancing. Elaborate arrangements for the pleasure of the happy coterie had been made, and the occasion was one of the happiest of recent social events. Dainty refreshments were dispensed during the evening and the merrymakers jubilant over the pleasure given them at the popular and hospitable Slater house.

In a gorgeous setting of red roses and ferns, the home of Miss Frieda Meyer on Commonwealth avenue was the scene of one of the most brilliant of April parties, when she entertained about forty members of the younger social set on Friday night as a gracious compliment to her northern guests, Miss Anna Bowen and Miss Alma Bowen, who are sojourning in this vicinity after an extensive visit in San Diego. The rooms had been cleared for dancing and were alluring in their softly-shaded red lights and brilliant decorations of the same color. Splendid music gladdened the hearts of the dancers, and at the conclusion of the frolic a delicious buffet luncheon was served. The Bowen sisters will be extensively entertained in an informal way before they return to San Francisco.

Miss Dorothy Upton was in Alhambra last week spending the week-end with her mother, Mrs. Lulu Upton, at the Hotel Breckenridge. Miss Upton is from Los Angeles, and is a frequent visitor in the Gateway City.

Later delectable refreshments were served and the occasion was thoroughly enjoyed by the following guests: Mrs. I. Carr, Mrs. J. N. Gillies, Mrs. T. Daniels, Mrs. H. H. Mayberry, Mrs. H. Holmes, Mrs. R. Arnold, Mrs. William Miles, Mrs. F. Obrikat, Mrs. Brouck, Mrs. Oscar Stokes, Miss Coleman, Mrs. Frank Stokes and Miss Ora Stokes.

Rublee, Jr., and son of Mr. and Mrs. A. Moore of Whittier, and like his sister, chose the date of his parents wedding anniversary to be his own. Miss Anne Cookman is spending the week-end with Miss Helen Chase at Whittier.

Glendale.

A DELIGHTFUL auction bridge party was given Thursday afternoon at the residence of Mrs. F. A. Richardson on North Kenwood, as a compliment to Mrs. C. H. Hurd of Kenosha, Wis., who has been visiting her daughter, Mrs. L. H. Harrod of North Louise street. The home was beautifully decorated with roses and after an afternoon at bridge, luncheon was served in the dining-room. Prizes were awarded Mrs. John Robert White, Jr. Out-of-town guests were Mrs. Douglas Newall of Kenosha, Wis., and the guest of honor. Mr. and Mrs. Hurd left for their home in Wisconsin the latter part of the week.

Miss Margaret Boucher, assisted by her mother, Mrs. E. Boucher, entertained a coterie of merry friends at her home on Louise and Third streets, Friday evening. Baskets and bowls of dainty pink Cecile Brunner roses were most effectively arranged throughout the rooms, where music, games and dancing were enjoyed. Miss Mildred Wight and Mr. William Bode each received first prizes. Actress Tells Secret of Mrs. Davis. The earlier part of the evening was spent in disposing of the business of the class, social gaieties succeeding this period. The merry young women engaged in a round of pastimes that proved exceedingly entertaining, and later delectable light refreshments were served by the hostesses. Those who were present besides Mrs. Davis and Miss Roberts were Miss Margaret Palmer, Miss Lottie Carriker, Miss Gladys Hubbard, Miss Opal McDaniel, Miss Hilda Kirchoff, Miss Eva Fearn, Miss Fonda. The guests cordially expressed their appreciation of the delightful manner in which they had been entertained when they voiced their good nights to their hostesses.

A Well Known Actress Tells How She Darkened Her Gray Hair and Promoted Its Growth With a Simple Home Made Mixture.

Miss Blanche Rose, a well-known actress, who darkened her gray hair with a simple preparation which she mixed at home, in a recent interview at Chicago, Ill., made the following statement: "Any lady or gentleman can darken their gray hair and make it soft and glossy with this simple recipe, which they can mix at home. To a half pint of water add 1 oz. of bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and ¼ oz. of glycerine. These ingredients can be bought at any drug store at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until it becomes the required shade. This will make a gray haired person look 20 years younger. It is also fine to promote the growth of hair, relieves itching and scalp humors and is excellent for dandruff and falling hair."

Walking in unannounced, a large party of the friends of Mrs. Edward Davidson very happily surprised that popular lady on a recent Friday afternoon. A cordial welcome was extended by the involuntary but amiable hostess and the unexpected guests were most hospitably entertained. The visitors had taken with them their prettiest pieces of fancy work and while dainty needlework progressed under skillful fingers, vivacious chat enlivened the fleeting hours. As the afternoon waned, the hostess again proved herself equal to the demands of unexpected hospitality and served her guests with dainty refreshments. Indeed, so successfully pleasant was the afternoon surprise party that other affairs of a similar nature are likely to follow in the near future.

The Villa Park Shakespeare Club held a most interesting meeting on a recent Thursday at the home of Mrs. Hugh Thompson, other hostesses besides Mrs. Thompson being Madame E. N. H. Congor and Mrs. Conger Thompson. A preliminary programme of music and quotations from the writings of the immortal bard, which was greatly enjoyed and which was richly contributed to by the various members who attended in generous numbers. The play of "Romeo and Juliet" was reviewed, the scanning including not only the play itself but the geography of its various scenes, the history of the play and those who have acted it successfully during its long life on the stage. A programme was reported for the celebration of the birthday of the bard, and later a social hour was enjoyed by the ladies as a pleasing conclusion to the profitably spent afternoon.

Compton.

MRS. R. V. HARSHMAN contributed a charming social affair on Sunday, with Mr. and Mrs. N. S. Narion of Alhambra specially honored. Covers were laid for six at her home in Acacia street and a five-course dinner was served at 2 o'clock. Pink tulle bows on the handle of a large crocheted basket filled with Cecile Brunner buds made a dainty floral center for the perfectly appointed board. Streamers of the tulle extended from the handle to similar, but smaller baskets to each plate, which were filled with salted almonds. Pink carnations and ferns gave a dainty touch to the drawing-room, where a social afternoon was spent.

A number of relatives gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Proctor, No. 211 North Wilmington avenue, Sunday, where they were delightfully entertained at dinner. A green and white color scheme was employed in the table decorations, where roses were used in profusion. Covers were placed for the host and hostess, and the following guests: Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Proctor, Mr. and Mrs. James Mason of Los Angeles, Mr. and Mrs. E. N. Proctor, Messrs. Ray and Russel Proctor.

In a bower of bridal wreath, ferns and roses at the Catholic Church in Wilmington, Miss Evalyn Courville of Compton became the wife of John Roadcap of Visalia, Monday evening. The wedding took place in the presence of relatives of the bride and groom at 8 o'clock. The ring ceremony was read by Rev. R. Healey of Wilmington. Mrs. Horace Sprague served as matron of honor and the groom was attended by H. Sprague. The bride was gowned in beautiful white satin with lace overdress. Her veil was caught in a wreath of orange blossoms and she carried an arm bouquet of white roses and ferns. After the ceremony a wedding supper was served at the home of the bride on North Wilmington avenue. Mr. and Mrs. Roadcap will be at home to their friends at Visalia, where the groom is well known.

A charming family dinner party was held Saturday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Abbott, No. 120 East Main street. Harsham of No. 506 Acacia street. This gracious matron, whose hospitality is so favorably known, chose a glorious riot of Cecile Brunner buds to beautify the refreshment board and the attractive rooms of the clubhouse. Every guest, whether married or single, carried home a piece of daintily tied wedding cake to slip under his pillow and to dream over. Guests included Mr. and Mrs. Howard King, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon P. Trigg, Mrs. Will Derenia and Mr. and Mrs. John Derenia of Los Angeles, Mr. and Mrs. Ed Quinlan of San Diego, Mr. and Mrs. Ned Dill, Mr. and Mrs. George Derenia, Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Santa Ana.

AMONG the most delightful social events of the present season was the afternoon party recently given by Mrs. F. W. Wiesseman at her handsome North Broadway home in honor of Canadian and eastern friends now visiting in Santa Ana. The decorations were developed in California poppies and yellow nasturtiums, one of the most effective decorative bits being a mass of the velvety rich-hued flowers on the newel post of the stairway on which were draped the Stars and Stripes and the Union Jack. A brilliant musical programme was opened by Miss Sarah F. Gardner and Miss Violet Wiesseman in a duo of Spanish dances, followed by a group of nature songs rendered by Mrs. Jesse Albright with Mrs. W. B. Snow accompanying. Scotch songs were charmingly given by Mrs. Halstead, one of the interesting Canadian guests. Clever pastimes including progressive conversation followed the musical numbers and a dainty collation was prettily served on small tables centered with bowls of golden poppies. Places were marked for Mmes. Perry, Charlotte Elliott, Halstead, Etachson, and Miss Kate Anderson of Canada; Mrs. Harry D. Hinckley and her charming daughter, Miss Myrtle Hinkley of Michigan; Mrs. Bachus of Berkeley; Mmes Asa Vandermast, J. J. Van Wyk, W. B. Snow, S. M. Davis, A. H. Theal, Gardner, Jessie Albright, J. W. An April shower that was gratifying in its results to Miss Laura Fenstermacher occurred on a recent Wednesday afternoon at the home of Miss Hattie Whidden on South Main street with Miss Whidden and Miss Bessie Lewis as hostesses. Miss Fenstermacher will be one of the May brides, her marriage to Louis Tillotson, a successful young contractor of this city, to be celebrated in that month. The Whidden residence was abloom Wednesday with royal Maman Cochet and Cecile Brunner roses combined with maidenhair ferns, and coincident with the pink and white decorative scheme was the dainty pink and white comforter tied by the merry coterie of maids and young matrons during the afternoon as a gift for the new home soon to come into existence. At the height of the joyous chat going on over the tying of the comforter, the bride-to-be was called to the front door, when she discovered a huge clothes basket lined with pink, wreathed with garlands of Cecile Brunner roses and filled with fascinatingly mysterious-looking packages which proved to contain dainty gifts for the honoree. Delectable refreshments served on individual trays followed the gift shower, the tray of the prospective bride being decorated with a lovely bouquet of exquisite Cecile Brunners and ferns. EGAN SCHOOL—MUSIC and DRAMA

Letter from Oliver Morosco.

Mr. Frank C. Egan, Egan School—Music and Drama, City. My Dear Frank: To demonstrate to you that I am endeavoring to keep my promise to you regarding your pupils whenever consistent, I beg to announce that I have engaged Miss O'Rourk and Miss Thomas for next week's production. I have every reason to feel that with the amount of work you have given these pupils they will play the parts assigned them very well. I am going to try two other of your pupils in the forthcoming production, so please send the two you think most eligible and I will talk with them. Just so long as you can furnish me the talent I require for small parts I will use them in preference to outside professionals. Your school is certainly the best of its kind in the country at the present time and with the improvements you are continually making you are absolutely certain of well merited success and anything I can do to further your interests please command me. With best wishes I beg to remain,

Your friend,
(Signed) O. MOROSCO.

Extract from letter of John Cort.

Knowing you for ten years, two of which I was personally interested in the Egan School, I consider you one of the real teachers of Dramatic Art in the country. It has been my pleasure to place a number of your graduates in my leading companies, all of whom have made good. The people of Los Angeles and vicinity should lose no time in availing themselves of this great opportunity to study under your able direction.

Sincerely yours, (Signed) JOHN CORT.

We furnish camera, film and chemicals for developing. The most thoroughly equipped school of its kind on the Pacific Coast.

When you have the opportunity to thoroughly prepare yourself for a profession where competent men command $50.00 to $100.00 weekly?

Music

This department specializes in piano, voice and violin under the direction of artists of note. Negotiations are under way to make this the largest Conservatory of Music in the West.

Children's Class.

No school offers the advantages to the child for culture development on a par with the Egan School. Classes meet Wednesday afternoon and Saturday morning teaching fencing, dancing, elocution and voice development. Many children from this class have developed into artists.

Perhaps no school is better known and recognized in America for genuine results in the drama than the EGAN SCHOOL. Through the personal efforts of Mr. Egan, who is at the head of this department, hundreds of graduates are holding responsible positions in reliable companies. Watts.

MEMBERS of the Latin Club met at the home of Mrs. Arthur King on Firth boulevard Wednesday and enjoyed a happy social time, followed by an informal supper. Impromptu pleasantries and amusements were the order of the occasion, which was thoroughly enjoyed by the following members: Mrs. Ella Lee, Mrs. Serbina Sorensen, Mrs. Katherine Henwood, Mrs. Pauline Scholler, Mrs. Vera Palmer, Mrs. Edith Nay and Mrs. Arthur King. The guests present were Eveline Palmer and Beatrice Henwood, the small daughters of two of the members.

Prof. and Mrs. M. E. Carriere of No. 864 Elm street delightfully entertained with a 12 o'clock luncheon on Tuesday in honor of their house guest, Mrs. Carriere's mother, Mrs. Francis Folk, of San Francisco. The table centerpiece was a handsome cut-glass vase of red American Beauty roses and the places were marked for six, which included the host, hostess, honoree, Mrs. John Larson and Mrs. Emma McPhearson of Los Angeles and the small daughter of the family, Miss Francis Carriere.

A few friends of Mr. and Mrs. William Norling were entertained at a dinner party given Monday evening at their home, No. 774 Firth boulevard. The occasion was in honor of Mr. Norling's fortieth birthday anniversary, and it was planned and executed by Mrs. Norling without his knowledge. All was in readiness when Mr. Norling returned from Los Angeles at 6 o'clock and the surprise was complete. The guests included Mrs. Helma Kelsey, the Misses Jennie Norling, Helen Kelsey, Ruby Carlson, Ruby Norling, Beatrice Norling and Helen Hass and John Norling.

Mrs. W. C. Commons charmingly entertained with a 6 o'clock dinner Tuesday at her home, No. 544 Rosella avenue. Pink and lavender verbenas were used in the arrangement of an artistic floral setting, and the same color motif characterized also the other appointments. Covers were laid for four when a three-course dinner was served the host, hostess, Miss Hetty Budy and Homer Cockrum of Los Angeles.

Mrs. Lydia Smith and William Burke were united in marriage last week at the Catholic parsonage of Nadeau, Father O'Flynn officiating. The bride appeared for the ceremony wearing a smart tailored suit with hat to match and memories of a past were revived by a veil worn at a former marriage which formed part of the wedding toilette of the Sunday bride. Returning from the ceremony they were greeted at the station with a shower of rice and old shoes and were escorted to the bride's home at No. 301 West Shorb avenue, where an evening of song and good time was enjoyed by all.

The High Five Club gathered on Thursday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Koehler, No. 329 Huntington avenue. Gold of Ophir roses and Shasta daisies in a dainty tint of pink adorned the rooms of reception. Three tables of cards were played and six prizes won. Mrs. Louis Smith won high score. Mrs. Al Bowers was second best player of the ladies, while Miss Anna Koehler was awarded the consolation. Doler Fields scored high and Fred Koehler was second. The consolation went to Al Bowers.

An informal though delightful affair of Wednesday evening was the dinner party given by Mrs. Fred Kent at her home on West Shorb avenue in honor of O. Eppley of Glenwood, Mo. The living-rooms were prettily decorated with Marie Henrietta roses and ferns, while in the dining-room red verbenas and ferns were used. A four-course dinner with covers laid for ten was served at 7 o'clock. Cards followed.

Eight shared the pleasure given Sunday by Mrs. O. L. Collier at Shorb and Compton avenues. Winnie Davis roses and foliage were employed in the floral motif, with pink tones predominating. A three-course dinner was served at 1 o'clock, and seated at the table were the host and hostess, Mrs. F. W. Loren, Mrs. Mary E. Pollard and son, Golden Pollard, of Los Angeles and Miss Ruth and Clifton Collier.

Garden Grove.

THE Parliamentary Club was recently entertained at the home of the new president, David Carmichael, with the ladies of the house acting as hostesses. The programme included an interesting dissertation on the rules of order and debate, N. Carmichael being the efficient leader. Following the lesson of the evening a social time was enjoyed, music and conversation entertaining the older members of the club, and jolly pastimes amusing the younger ones. A pleasant interlude was the serving of dainty refreshments by the hostesses, an informal programme following the collation. Those joining in the impromptu entertainment were Frank Powell with several violin solos, Miss Myra Powell, who rendered an instrumental number, and Miss Vada Swall, who gave a reading. The entire evening was thoroughly enjoyed and each of the large number present is looking forward to the next meeting of the club, which is to be held on the last Friday in May. This club has taken a distinctive place in the social and study organizations of Garden Grove, and is rapidly growing in numbers and popularity.

The opening of the new headquarters of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of this little city was most successful, and was marked by a short programme given by a number of young students from the grammar grades of the city schools, demonstrating the evil effects of cigarette smoking on boy life. Nearly fifty of the pupils from the second and third grades were guests of the W.C.T.U. ladies, and listened to the programme with evident interest. The afternoon was formally opened by the president, Mrs. W. Harper, and Mrs. Waltz, leader of the topic under discussion, gave an earnest, introductory talk. The entire meeting was one of interest, and the new headquarters in the new clubroom of the Y.M.C.A. building, were most favorably commented on as being attractive and convenient. The ladies are to co-operate with the Y.M.C.A. in the furnishing and upkeep of the clubroom, an arrangement that promises to be mutually advantageous. At the opening meeting plans for ways and means were discussed satisfactorily. Delegates were also elected for the county W.C.T.U. convention held in Orange on the last two days of April.

Mrs. McLeod and Mrs. Kenyon of Garden Grove were cordially welcomed into membership in the Woman's Club of Santa Ana on a recent Tuesday, when the club was entertained at the charming home of the president, Mrs. W. C. Young. The home was a bower with its profuse decorations of Maman Cochet roses, which just now are in the height of their blossoming. The roll call of the club was responded to with descriptions of birthstones, many new ideas as to their significance being brought out. The Garden Grove ladies contributed to this pleasing feature of the afternoon's programme, which preceded the election of officers during which Mrs. Flora M. M. Pyle, who lives near Garden Grove and who is a prominent Southern California club woman, was elected as corresponding secretary. The Garden Grove ladies are a decided acquisition to the club, and will enter heartily into the year's work, which was outlined at Tuesday's meeting.

Covina.

PENJERICK RANCH, the home of Mr. and Mrs. P. E. Letchworth, was the scene of a very pleasant gathering on Friday evening, when these hospitable people entertained the Ranch Club. The members spent the evening in unravelling intricate charades. A delicious supper was served by the hostess. The members present were Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Miller, Mr. and Mrs. Murray Fosburg, Mr. and Mrs. Ted Wighton, Miss Dorothy Bailey, Miss Porter, Messrs. Sanborn, Ellicott Evans and Lloyd Porter.

Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Alexander of West Covina celebrated their tenth wedding anniversary Tuesday evening, with about fifty of their friends present at the ranch home. The friends and neighbors gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Maxson, where they were joined by the couple, and from there the people went to the West Covina clubhouse, which was appropriately decorated with wedding bells, roses and honeysuckle. An orchestra of young ladies played the wedding march, and the couple proceeded to the altar, where they were met by Mr. Fred Wilson, who went through the mock ceremony of reuniting the pair. Mr. and Mrs. Alexander were presented with a large number of household articles. The neighbors and friends enjoyed a social evening until a late hour.

Beginning with a tennis tournament in the afternoon and continuing into the evening, a large party of young people enjoyed themselves on Saturday evening at Rose Terrace, the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Bonham. The affair was held in honor of Miss Mildred Bonham. A box party at the Isis Theater was followed by a dancing party at the home of Misses Lucille and Genevieve Matthews. The guests were: Hazel Potter, Marjorie Clarke, Lucille and Genevieve Matthews, Marie Nelson, Myrtle Daniels, Mildred Bonham, Helen Bainbridge, Violet Tucker, Bernice Woods, Gertrude Nash, all of Covina, and Misses Ruth and Helen Whitsel of San Dimas; Messrs. Harlow Bailey, Lester Seib, Ted Watson, Harry Bleecker, Porter and George Kerckhoff, Carmel Kring, Arthur McCutchan, all of Covina, and Clay Goodell, Horace and Reginald White of Pomona.

Ocean Park.

THE Seaside Auction Club was entertained with a brilliant luncheon at the Merritt Jones on Wednesday, Mrs. John T. Dennis being hostess. Luncheon was served in the dining-room, amidst a fascinating scheme of pink, swans large and small bearing burdens of dainty Cecile Brunner buds being used upon the table, where places were found by rosebuds with faces in their hearts. Similar conceits were the favors. Later bridge was played in the upstairs ballroom. Present were Mrs. Horace Beek, Mrs. Adolf Frese, Mrs. J. A. Dubbs, Mrs. H. B. Washburn, Mrs. J. W. Lawrence, Mrs. Ella Morgan, Mrs. C. V. Peckham, Mrs. Wilhelmina Vischer, Mrs. E. B. Smith, Mrs. H. L. Anderson and Mrs. Charles P. Schermerhorn. At the cards prizes were awarded to Mrs. Peckham, Mrs. Smith and Mrs. Dubbs.

In the evening Mrs. Dennis again entertained at the hotel with a small dinner party, preceding the dancing at the Breakers Club.

On Tuesday afternoon Mrs. F. L. Murray made high score at the auction bridge of the Breakers Club, Mrs. J. T. Dennis being hostess. Eleven tables were utilized for the affair, light refreshments being served. Mrs. A. E. Jackson will be the May hostess, assisting Mrs. H. L. For the tea, the shades were drawn, the dining-room lighted with [illegible] shaded candelebra, the Martha Washington blossoms being used in a shade of rose. Mrs. T. H. G[illespie] at No. 517 South Catalina street. [The] affair was formal and many fr[iends] and acquaintances of the bride [and] groom were present to witness [the] ceremony. The full Episcopal ring [cere]mony was read by Rev. Mr. [illegible] Glendale, who is an old-time fr[iend of] the Gillespies, having several years [illegible] prepared the bride for confir[mation]. The bride wore a creamy white [illegible] gown with a draped train. The [gown] was set off with pearl and rose [trim]mings. [Pass]ing this they came to a bower of [flow]ers, principally roses, before a [fire]place, the flowers extending over [illegible] and half way across the room. At 10 o'clock [illegible] the newlyweds left the scene of [the] wedding in an automobile. They [ap]proached the motor car over a bed [of] roses and were showered with [rose] petals. No information was given as to the direction to be taken [by the] bride and groom, all plans for [the] honeymoon having been kept strictly secret. They will return in four weeks, and will be at home to friends at the home of the bride's par[ents]. The traveling gown of the [bride] was a gray gabardine, set off [with a] gray picture hat.

Long Beach.

FOUR young people of this city, ostensibly on a trip to San Diego and return with a chaperon, evaded that sometimes necessary personage and were married at Santa Ana. Arriving home Tuesday, they astounded their parents with the news. The young men and women were Nelson Van Winkle, who married Miss Esther Moist, daughter of Councilman and Mrs. Jack Moist, and Owen Tafert, who took as his bride Miss Pearl Biron. The first-named couple are both under 21 years of age.

Planning an auto trip with a married friend as a chaperon, the two young women entered secretly into a compact to visit the Hymeneal altar at the Gretna Green of the Southland. Until they returned their parents were of the opinion that the trip to the exposition was made under the severe guidance of the chaperon. The marriages were solemnized in the courthouse at Santa Ana. Mr. Van Winkle is the son of Dr. and Mrs. Van Winkle of Anaheim and Temple streets.

Mrs. Herbert La France of No. East Second street was hostess at an afternoon of auction bridge Wednesday; the delightful entertainment was followed by a collation. Twenty-three friends responded to invitations. Brown baskets and vases of pink roses and buds, the color motif of decoration being carried out in other appointments.

Members of the Star Bridge Whist Club were entertained at the fortnightly meeting by Mr. and Mrs. J. C. George of East Seventh street. Trophies were won by Mr. F. L. Fox and Mrs. W. G. Caldwell. Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Tucker played for Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Balton. Decorations were pink roses.

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond P. Kaigher of New York City arrived in Long Beach Monday evening for a few days' visit with C. E. Nrinbill and Edward and Will Wallace, old Minneapolis friends. Mrs. Kaigher is a superb contralto artist and has for years been soloist at the great St. Paul Church of New York.

Five Hundred was the diversion enjoyed by guests of Mr. and Mrs. George H. Hammond, No. 2022 East Second street, Wednesday evening. The guests were self-invited, surprising the couple. After the games refreshments provided by the guests were enjoyed. Those who gathered were members of the Merry Wives' Club.

Miss Cornelia Adele Teal of Pacific avenue has as her guest for two months Miss Catherine Lawrence of Brooklyn, N. Y. The two have been closely associated in educational work, Miss Lawrence holding the position of secretary of the Chautauqua class of 1895.

Collins of Denver, Colo., was solemnized at the Congregational Church at 2:30 p.m. Wednesday by the pastor, Rev. Henry Kendall Booth. Mr. and Mrs. Collins left immediately for Kansas, where they will reside.

Mrs. J. P. Adams, who came here from Illinois to spend the winter, was hostess to many friends at a prettily-appointed luncheon given at the Panama Apartments. Lilies and marguerites and roses were effectively used in the decorations. Places were marked with bits of familiar poems. A three-course collation was served.

At a happy gathering of relatives at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ezra Stevens, No. 808 Linden avenue, Wednesday, the engagement of Miss Edith Stevens, sister of the host, and Amos W. Nagle of Nelson, B. C., was announced. It was also the occasion of the seventy-fifth birthday anniversary of Mr. Stevens. Accompanying the last course were roses, on the stems of which were tied missives telling of the engagement. The wedding is to take place in the early fall.

Mrs. L. P. Crutcher and Mrs. H. Pillsbury joined in entertaining members of the Stitch and Chatter Club this week at the Pillsbury home on Cedar avenue. Readings by Mrs. W. B. Julian added to the enjoyment of the usual pastime.

The attractive country home of the James Barnhills was the scene Monday night of a merry gathering of the Dozen and Two Club, the hostesses being Miss Jessie Barnhill and Miss Lenna King. Sewing and chatting round a blazing fire sped the time until the guests were bidden to the dining-room for refreshments which among other things included ices molded as clusters of grapes garnished with real grape leaves. THE most noted presentation ever given in local musical circles was that of the Cecilian Chorus, which made its initial appearance Thursday evening at the Congregational Church. The excellent numbers were all rendered by local singers who have appeared at many afternoon and evening club and private affairs. The event was under the auspices of the Rialto Woman's Club and W. J. Melville.

The card party given by Mrs. George Wood at her home on Riverside avenue Tuesday afternoon was a brilliant function, pervaded with the atmosphere of spring in the accessories and decorations. The hostess entertained as a farewell courtesy to Mrs. H. C. Lash, who departs next week for a summer's visit with her parents at Hillsdale, Mich. A pretty guest prize was given Mrs. Lash, the card prize falling to Mrs. J. C. Boyd. An elegant luncheon was served at the small tables. Mrs. Wood was assisted by Mmes. Delbert Stewart, H. R. THE Francis Paul Girls enjoyed a most delightful lecture on Monday night, the subject being "Birds of California," and the speaker was Frank Palmer of Claremont. Specimens were on exhibit, the work of a Claremont High School boy. This was the regular monthly meeting of this class of girls and proved most instructive. Following the lecture, a social hour was enjoyed.

Cooley, Mrs. W. L. Brown and Mrs. Edwards.

The Merry Wives Embroidery Club spent a jolly afternoon on Friday, the guests of one of the members, Mrs. W. L. Brown, on North Second avenue. Gardena.

THE Woman's Progressive Club of Gardena has held many delightful affairs, but none was more thoroughly enjoyed by all perhaps than the children's day programme, given on Wednesday afternoon. The children who took part were the little kindergarteners, and those in the first grade of the Gardena public schools.

The afternoon was opened by a roll call on the part of the members, who answered with some little, funny, childish saying; then followed the main programme of the afternoon, with Miss Phoebe Parker in charge, assisted by Miss A. G. Cowles.

The children, each supplied with a flag, formed in a circle, with a little lass standing in the center holding a large flag. Then they all sang about Washington, after which came the salute to the flag, and the pledge that every school child knows, and finishing with "America." Following this three little Mexican lads from the Spanish school sang the Mexican national hymn, while holding the Mexican flag.

Kindergarten songs and games came in quick succession, followed by a recitation in concert: "In My Little Garden Bed." This was beautifully worked out by the tots. It was pretty to see them making a garden, planting the seeds, watering the plants and picking the flowers. After singing more songs and playing more games they acted out to music in a sort of pantomime the story of two little birds—building the nest, etc.

The Maypole drill was perhaps the prettiest thing of the afternoon. Both boys and girls were dressed in white and each wore a wreath of Cecile Brunner roses, in harmonious setting with the decorations of the clubroom, which were of the same tiny flower. At the conclusion of the programme all the children joined in the grand march, and then, being seated, were served bountifully by the gracious and charming ladies of the club with ice cream, strawberries and cake. While the children were enjoying this collation Mrs. Peter Hanson entertained them with a story.

Washing Won't Rid Head of Dandruff

The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

Do this tonight, and by morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop at once, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and never fails to do the work.

FRIENDS of Mr. and Mrs. Clyde D. H. Flower, the latest addition to the newly-wedded of Tustin society, are eagerly awaiting their return from a bridal trip taken to parts unknown after their marriage on Wednesday evening of last week at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Walker, at their Second street home in Santa Ana. The ceremony was a quiet one owing to a recent bereavement in the bride's family, but was nevertheless a beautiful and impressive one. Rev. J. P. Green, formerly of New York, and an old-time friend of the family, was the officiating clergyman, and the young couple was attended by Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Deardorff of Tustin, themselves a recent bride and groom. The bride was gowned in a traveling suit of tailored morning blue, and the winsome matron of honor was attired in the chic going away costume worn on her own honeymoon trip. The bridel party stood under a floral canopy of Cecile Brunner roses, and the house was garnitured with a wealth of pink and white roses, the same color motif prevailing in the wedding collation served after the review of the elegant gifts and the voicing of congratulations. Mr. Flower, who is a son of Tustin, will bring his bride to a new bungalow home on the San Joaquin ranch, already furnished, and Tustin friends will warmly welcome them.

The members of the Tustin literature section of the Ebell Society were entertained on a recent Tuesday afternoon by Miss Preble Drake at the home of her sister, Mrs. C. F. Smith, on Laguna avenue. The Smith home is in a most beautiful setting of flowers, palms, oleander hedges, and splendid shade and fruit trees. Not only are the scenic charms of the charming home most attractive, but the hospitality of Miss Drake and her sister is widely known, hence a visit to their home is always looked forward to with the greatest of pleasure. The ladies of the literary section were well rewarded for assembling at the rendezvous, as the rooms were not only fragrant with the perfume of lovely roses, but the programme presented was of unusual interest. After roll call, which was responded to with interesting current events in the literary world, a graphic account of the wonders of the San Diego exposition was given by Mrs. C. E. Utt and Miss Minnie Childs, who recently visited the unique and interesting exhibition at San Diego. Souvenir booklets and photographs of the charms of the exposition gave interesting emphasis to the narration of the ladies. Brilliant instrumental selections played on the piano by the hostess, and the serving of dainty refreshments marked the closing of the delightful afternoon.

Dainty needlework has always appealed to the heart of femininity, and the small club in which a few congenial spirits meet together to exchange ideas on the latest stitches and to chat as they sew, has grown to be one of the most popular of social organizations among women. A fancy work club is the most recent of societies to be formed among the ladies of the Irvine ranch section near Tustin. Mrs. J. S. Callahan was the hostess for the new club of which the members, besides Mrs. Callahan, are Mrs. J. D. Holford, Mrs. H. V. Roller, Mrs. L. E. Morris, Mrs. Jack King, Mrs. Will Jeffers, Mrs. Andrew Cook, Mrs. Demaris Deardorf, Mrs. Joe Stroupe of Anaheim and Mrs. Edgar Chapman of Orange. The beginning of the life of the club was auspicious, many pretty pieces of embroidery being started while the ladies conversed animatedly over the pleasant tasks. It was decided that the meetings would be held not oftener than every three weeks, and at the close of the happy afternoon, the hostess served delicious refreshments.

His Sweetheart

HERPICIDE CO.

To him she is always the same—the dearest, the sweetest, the prettiest girl in the world. In his heart she reigns supreme—his ideal of all that is best in womanhood. His eyes reveal her to him as the possessor of a fascination and attractiveness of which nothing can deprive her. She may not wear elaborate and expensive dresses, she may not even have a pretty face, according to worldly standards. Her chiefest claim to beauty may even lie in a mass of glittering, fluffy, natural hair, growing on her own head. But certainly no hair can be charming or even attractive if it is not properly dressed and intelligently cared for. There is a subtle charm about beautiful hair that lends more to personal adornment than the combined skill of the beauty doctor and modiste.

To the girl or woman desiring always to be at her best and to make the most of Nature's richest gift, we recommend

Owes Her Life to This Lung Medicine

Sufferers from Consumption should take the trouble to investigate what Eckman's Alterative has accomplished in restoring others to health. Read this:

Griffith, Lake Co., Ind.

"Gentlemen:—About Sept. 10th, 1908, my mother-in-law was taken sick with Catarrhal Pneumonia, which developed into Tuberculosis. In January, when Rev. Wm. Berg of St. Michael's Church, at Schererville, Ind., prepared her for death, he recommended that I get Eckman's Alterative, and see if it would not give her some relief. The attending physician declared she had Consumption and was beyond all medical aid. Practically without hope for recovery, I insisted that she try the Alterative, which she did. I am glad to say that she soon began to improve. Now she works as hard as ever, weighs twenty pounds heavier than she ever did before she took sick and is in good health."

(Abbreviated.)
(Affidavit) JOS. GRIMER.

Eckman's Alterative is most efficacious in bronchial catarrh and severe throat and lung affections and upbuilding the system. Contains no harmful or habit-forming drugs. Accept no substitutes. Small size, $1; regular size, $2. Sold by leading druggists. Write for booklet of recoveries.

Tustin.

FRIENDS of Mr. and Mrs. Clyde D. H. Flower, the latest addition to the newly-wedded of Tustin society, are eagerly awaiting their return from a bridal trip taken to parts unknown after their marriage on Wednesday evening of last week at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Walker, at their Second street home in Santa Ana. The ceremony was a quiet one owing to a recent bereavement in the bride's family, but was nevertheless a beautiful and impressive one. Rev. J. P. Green, formerly of New York, and an old-time friend of the family, was the officiating clergyman, and the young couple was attended by Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Deardorff of Tustin, themselves a recent bride and groom. The bride was gowned in a traveling suit of tailored morning blue, and the winsome matron of honor was attired in the chic going away costume worn on her own honeymoon trip. The bridal party stood under a floral canopy of Cecile Brunner roses, and the house was garnitured with a wealth of pink and white roses, the same color motif prevailing in the wedding collation served after the review of the elegant gifts and the voicing of congratulations. Mr. Flower, who is a son of Tustin, will bring his bride to a new bungalow home on the San Joaquin ranch, already furnished, and Tustin friends will warmly welcome them.

The members of the Tustin literature section of the Ebell Society were entertained on a recent Tuesday afternoon by Miss Preble Drake at the home of her sister, Mrs. C. F. Smith, on Laguna avenue. The Smith home is in a most beautiful setting of flowers, palms, oleander hedges, and splendid shade and fruit trees. Not only are the scenic charms of the charming home most attractive, but the hospitality of Miss Drake and her sister is widely known, hence a visit to their home is always looked forward to with the greatest of pleasure. The ladies of the literary section were well rewarded for assembling at the rendezvous, as the rooms were not only fragrant with the perfume of lovely roses, but the programme presented was of unusual interest. After roll call, which was responded to with interesting current events in the literary world, a graphic account of the wonders of the San Diego exposition was given by Mrs. C. E. Utt and Miss Minnie Childs, who recently visited the unique and interesting exhibition at San Diego. Souvenir booklets and photographs of the charms of the exposition gave interesting emphasis to the narration of the ladies. Brilliant instrumental selections played on the piano by the hostess, and the serving of dainty refreshments marked the closing of the delightful afternoon.

Dainty needlework has always appealed to the heart of femininity, and the small club in which a few congenial spirits meet together to exchange ideas on the latest stitches and to chat as they sew, has grown to be one of the most popular of social organizations among women. A fancy work club is the most recent of societies to be formed among the ladies of the Irvine ranch section near Tustin. Mrs. J. S. Callahan was the hostess for the new club of which the members, besides Mrs. Callahan, are Mrs. J. D. Holford, Mrs. H. V. Roller, Mrs. L. E. Morris, Mrs. Jack King, Mrs. Will Jeffers, Mrs. Andrew Cook, Mrs. Demaris Deardorf, Mrs. Joe Stroupe of Anaheim and Mrs. Edgar Chapman of Orange. The beginning of the life of the club was auspicious, many pretty pieces of embroidery being started while the ladies conversed animatedly over the pleasant tasks. It was decided that the meetings would be held not oftener than every three weeks, and at the close of the happy afternoon, the hostess served delicious refreshments.

Sufferers from Consumption should take the trouble to investigate what Eckman's Alterative has accomplished in restoring others to health. Read this:

Griffith, Lake Co., Ind.

"Gentlemen:—About Sept. 10th, 1908, my mother-in-law was taken sick with Catarrhal Pneumonia, which developed into Tuberculosis. In January, when Rev. Wm. Berg of St. Michael's Church, at Schererville, Ind., prepared her for death, he recommended that I get Eckman's Alterative, and see if it would not give her some relief. The attending physician declared she had Consumption and was beyond all medical aid. Practically without hope for recovery, I insisted that she try the Alterative, which she did. I am glad to say that she soon began to improve. Now she works as hard as ever, weighs twenty pounds heavier than she ever did before she took sick and is in good health."

PLENTY OF CLERKS TO SERVE YOU

FOR WOMEN AND MEN.

Facts, Features and Fancies.

BY OLIVE GRAY.

HAVE you ever stopped to think how rich we are in California? Even the poorest of us have wealth beyond the dreams of avarice, when compared with people of less favored climes!

I thought of this recently when gazing over the many kinds of roses in a single small cottage garden in a far-from-richest part of the city. Why, in any other country a mere fraction of the floral treasure there would be accounted fabulous! And yet we take all this as a matter of course.

I hear you saying to yourself: "But I live in an apartment-house or a hotel, where I possess no garden." But you have eyes with which to see—and, after all, seeing is the greater part of possession when it comes to flowers or any other things of beauty. You cannot be dispossessed of the satisfaction gained by merely passing along the street, for your eyes are feasted and your memory stored with the beauty freely given out from the humblest wayside garden in this lovely land. Never, it seems to me, were the flowers as plentiful or as perfect as now. Riots of glorious bloom overrun every porch and shed and backyard fence. Nature, here in California, is holding an exposition all her own, whether in field or garden. Beauty is crowning the year Queen of the Fiesta.

Sew Back, Forward, up or Down!

You may absentmindedly start sewing backward, if you are inclined that way, or you may sew according to Hoyle and sewing rules; you may run the snub-nosed presser foot over layers of manifold cloth—and still you will hear no protest, and no halt will be made by that new sewing machine which is, as I once heard an agent say, "both fool and woman-proof." Sassy wretch, to compare us together! But we really are not—all of us—the best of machinists, so perhaps we'd better let that occasion for fighting pass. Anyhow, with this new sewing machine we may run as carelessly as a jitney bus and no calamities will ensue, either to the machine or to our sewing. The shuttle is a rotary and declared to be the ultimate in rotaries—for it is declared to be fool-proof! Did you ever hear of such perfection in a sewing machine? Sounds almost as though one might start it at the spring dressmaking and leave it in a room by itself to complete the work. Costs no more, either, than sewing machines of just ordinary intelligence. Yes, of course, it is in Los Angeles. Being so intelligent, how could it stay away?

Buy Float.

The bargains at that big store where you "watch your step, count ten," etc. They are naming all their bargains this fiesta week, after floats. Clever, don't you think? "Float souvenir, silk petticoats in basement 99c—less than a paper dollar bill, or even a silver one!"

Apron Float.

Work aprons for just about what the spool of thread to sew them would cost, if you sewed with silk. No cause for spots or the dish water spill on your afternoon dress, with aprons costing so little.

Why Stay at Home?

With such alluring sales as are in progress in the big stores just now, one fairly loses money every hour she spends at home. Don't you see that when you fail to secure the bargain in what you eventually must buy, you are failing to economize? It does not take a mathematician to figure that. That's just our kind of plain arithmetic—yours and mine.

Palms or Olives?

I have been wondering whether palms or olives entered most into the compositions of those commodities offered just now in many stores at special sales. I rather think the olive has most to do with the ingredients and our palms are the objective—good for all hands, you see.

Bust Belts.

You have heard of "busting your belt," but did you ever hear of belting your bust? This is the latest fad. Nothing very mysterious about it either. Just a leather belt about it—I mean about your bust, or below it. This is the latest belt line, that's all. They have the belts at one of the exclusive stores on Broadway.

Paraphrasing Tipperary.

"It's a short, short way to the bottom of the skirt and a long, long way around it;" This is how a Parisian correspondent expressed the facts as to the constantly abbreviating and ever fuller skirts.

"Bubble, Bubble."

Just bubbling over with fun. That's what the whole family will be if they blow soap bubbles with those new blowers. They are more fun. And the bubbles are as beautiful as something made by fairies in our childhood's dreams. There will float forth a single great bubble, with maybe four or five smaller ones within its sphere and all rainbow-like in hue. A man was demonstrating the airy, fairy invention recently in one of the big Broadway stores and it was amusing to watch people watch. A flotilla of bubbles was convoyed to port upon the shoulder of a man who was walking unconsciously along the center aisle and everyone stopped to watch him. Really childhood is not so very far away, even from the most grown-up of grown-ups.

"Poor Food."

That may not be its legal title, but everyone calls it that so that it has become legal tender for those shows. There is to be a big, annual one during this coming week, at that big store on lower Broadway. All sorts of best foods to be demonstrated there, and of course, examples sold and given away, just to prove what the demonstrators says. If you have good taste you can taste and taste. One learns much by means of such exhibitions, and good housekeepers cannot afford to neglect the opportunity. It's like reading the advertisements in newspapers and magazines—keep's you in touch with the newest and best.

A Regular Snap.

If you will fasten the buttons on your tub frock by means of adhered snaps, you will save much bother and also many buttons. The snaps may be sewed on the cloth covered buttons or glued to the metallic or bone buttons and the sockets may always be sewed to the garment. Snaps are excellent for fastening to shoes or pumps the bows which may then be easily removed or renewed.

A New Non-Scald Tea Kettle.

Whenever someone invents something which people have always wanted, it is sure to be the most obvious and logical thing, and yet "Why did no one ever think of that before." This is true of the new tea kettle which can be filled without having one's hands scalded by steam. You know how it is when you are hurrying to make five o'clock tea and some unexpected guests drop in and you snatch up the kettle to replenish it —biff! goes the steam right against your knuckles. But someone has at last bethought him to place the opening of the kettle at one side. Thus you may remove the cover and pour in water and allow that old kettle to steam to its heart's content, for it will not touch the hand which holds it.

Dame Fashion Decrees.

Odd Zouave boleros in contrasting colors have charming braided decoration.

The sports skirt should be in two or three gores, wide enough to give free action.

White furs with white spats and dark hats and suits are a great fad of the moment.

Most favored materials for the separate waists are crepe de chine, wash silk and voile.

Remnants, big and little, can all be used with good effect in making up this summer's frocks.

The simple tailored suit is in good style for the business woman or for shopping or country wear.

Camisoles and brassieres are two very necessary items in the well-dressed woman's wardrobe.

Rip up last summer's linen dress and use it crosswise for the bottom of the skirt of the new frock.

Evening gowns display the high waist line, while suits show the normal waist line or they are straight in line.

Children's garments are made of pongee; also, the useful frock for women is seen in pongee of different colors.

There are hatbands for the sports hat of knitted elastic, that stretch while slipping and tighten up when in place.

Scalloped and piped edges on skirts and jackets have much to do with the charm of the present fashions.

The sporting costume may be brightened by adding a bright belt to the coat and a band of the same color on the hat.

JACOB'S SEARCH FOR A JOB.

BY EUGENE BROWN.

"'Lo! Ol.'"

"'Lo! Jake. What's mussing up your brain?"

We were in the Morosco workshop in the Burbank Theater and the busy amusement purveyor paused in sorting his mail when I yelped my greeting.

"Well," continued I, "it's just this way: I've decided to go back on the stage."

"Unsay those cruel words," exclaimed the theatrical Napoleon, with a shudder. "If you go back on the stage there'll only be a few of us left."

"I don't mean it that way," I explained. "I mean that I'm going to return to the stage; I'm an actor."

"Ah!" sighed the manager, in relief. "So you're an actor, are you? I'll bet you a couple of bones that you're what the horsemen call a bad actor at that. What do you know about the stage, anyhow?"

"Didn't I drive a jitney bus for a week?" retorted I, with some scorn.

"That ought to help," replied the manager; "but just because you can roll over a few cripples with your blooming old hearse is no sign you can drive the money into the box office."

"Don't fret about that. You put me on the stage in my new play and I'll get the kale all right. We'll have the 'S.R.O.' board out the first day."

"Yes?" exclaimed the magnate, "meaning 'Stepped Right Out,' I suppose, when the one-man audience went after a drink? Say! what do you know about acting, anyhow?"

"Didn't you hear about me supporting Robert Downing?" I exclaimed, with astonishment.

"I know he was too fat to support himself," sneered the manager, "but I didn't suppose a little runt like you could do it. Did you use splints?"

"Never mind. If you had seen us in 'The Gladiator' you would have gone wild."

"I sure would," interrupted the manager. "It makes me wild to think of it now. A fight in the arena between you and Robert would be a good deal like a scrap between a rhinoceros and a rabbit. I don't suppose you've got through running yet, have you?"

"Don't worry about me. I don't suppose you remember when I was with Louis James in 'Virginus?'" continued I, with some heat.

"No; were you? I thought you were with Jesse James in Missouri."

"Is that so? Well, smarty, I was also with Walker Whiteside in "Hamlet."

"Shucks!" exclaimed the manager, what did you play, Yorick's skull or Polonious's whiskers?"

"I played the ghost," answered I, with show of pride.

"Well, I'll bet the ghost didn't walk that night," retorted the magnate.

"We carried 'em away that time," I continued, musingly.

"Sure you did. Carried 'em to the hospital, I suppose."

"Don't be frivolous. I might also tell you of the night I was with Robert Mantell in 'Julius Caesar,' I continued. "I played Casca in the first act."

"Cascaret, you mean," interrupted the manager. "You worked while the audience slept."

"In the last act," I resumed, "I played the Roman army, and I did it so realistically that Cassius ran out of the stage door and we had to pull him out of a saloon a block and a half away from the theater."

"Seems to me," said the manager, reminiscently, "that I remember about your playing the hose in 'The Fireman's Child.'"

"No, I didn't," retorted I. "Neither did I play the deuce in 'A Pack of Cards.' But you remember Brady's all-star 'Uncle Tom,' don't you?"

"Sure thing," answered the magnate.

"Well, I was the first bloodhound."

"The one with the short pants?" inquired the manager.

"No," said I. "The one with the heavy coat. I was the one who cracked the ice in the Ohio River and then used it in highballs."

"Is that so?" exclaimed the manager. "And on the strength of your past performances you want me to give you a job on the stage?"

"I expect you," said I, with firmness, "to star me in a play I have written myself. I am here for rehearsal now."

"Whew!" whistled the manager. "Put that over again and give it to me in installments. Do you say that you have written a play?"

"I might assert," said I proudly, "that I have written 'the' play, but is there anything odd about my writing a play? Doesn't everybody do it?"

"Well, pretty near everybody," admitted the manager. "But some of 'em are not as sure of it as you seem to be."

"Yes, I have written a play," continued I. "And you can lay off Forrest Stanley, Donald Bowles and the rest of the bunch for a while. You won't need them. I take the places of four or five of them. I double up on a system of my own. I have a scheme of using concave mirrors and the audience has the unusual spectacle of seeing me shake hands with myself when I come on. I am on the stage most of the time."

"About all I have to do, then," suggested the manager," is to mail you a salary check Saturday afternoons?"

"That is practically all."

"Fine!" exclaimed the magnate. "And what kind of a play has the boy wonder got in his noodle for this historic presentation?"

"The play," began I, impressively, "is called 'Vengeance is Mine, or Virtue is its Own Reward.'"

"Great!" interrupted the manager with enthusiasm. "That sounds like a good old yellow-back thriller. Have you got some of the plot concealed about your person or have you arranged it so that you can dispense with a plot?"

"Plot?" snorted I. "It's got more plot than a Corsican vendetta. It fairly reeks with it. When we get going we'll have the audience sobbing all over the place. We have to hire a couple of extra scrub women after every performance."

"If it's as bad as all that you might give me a line on it. How does she open up?"

"If the orchestra will give me a few minor chords I'll explain," said I, in beginning. "It's just this way: The play opens on a bitter Fourth of July. The snow is falling heavily and a blizzard howls without."

"Without what?" interrupted the manager.

"Without ceasing. It is a wild night my lads, and God pity those who are abroad on land or sea."

"That's the stuff," exclaimed the manager. "Sic 'em Tige!"

"While the storm is at its height," resumed I, "Simon Skaggs, the millionaire pauper, staggers from his palatial shack. Defying the blast he climbs daringly up the towering spinach tree, at his door. From its top he must pluck some coal for his starving child!"

"Hold on," exclaimed the manager, as he furtively wiped a tear from his eye. "Do you mean that Simon must go clear to the top to gather a mere handful of coal?"

"Aye, aye, sir!"

"Then it is not a spinach tree—it must be a chestnut tree, and it is chestnut coal he plucks for his famished offspring."

"All right;" assented I, "We'll make it a chestnut. As Simon reaches the top and is about to grasp the coveted provender Hiram Eshelman, his enemy and rival, passes. Hiram is a carpenter and cabinet maker by trade and is carrying his tools with him. Glancing upward through the storm he notes the hated one's perilous position. Taking two or three fat gloats to himself he at once takes out his venomous saw and saws down the tree."

"You saw him saw it?" interrupted the manager.

"Plane," answered I, jocularly—for I could still joc.

"Go on," said the manager.

"Well, the tree crashes to the earth and Simon is buried unconscious in the ruin. With the precious coal in his grasp he never knew what happened. Hours pass. The child cries, helpless, from within. Finally Mazie, the merry manicure maid, passes that way in her automobile. She is on her journey home from the prize fight where she won $1300 on the champion. The tree encumbers the path of her machine and she alights to pull it out of the way. As she does so she reveals the senseless form of the man she loves. 'My Gawd! it's Simon,' she exclaims, passionately. 'Some fiend has done this.' She bears him tenderly to the hospital. 'Will he live?' she cries desperately. The nurse smiles and pointing to the lump of coal still grasped in the hand of the unconscious man whispers: 'Sure Mike. You couldn't kill a man with a grip like that, if you ran him down with a steam roller.'"

"So that's your plot?" interrupted the manager.

"Part of it," answered I, modestly.

"And what are you supposed to play?"

"I take the role of Simon," said I, "and I think we better get Maude Adams for Mazie."

"I can do better than that," said the manager. "We'll get Sarah Bernhardt for Mazie. You know she has just had her leg amputated. We'll make it appear that Hiram sawed off her leg while she was climbing the tree to rescue her lover."

"All right," asserted I, "and when do we begin rehearsals?"

"In the spring of 1937," said the manager, calmly.

"Why Sarah will be dead by that time," exclaimed I, peevishly.

"And so I hope, will I be also, before getting around to that bum play of yours," retorted the manager.

"Then I don't get Stanley's job?" persisted I.

"You do not."

"Well, I'll be d———d."

"I shouldn't be a bit surprised," grunted the manager, turning again to his mail.

And yet there are people who consider Morosco a managerial genius.

FLANEUR'S PERSONALITIES.

That the personality of Countess Zanardi Landi, though officially ignored by royalty, is an important barrier against aged Emperor Franz Josef's peace of mind is shown by the ban upon her writings. She has found it impossible to secure publication of her biography, "The Secrets of an Empress," either in Austria, France or Italy, and knows it would be hopeless to try in Germany. Therefore her story, involving her imperial mother's secret, is first told in the English language.

It was a secluded castle on the rocky shore of Normandy that the author, who claims to be the fourth child of Franz Josef, was born in 1882. It was given out semi-officially at the time that Empress Elizabeth of Austria had met with an accident while riding. The Emperor went to see her once secretly, his presence being carefully concealed. What passed between the imperial pair at that time will never be revealed. The world knows anyway that there was a lack of understanding between the imperial couple.

The Countess Landi, however, does not think so, for she controverts in some important particulars the familiar account of the romantic courtship of Elizabeth, second daughter of the Duke Maximilian of Bavaria. She admits that Franz Josef went to Posenhofen in 1853 to see his cousin, Helene, urged by his mother, who had concocted a scheme for the marriage. As the Countess was told by her mother in later years, the Archduchess Sophia was easily reconciled to her son's choice of Elizabeth, instead of Helene, thinking that the youth of the former would make her easier to manage than her more determined sister.

Elizabeth was only fifteen and a half years of age, and was staggered with her new responsibilities. Up to that time she had worn short dresses and run about with the boys, just like one of themselves, and now, all of a sudden, she had to be a great lady. The deficiencies of her education were many, and while her splendor was a source of great pleasure, this was never sufficient to counteract her constant anxiety. Soon Archduchess Sophia, her mother-in-law, began to treat her badly, and set herself to alienate her son's heart from her. As a result, the Emperor laid down a rule that Elizabeth, in future, must always get her husband's permission previous to going anywhere but to certain prescribed places.

The Countess admits that her mother did not play her role. She was far too cheerful and natural for the ultra-ceremonious, straight-laced court of Hofburg. As full of fun as she could be, a pose of seriousness was forced upon her by the necessity of avoiding the appearance of childishness. No wonder that she grew tired of the monotony of her life. How far this weariness may have led her to her path of "diversion" we may get an inkling from the relationship between the young and fun-loving Empress and one of her teachers, a Greek, by the name of Christomaneos. This man wrote a book, in which he made it plain that he was in love with Empress Elizabeth, and that she reciprocated his passion. The daughter defends her mother against this charge. He was intelligent and interesting and she undoubtedly liked him for this. "How could she be attracted by one who was almost a hunchback?" she argues. Hardly a convincing line of argument, as proverbially "love is blind." And again, "She might have taken an interest in a man, but it would not be as a man but as a human character."

The weakness of the defense, the effort at whitewashing her mother's name are plainly apparent. The Countess also revives the tragic career of the weak, unfortunate King Ludwig II of Bavaria, her near relative, in this partial biography of the Empress Elizabeth. She gives an account of the mad King's death as she had it from her mother's lips. The story differs materially from the official statement, which became part of European history some thirty years ago. The Empress had been startled by her observing young daughter's inquiry, "Why were you so fond of Ludwig, mother?" And the mother replied, "He was not mad. They might as well call Louis XIV mad or any other man with great ideas. The person who was most to blame was Bismarck. But, of course, no one must say so."

The story told years after the death of the King seems hardly of a character to overthrow the fair presumption that Ludwig had been half-mad, to say the least. He most assuredly was a monomaniac on Wagnerian music to the extent of having the maestro's operas, especially "Lohengrin," performed in the upper salons of his Munich castle with himself as the sole audience. That such notions were extravagant is clear when it is recalled that the performance of "Lohengrin" alone required an artificial lake for the knight to sing his famous "Swan Song." Besides the frescoes in the many rooms of that castle which King Ludwig had ordered the great Kaulbach to paint depicting leading scenes from the Wagnerian operas also swallowed up fortunes. That unfortunate ruler had inherited his mental deficiency. It is in the family. His brother and successor, King Otto, is insane, and so were several of his Wittelsbach ancestors.

The daughter, loyal despite the bar sinister, supports her imperial mother also in her statement concerning the tragedy of Mayerling. "Rudy never committed suicide; Rudy was murdered." With these words the Empress received the announcement of the Crown Prince Rudolf's death after one of his periodical orgies at his hill-crested hunting lodge. The daughter accepts this as a solution to what she calls "the riddle of Mayerling." She admits that the insubordinate Crown Prince died with a revolver in his hand, defying those who came to take him before his imperial and greatly-enraged father. And with him they found the youthful Marie Vetsera, with whom he had a liaison, though married to the Princess Stephanie, daughter of King Leopold II of the Belgians.

When she who is now Countess Zanardi Landi was 16 years of age her mother, the Empress Elizabeth, was stricken down by the hand of an assassin at Geneva, and she was left with hardly a relative to whom she could turn. The Countess was married twice. With two children who show the unmistakable Hapsburg contour of face, she sought America for self-support eight years ago, but her first husband proved shiftless. Soon the pair separated by mutual consent. The mother suffered many hardships, but kept the family alive by sewing and teaching. Later she married Count Zanardi Landi and returned to Austria.

On this visit she appealed to ex-Queen Maria Sophia of Naples to aid her in convincing the Austrian people that the Empress Elizabeth's daughter was not dead, as had been given out by the court chamberlain, and she was that daughter. The Queen was convinced after a time, but soon lost her interest and at last declined to receive Countess Zanardi Landi, no doubt after receiving a hint from the Hofburg. The author of this book has one hope left—namely, that her story may reveal to the world all the injustice and cruelty that have been visited upon her.

SLEEP AND MEN'S HABITS.

A Question Whether Mr. Edison's Theory is not Right and Other Things than Work Make Us Tired.

[St. Louis Post-Dispatch:] Mr. Edison says sleep is a bad habit, and that we shall some day get over it. Like drinking and smoking, it is to be among those things which we shall try in time to give up on the first of the year. He says people called him crazy when he said that electricity would supplant all other motive power in transportation, and one therefore hesitates to say that he is crazy about anything. However, we will hazard a guess that if he is off his box anywhere, it is with respect to the pleasant custom of indulging ourselves in a good, sound snooze. How else we are to refresh ourselves from the day's work we cannot imagine. The trouble with this objection, as it applies to Mr. Edison, is that he doesn't think we are wearied by the day's work. He and some of his associates worked at something for a given period of time twenty-one hours a day, and they all gained weight! He leads us to infer that it is what we do when we are not working that wearies us. Thinking over it briefly, we believe there is something in that. Probably half the things we do in our leisure time is very hard work. The celebrated tired business man is only tired when his wife wants him to go out somewhere after dinner. It is the opera and the fox trot that wear him out. Still, think of giving up sleep! If it is a habit, it is a nice one. We have got some glimpses of what Mr. Edison means when we have tried to sleep in a chair car, but given a feather bed and a soft pillow, we don't get him at all. Last night, for instance. Wasn't the habit delicious last night?

Wrinkles Big and Wrinkles Little Go Quickly—Some Startling Beauty Secrets

Gems of Secret Information on Beauty, by Valeska Suratt, Whose Fame as America's Self-Made Beauty-Queen, Is World-Wide.

By MISS VALESKA SURATT

NOT so much the big wrinkles, but the little ones, are what rob the face of its youthful appearance. No matter how faithfully and vigorously you may engage in massaging the face, there will be no perceptible result unless the proper article is used. Nearly all creams sold for this purpose in the stores have the same base and ingredients. This is why perhaps you have experienced but little improvement with one cream over another. Every woman should as well know now as later that the cost of prepared creams is too high to allow their use being liberal and unstinted, as it should be to produce results. Furthermore, their ingredients are usually lacking in effect, because these ingredients must be cheap, otherwise there is no profit in their sale. If you will make up your mind to make up your own cream, which you can do in a few moments as follows, you will have a remarkable wrinkle eradicator, one that works quickly and surely, and it will cost you far less than any prepared cream you can buy. Furthermore, you will get the result desired. Dissolve two tablespoonfuls of glycerine and two ounces of eptol in half a pint of water. This cream used every day will produce a startling change in a short time, making the face plump and youthful to a marked degree.

MELICENT R.—Yes, you can stop falling of hair very quickly. Here is a formula which produces marked changes in the hair roots and scalp tissues. The result is that dandruff is absolutely stopped, the hair roots regain their youthful vigor, hair grows quickly and luxuriantly, often several inches a month, and it takes on a very silky and healthy gloss. There is nothing so satisfactory as this splendid formula. Mix one ounce of beta-quinol in water and alcohol, half a pint each, or use a full pint of bay rum instead. This makes a very economical hair treatment, is mixed in a few moments, and cannot be surpassed. Use liberally. Any drug store can supply you with the beta-quinol.

MISS G. M. B.—Use the following and see how quickly and beautifully your complexion will change to one of exquisite beauty. It is difficult to explain the marked change which this cream produces. All freckles, muddiness and blemishes promptly disappear. Nothing can surpass it for this. Get at any drug store one ounce of sintone and mix with one tablespoonful of glycerine in a pint of hot water. This makes many times more cream than you would have to pay for by buying prepared creams which are much weaker in results.

SORROWFUL.—The bust can very often be developed. The following mixture is the best thing known for this, and it is safe, though of course no one can ever be sure of success in this regard. Mix two ounces of ruetone, obtainable at any drug store, with half a cup of sugar and dissolve in a pint of cold water. Take two teaspoonfuls after meals and at bedtime.

EVA G. R.—You have probably never heard of the remarkable properties of eggol as a head-wash and dandruff remover. This dissolves away all fatty accumulations and dandruff, which nothing else, not even soap and hard scrubbing, can do. A teaspoonful of eggol in half a cup of hot water makes the most exquisite shampoo you can ever get. It cleans out all the pores wonderfully, and lets the hair "breathe," thus assisting very materially in making the hair healthy and vigorous. I would never use soap on hair. Eggol, besides, leaves the hair easy to do up. It is very economical, as for a moderate price you can obtain enough eggol for over a dozen of these extraordinary head-washes.

ORRINEL.—I regret very much you were unable to obtain the "Valeska Suratt Face Powder." If you will write, addressing "Secretary to Valeska Suratt, Thompson Bldg., Chicago," enclosing fifty cents, and saying whether you want white or flesh tint, my secretary will see that you get it at once.

• • •

MRS. T. L. M.—Simple sulfo solution is the only thing that will remove superfluous hair successfully. This is because it is the only thing which dissolves the hair instead of burning it off, as other depilatories do. As a result, it never leaves a mark or red spot, or injures the skin, but leaves it clear, soft and smooth. Use it on any part of the body, no matter how delicate the skin. It never fails and works in a few moments. The simple sulfo solution can be secured at any drug store, or if not there get the sulfo powder, which has the same result, and which you simply wet with a little water before applying.

MISS X. O.—It is remarkable, but true, that you can get rid of blackheads in a few minutes. Sprinkle some neroxin on a sponge which you have wet with hot water, and rub this on the blackheads. In a few minutes they will be all gone. This holds true for even the tiniest blackheads which it is impossible to pinch out. Never pinch out blackheads.

MISS P. O. G.—The best face powder is one whose use is practically indetectible and that adheres to the skin firmly. Nearly all face powders fail in this. They are too chalky. I had my own formula made up, and it is now obtainable at drug stores as "Valeska Suratt Face Powder." It is extraordinary in fineness, is free from chalkiness, and I can say is superior to the best you ever knew.

• • •

MRS. T. N. P.—The liquids and powders sold for excessive perspiration are usually but momentary in effect. Applying hydrolized talc to the arm-pits keeps these fresh and dry all the time, and you will not have your arm-pits wet and your dress-shields curl up like ropes. It will save the damage to your garments through fading and rotting of the fabric. Hydrolized talc can be secured at any drug store. It destroys all odors at once. It is also the best thing known for perspiring feet.—[Advertisement.

Something About Your Teeth

Do you know the names of the different teeth?

Or why your teeth are of different sizes and different shapes?

Or why you find the same kind of teeth in the same place in healthy mouths?

There must be a reason for the arrangement of these wonderful little instruments which nature gives us.

Let us look at the picture.

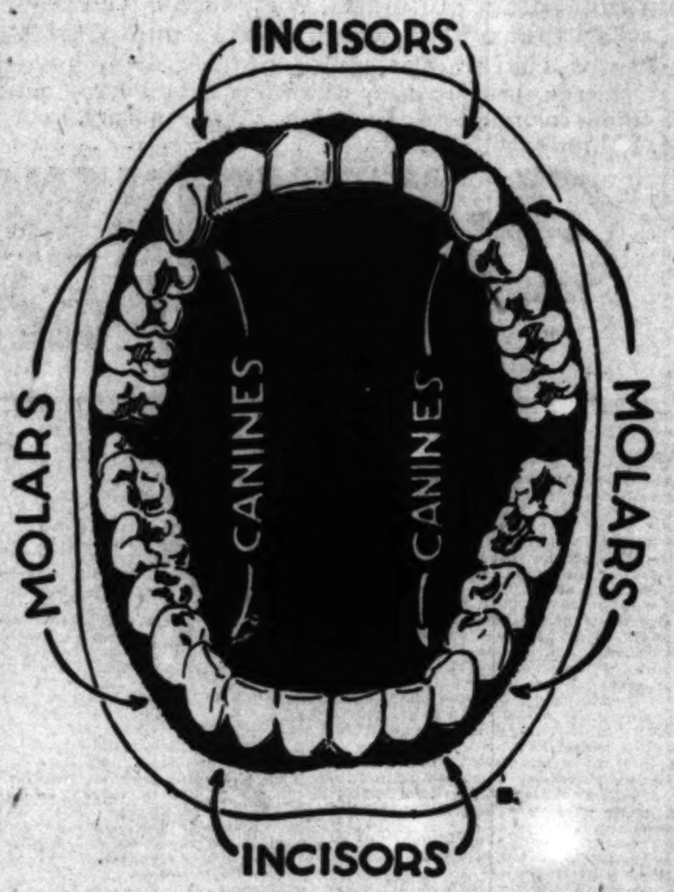
The drawing represents a man's mouth wide open. Here we see three kinds of teeth—

—Incisors,
—Canines,
—Molars.

Notice the four teeth in the front of each jaw—eight in all. The ones that show best when you smile—these are the incisors, or cutting teeth.

Each one has an edge like a dull chisel, yet sharp enough to bite through any foodstuff when we bring them tight together.

We use them to bite into an apple, or bite off a piece of cheese or a slice of bread.



There are some kinds of food, however, which are tough, like meat, and which must be torn asunder, as well as cut. For this we use the canines, or tearing teeth. There are two on top and two below, placed on each side of the incisors.

Foods like nuts, or rice or wheat grains, must not only be cut but must be crushed and ground finely. Have you ever seen a mill where wheat or corn is ground into flour between heavy stones which work with a circular motion? The molars are the grindstones of the mouth.

Replacing these valuable instruments of mastication without plates or ordinary bridge work is our specialty.

By this method we build a full set of solid teeth that act and look like nature's own, provided you have two or more roots in either jaw.

We also treat Pyorrhea. Beware of bleeding or receding gums, sore or loose teeth, as these are symptoms of Pyorrhea.

By our new analgesic method we can extract, crown, fill or even remove a live nerve without pain.

A notable part is played by California and the Far West in kindling the imagination of many artists whose works hang in the galleries of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition. Yosemite, the Grand Canyon, the desert, the mountains, the blue waters at Monterey, the missions—all alike have inspired them.

In this year of westward travel, when a good part of the population of the United States will visit, for the first time, the land where "'tis always afternoon," the land of great dreams and hopes and greater endeavor, and accomplishment, these ideal geographical glimpses in the Palace of Fine Arts at San Francisco will prove a delight. Nor is the work necessarily that of local artists, for the exposition is extremely catholic in its tastes. The great painters of the modern time have been drawn to the West and the Southwest for inspiration, and have found it; and never was such a collection of their combined work in those regions.

These paintings are not in any way grouped. They are to be found scattered among the hundred-odd rooms of the immense palace, for pictures have been hung in relation to tendencies, schools and methods, rather than according to any notion of geography. So they must be sought—and they will be come upon most unexpectedly.

For the most part, however, they hang in the galleries of the north wing, which is the particularly modern wing of the building; and of course the art that has found subject matter in the West is ultra-modern art. Thomas Hill's is the only style that may be deemed otherwise.

There is at the present time only one painting by Thomas Hill, lover and recorder of the Yosemite and Mariposa fastnesses, and this little picture has not yet been dignified with even a number or a place in the catalogue. Yet it ornaments its wall—a glimpse of one of the loveliest valleys in the world, from a viewpoint in the Big Oak Flat road region, near the northern "inspiration point." Thomas Hill has recorded the Yosemite Valley from this point, with a bit of El Capitan's massive prow and the summit of Clouds' Rest, without seeking to express the magnificent and dizzy depths of the valley as he has so frequently done.

The scenery about Monterey and Carmel Bay has inspired a number of the painters represented at the exposition. Monterey is the cradle of California's wonderful romance—her old-time capital and the spot where annexation occurred. A bit of this history is brought to mind by Carlton Chapman's painting, "The American Fleet Hoisting the Flag at Monterey, July 7, 1846." Admiral Sloat's four ships-of-the-line, and the small boats putting back after the Stars and Stripes had been hoisted to the white adobe structure whence Spain and Mexico had ruled, ride on that bluest of blue bays. It is a most interesting painting.

In sharp contrast is another, "Old Customhouse at Monterey," by M. Evelyn McCormick, in a near-by room of the Palace of Fine Arts. This is a picture of today. The sleepy old customhouse has now become merely a relic of the past. It dozes in the California sunshine beside a highly-modern and shiny blue railroad track, and across the track are some white board shacks that are by no means artistic—because we don't build for beauty any more. A tree as ancient as the adobe building keeps silent vigil beside it. All has been observed in the garish sunlight of high noon.

Over the hills from Monterey lies the lovely Bay of Carmel, set with missions and pines, her sands and cliffs washed by tides as blue as indigo. The charms of Carmel have been recorded in song and story as well as in paint. Among her painters whose works hang in the exposition is William Ritschel. His "Blue Depths of Carmel" depicts the arched rock through which the tides go reeling and beyond it is the white-capped surf. This picture emphasizes the remarkable indigo hue of Carmel's water. It has a glassy surface, too, that seems to recall that peculiarly placid and tranquil air which Carmel Bay wears even in her angriest moods—if such a conception is possible. Another of Ritschel's paintings is "In the Shadow of Monterey Cliffs," with a rocky embankment on the right and the same blue waters on the left. "The Tide Pool at Carmel," painted from an overhanging rock, and several others—five in all—are in the collection from this painter's brush.

The interior of Carmel Mission has been delightfully rendered by E. Charlton Fortune. The painting is small, but the altar, the few pews, the ornaments and the blue ceiling over the grapevine, shown in the exhibition. Monterey Bay also hangs on these walls. Miss Fortune was in Los Angeles a few months ago, when she painted the famous San Gabriel mission grape vine, shown in the exhibition.

Many other painters have fallen in love with the Monterey-Carmel region, and these include Arthur F. Mathews, Eugen Neuhaus and Francis McComas.

The high Sierras have captured the imagination of a multitude of artists. Yet in the exposition there are fewer paintings of the rugged California grandeur than one would expect. John H. Twachtman has painted one of the Yosemite waterfalls. For other painters the sunsets in the great mountains have offered fertile subjects. Maurice Del Mue has rendered "Late Afternoon in the Sierras," which catches the fading sunset on the higher peaks while the foreground is lost in shadow. Patches of snow in the hollows further flash the glint of dying day.

The region around San Francisco and the Golden Gate has inspired Eugen Neuhaus. "A Corner of Lake Merced," "Monterey Dunes," Berkeley and the foothills, have been recorded by him delightfully. Neuhaus, who is a member of the faculty of the University of California, is a prominent art critic as well an artist.

The painted cliffs of the Grand Canyon—a subject which stands as a constant challenge to artists, a challenge never yet successfully accepted—have been recorded by some of the best of the exposition's painters. Two canvases in particular have sought to catch some of the wonderful color and startlingly luminous qualities of the great chasm. They are by Arthur

The scenery about Monterey and Carmel Bay has inspired a number of the painters represented at the exposition. Monterey is the cradle of California's wonderful romance—her adobe capital and the spot where annexation occurred. A bit of this history is brought to mind by Carlton Chapman's painting, "The American Fleet Raising the Flag at Monterey, July 7, 1846." Admiral Sloat's four ships-of-the-line, and the small boats putting back after the Stars and Stripes had been hoisted to the white adobe custom house whence Spain and Mexico had their ride on that bluest of blue bays, form a most interesting painting.

In sharp contrast is another, "Old Customhouse at Monterey," by M. Evelyn McCormick, in a near-by room of the Palace of Fine Arts. This is a picture of today. The sleepy old customhouse has now become merely a relic of the past. It dozes in the California sunshine beside a highly-modern and shiny blue railroad track, and across the track are some white board shacks that are by no means artistic—because we don't build for beauty any more. A tree as ancient as the adobe building keeps silent vigil beside it. All has been observed in the garish sunlight of high noon.

Over the hills from Monterey lies the lovely Bay of Carmel, set with missions and pines, her sands and cliffs washed by tides as blue as indigo. The charms of Carmel have been recorded in song and story as well as in paint. Among her painters whose works hang in the exposition is William Ritschel. His "Blue Depths of Carmel" depicts the arched rock through which the tides go reeling, and beyond it is the white-capped surf. This picture emphasizes the remarkable indigo hue of Carmel's water. It has a glassy surface, too, that seems to recall that peculiarly placid and tranquil air which Carmel Bay wears even in her angriest moods—if such a conception is possible. Another of Ritschel's paintings is "In the Shadow of Monterey Cliffs," with a rocky embankment on the right and the same blue waters on the left. "The Tide Pool at Carmel," painted from an overhanging rock, and several others—five in all—are in the collection from this painter's brush.

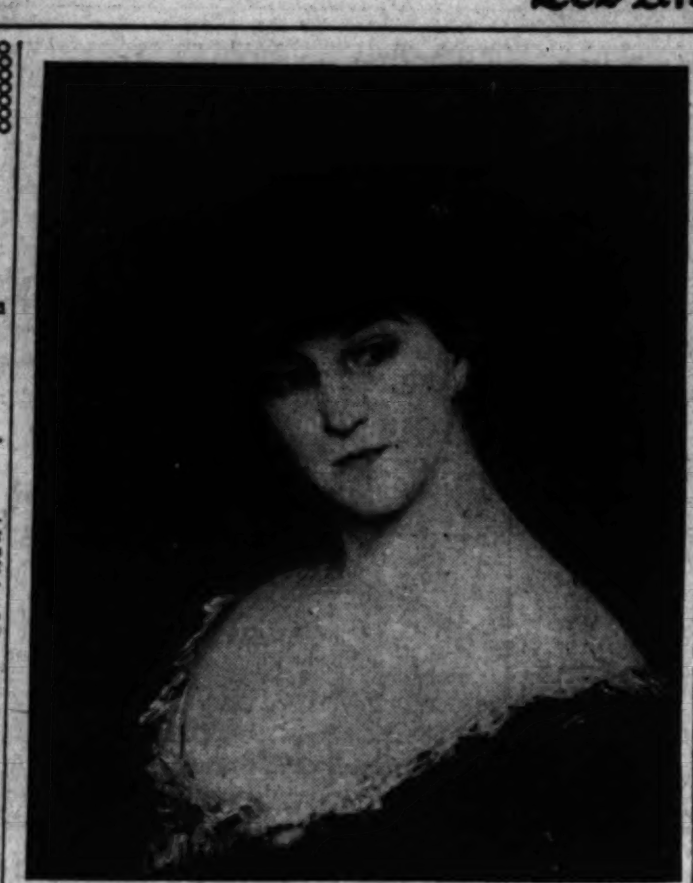
The interior of Carmel Mission has been delightfully rendered by E. Charlton Fortune. The painting is small, but the altar, the few pews, the ornaments and the blue ceiling over the grapevine, shown in the exhibition. Monterey Bay also hangs on these walls. Miss Fortune was in Los Angeles a few months ago, when she painted the famous San Gabriel mission grape vine, shown in the exhibit here.

Many other painters have fallen in love with the Monterey-Carmel region, and these include Arthur F. Mathews, Eugen Neuhaus and Francis McComas.

The high Sierras have captured the imagination of a multitude of artists, but in the exposition there are fewer paintings of the rugged California grandeur than one would expect. John H. Twachtman has painted one of the Yosemite waterfalls. For other painters the sunsets in the great mountains have offered fertile subjects. Maurice Del Mue has rendered "Late Afternoon in the Sierras," which catches the fading sunset on the higher peaks while the foreground is lost in shadow. Patches of snow in the hollows further flash the glint of dying day.

The region around San Francisco and the Golden Gate has inspired Eugen Neuhaus. "A Corner of Lake Merced," "Monterey Dunes," Berkeley and the foothills, have been recorded by him delightfully. Neuhaus, who is a member of the faculty of the University of California, is a prominent art critic as well as an artist.

The painted cliffs of the Grand Canyon—a subject which stands as a constant challenge to artists, a challenge not yet successfully accepted—have been recorded by some of the best of the exposition's painters. Two canvases in particular have sought to catch some of the wonderful color and strangely luminous qualities of the great chasm. They are by Arthur W. Dow. One is "The Enchanted Mesa"—a desert plain with a flat-topped rock rising from it, and kindled at the summit as if a pyre—and "The Great Shadow," which is painted looking across a canyon of the abyss, and noting the sunset on the farther peaks.



Portrait of Mrs. George Burkhardt, by Joseph Greenbaum.

One of the most fascinating of Arizona landscape collections is that exhibited by Francis McComas, "The Navajo Gate" being a striking example. The great red rock, its cleft admitting some of the sky, looms like a pair of Gatun gates. The altitude and awesomeness of the spot is emphasized by two pigmy figures, Indians, moving below the immense rock. These water colors of the painted desert, the Grand Canyon and the pueblo region are very attractive, and occupy the entire wall of one room.

Mathias Sandor shows us Wolpi by night. Ladders reach toward the terraced houses, a few figures move along the dusky road, and overhead are the stars. Fernand Lungren has painted the Grand Canyon in a novel fashion—copper-colored cliffs, the muddy river below, and an Indian crouching in awe and wonder and peering over the edge into the mighty chasm. The painting does not attempt to reveal the tremendous depths of the canyon. E. H. Potthast and De Witt Parshall are others who have painted this subject.

The wilderness of Oregon has moved the brush of Maynard Dixon alike with Navajo life and all the color of the Southwest. He has a painting, "The Oregon Trail," with a pack-train in the foreground just vanishing over a rise, while beyond looms the gray mass of a range of mountains. Dixon loves the desert and paints it superbly.

Southern California's manifold beauties are shown in fine works from many Los Angeles painters—William Wendt, Benjamin Brown, Hanson Puthuff, the Wachtels, among others.

Portraits by Greenbaum.

Joseph Greenbaum has been busy with portraits, through the past few months, at his new studio at No. 625 South Figueroa street.

Greenbaum is a good deal of an experimentalist in paint, and therefore his method of work has changed much from his method of five years ago. He has discarded the dark brown hues so dear to the heart of his alma mater—Munich—substituting fresh and pure broken color. The result is greater vitality, more air and light.

This happy change is especially noticeable in his figures and portraits, though it is also very apparent in his landscapes. Following the perfectly authentic tradition that artists like to paint one another, Greenbaum has just finished a life-size and almost full-length portrait of his friend John Donovan, the marine painter. The background, somewhat summarized, is the sweeping curve of one of Catalina's shores. There is no particular outdoor feeling, but there is fine characterization, and the brush has been handled with admirable discretion.

Another good portrait is that of Mrs. George Burkhardt, in which there is found genuine flesh and blood and excellent modeling. This portrait, too, seems to be absolutely true to character. Still another is that of Walter H. Bunce, and in this the brushwork in face and hands is perhaps closer to convention than in the others.

A notable portrait sketch is that of the late Col. George H. Smith, father to Mrs. Hancock Banning. Seen in profile, the noble face was caught by Greenbaum when the old soldier didn't know it, and when the two were talking and arguing at the University Club.

From Japan to California.

One of the interesting exhibitions of the coming two weeks is that of Esther Crawford, which opens tomorrow at the Royar gallery, No. 744 South Hill street, with about thirty oils and a dozen wood blocks in color. The subjects are from Japan and from California and the desert.

Five years ago Miss Crawford, who is one of the instructors in art at the Normal School, spent twelve months in Japan making studies of many interesting and picturesque places. Some of these will be shown. She has just come back from the desert, where she passed a happy and busy month doing some of her best work. These pictures will also be shown. Then there will be characteristic landscapes painted in the immediate vicinity of Los Angeles, studies of mountains, plains and wooded valleys.

Miss Crawford has made many beautiful and successful experiments in the making and printing of wood blocks, a few of which will be exhibited. She has fine feeling for decoration and design, and her color is quiet and attractive.

A further report of this exhibition will come next week in Art and Artists.

Landscapes by John O'Shea.

Landscapes by John O'Shea are now being exhibited in the auditorium of the Friday Morning Club, where they will remain to the end of May.

John O'Shea is a New York painter who came to Southern California two years ago. He has made a special study of our landscape, with which he seems to be temperamentally in perfect attune. He feels and sees the epic grandeur of Southern California, the pure, clean color of her vast spaces as they appear from the heights.

O'Shea's color is as pure as that of nature itself, and though brilliant and vital, is also harmonious. He applies his paint with a direct simplicity, aiming always for big effects, for masses and planes. He works in a thoroughly original way, taking no thought for anything but the object of his work—which is to interpret nature as truthfully as he can.

The present exhibition, which is the second John O'Shea has held in Los Angeles, will undoubtedly excite a great deal of interest, even more than did the first, for the artist has grown much in strength and insight during the past year of hard work. The Friday Morning Club is open to the public from 10 to 4 every day except Sunday, and, of course, except Friday morning, when the members hold their weekly meeting. The exhibition will receive extended notice next Sunday.

Art Notes.

The work of the Print Makers, which was reviewed in Art and Artists in March, when it was exhibited in Trinity Building, has been shown through most of April in the Little Gallery of the exposition in San Diego. During the past week it was shown at Pomona College, where Miss Hannah Thompson gave a talk on the work before the Rembrandt Art Club. Beginning yesterday, it will be exhibited for two weeks in the Elizabeth Battey gallery, Pasadena, after which it will be sent to Santa Barbara.

Rhoda Holmes Nicholls and Alice I. Howells will open a summer school of painting at La Jolla this year. Mrs. Nicholls, whose studio is in New York and who is one of the best-known water-color painters in the country, will criticise the classes in aquarelle. Miss Howells, resident of Santa Monica, but a pupil of the eastern art schools, will take charge of the classes working in oil.

An exhibition of interest and importance will open at the Kanst gallery on Friday, and will continue for several weeks. It will comprise a dozen or more pictures from the brush of Louis Kronberg, a Boston painter of fame. Kronberg has made a special study of ballet girls, and he paints them with great sympathy. Several pictures of ballet dancers will be shown. Pictures by this artist are in the permanent galleries of the Metropolitan Museum and the Boston Museum.

CONDUCTED BY GORDON RAY YOUNG.

THE PRESS

BOOKS OF FICTION.

W. B. MAXWELL.

[illegible] MESSENGER. By W. B. Maxwell. [illegible] Merrill Company, Indianapolis.

"T[illegible] RAGGED MESSENGER" comes in the wake of a memorable precursor—"The Devil's Garden"—[illegible] it is an earlier production and shows [illegible] latter novel is, among contemporaries, overshadowing in theme and style. "The Ragged Messenger," being a variation [illegible] the "In His Steps" plot, is more pretentious of theme, but more angular in style and construction, less real, less convincing [illegible] the former book with which Mr. Maxwell won deserved recognition in this country.

[illegible], a street preacher of London, ostracized from every pulpit, rather eccentric but wholly sincere, unexpectedly becomes heir to the greatest fortune in England at the same time he marries a young woman whom he believes is in sympathy with his work.

With ironical intent and success, the author contrasts the reception titled folk give the "ragged messenger of the Lord" before and after his inheritance. But Morton refuses to be lionized; he goes as before among the uncouth sinners, but they beg [illegible] instead of listening complaisantly to a tirade of exhortation.

Nothing of the futility of relieving [illegible] by even the expenditure of the greatest fortune in the world is revealed by the [illegible] with which Morton uses up his [illegible] and the comparatively insignificant but wholly worthy, results obtained.

[illegible] where he takes, despite protestations of belief in her innocence, rather [illegible] methods of testing his wife [illegible] she is unworthy justifies him not at all; he appears throughout as an admirable, human, though decidedly eccentric, character.

With no appearance of having a plot, the author suddenly discloses one near the end [illegible] has been built from almost the opening chapter; a plot that comes to a startling climax and induces the opinion that, for a single moment at least, the "Mad Messiah" is irresponsible.

FYODOR DOSTOEVSKY.

THE HOUSE OF THE DEAD. By Fyodor Dostoevsky. Translated by Constance Garnett. The Macmillan Company, New York.

C[illegible] REFLECTION discloses why Fyodor Dostoevsky is peculiarly eminent in tragic literature. Perhaps no [illegible] anywhere approaching his genius as a writer was ever subjected to the mental and physical agonies endured by himself; [illegible] to a constitutional morbidity, [illegible] or perhaps wholly induced by [illegible], he was cast into prison for a long [illegible] ruffians of every description, and [illegible] psychological understanding explored [illegible] recess and alleyway of the [illegible] mind.

"[illegible] House of the Dead," thinly veiled as the posthumous manuscript of one [illegible] Petrovich, tells the story of Dostoevsky's life as a convict. But it tells more: [illegible] perception into the mental life [illegible] and murderers—his understanding [illegible] sympathy, though there are [illegible] mildy commiserating words for [illegible] and no sentimentality whatever [illegible] class, badly abused as it was, [illegible] by a lunatic of a major. Even this [illegible] understood by Dostoevsky, and when [illegible] cast from the service, the author [illegible] a brief descriptive sentence or two that arouses compassion for the martinet [illegible] deserved punishment.

No [illegible] ever more dispassionately, no, [illegible] interestingly, reported his observations than Dostoevsky. Even when the powerful drunken and brutal Gazin menaces him the author is without other than the student's emotion. And Orlov, the indomitable, eager to have his punishment [illegible] the lash that the most robust cringed [illegible] or met in a drunken stupor, is understood and described so accurately his very abnormality seems natural.

"The House of the Dead"—all of Dostoevsky's novels for that matter—has the peculiar strength, or genius if you like, which projects its pictures so forcefully that [illegible] recalls them more as memories of personal experiences than recollections of something read. To read this book as one should, carefully, meditatively, is to live in [illegible] prison ward, sleep on the three-plank [illegible], bathe in the slime-floored bathhouse, [illegible] about in irons, hear and understand [illegible] uncouth banterings of sullen men, watch [illegible] gambling, drinking, quarreling, rejoice [illegible] with the escape of prisoners, and [illegible] deceived, shamed, resentful when they [illegible] taken.

PHILADELPHIAN SOCIETY NOVEL.

[illegible] DUSTY ROAD. By Therese Tyler. J. B. Lippincott Company, Philadelphia.

"THE DUSTY ROAD" violates most of the correspondence-school canons of plot construction; but one doesn't [illegible] that, for this is a novel worthy of the [illegible]. Theoretically, there are too many [illegible] of importance; also theoretically, some of them are brought in too late, all of which serves to show that theories [illegible] smash when an author of decided ability finds their limitations restrictive.

There is an unescapable sense of reality about the "The Dusty Road;" except for the [illegible] Italian who carries off the highly-[illegible] Evelyn, and for the too capable [illegible], a really fine consistency and naturalness regulates the other numerous characters.

[illegible] finds it grievous to be the poor [illegible] of a rich cousin; finds it wretched [illegible] her disappointed, captious mother even [illegible] to hold a place in Philadelphian society. But Mrs. Anderson is humorously cynical with good reason; the dreams of her bridal days have been cruelly dissipated by the amiable improvidence of her husband.

[illegible] Elizabeth is the magnet of interest. [illegible] repression of temper with which she [illegible] the bullyings of her caddish brother, her mother's nagging, the supercilious [illegible] of her aunt and cousin, shows her [illegible] unusual, but by no means a "goody goody." Indeed, not.

[illegible] sneers and maternal hostility [illegible] turn her from the young artist, who, [illegible] rather than evil irresponsible, disappoints her; nor can wealth in the form of a broker hypnotize her; nor the [illegible] godliness of an honest pastor [illegible]. There is character development [illegible] Elizabeth; we see her grow and understand perfectly all that she does—even to [illegible] the love of a man she once disliked and only learned to admire after a stormy climax.

It is a good novel, filled with snappy, graphic phrases; written in a smooth, flexible style, and with an understanding of life as it is lived—not imagined.

DANBY REALISM.

THE SEAS OF GOD. (Anonymous.) Hearst's International Library Co., New York.

THERE is nothing nautical but—may we be forgiven this pun; flesh is weak—considerable that is naughty in "The Seas of God." A woman sins and succeeds; 'tis an old story, was traditionally venerable when Phryne, Thais and Lais were toddling infants. But she lacks the courtesan conscience, and shame, whispering denunciation, sits on her shoulder.

It is far from being a story that grips; is a trifle more specific than the ordinary "emancipated" novel, lets us peer at the incidents of the heroine's shame, but the whole of it is coldy imaginative, plausible perhaps, but unconvincing.

Her father dead, Lydia turns book agent and fails. At the moment of "psychological" destitution an old married friend makes known his love and advances funds. Later the married friend sactimoniously clears his conscience with a monetary gift and leaves her to shift with a baby.

The years pass, and Lydia is a modest maid in the home of a rich man. Without coercion she readily exchanges her status, sends her boy to a better school and wears better clothes. We meet some of her lovers—conventional roues, old and young—and gape at a few not wholly pleasant situations.

In the end we have no penitential sinner, no smashing tragedy, but rather an explanatory revelation of an inherited taint obviously calculated to justify the waywardness of the cultured country girl.

"The Seas of God" is a clumsy-handed, dauby attempt at realism. The book lacks the pulsating sympathy, the understanding, poignancy and artistry that redeems what is otherwise offensive. It is not audacious, but crude; clumsy, not even brutal.

WEIRD AND FASCINATING.

"BREATH OF THE JUNGLE." By James Francis Dwyer. A. C. McClurg & Co., Chicago.

GROTESQUE, unreal, tragic stories, yet moulded into what approaches narrative perfection, make up "Breath of the Jungle." For a long, long time, Mr. Dwyer turned out—"turned out" is exactly it—fantastic adventure tales characterized by a breathless speed in action and an incredulous amount of hairbreadth excitement. Now he has spurned for the most part all semblance of probability—but he convinces, the much talked of "illusion of reality" is in the stories for the space of time it takes to read them.

"Breath of the Jungle" is a felicitous title. It shadows forth something of the ominous mystery. "A Jungle Graduate" especially is a well-wrought story; grewsome, perhaps, but finished with skill and rounded to the inevitability one expects when a drunken naturalist attempts to humanize an orang-outang. "The Orang-outang Fight on the Papuan Queen" in which a naturalist, without sleep, fights nine jungle monsters for two weeks, scorns credence—yet, as the author says, the proof comes at the end of the story and one is almost ashamed for being skeptical when the old jungle veteran indignantly shows his scars.

Such stories as "The Red Face of Feerish Ali," with the woman dug out of a sandbank and the most priceless ruby in the world; "The Phantom Ship of Dirk Van Tromp," with its crew of rats and cockatrice of a Green-Eyed Woman; and "The Three Who Fled," with the panoramic visions of a sick murderer, carry the imagination clear to the outposts of unreality. But the art of the "born"—which means carefully, laboriously, self-made—story-teller is in each of them. Call them fairy tales if you like, but they are rounded and polished in a way that grips and holds the attention.

"The White Tentacles," with an opium fiend as a superman for five minutes, rather breaks down; "The Blind Dog of El Corib," a treasure-hunt yarn and "The Bronze Tiger," telling of a tricky Buddha monk, are more scamped and gilded than the others. But "A Jungle Graduate," and perhaps "The Soul Trapper," are really superior short stories; the former especially.

CLASSIFICATION OF NOVELS.

KATY GAUMER. By Elsie Singmaster. Houghton Mifflin Company, Boston.

INSTEAD of wasting its time in what somebody or other is sure to call foolishness, we wish Congress would do something that all book reviewers would appreciate; that is, standardize classifications for novels—something like the tariff classification. It would take several more words than we are willing to give to explain just the sort of a book "Katy Gaumer" is, whereas if the critical opinions were classified and standardized we might say "Katy Gaumer. Ba2." Anyone who cared to look up "Ba2" of the schedule would then find that what we meant was this: Entertaining, exceptionally well-written; lacks, however, the deep quality of big fiction; plot rather frayed toward the end.

Few novels ever reveal a more attractive, sweetly roguish little heroine than Katy Gaumer, who lives among the Pennsylvania Germans, is for the first half of the story. Perhaps it is true to life that disillusionment must attend experience, and as Katy grows out of maidenhood she learns that men who are trusted may be disappointing without being evil. Yet it comes as something of a shock that Alan, the quiet, spiritual boy, should emerge into an unstable young man with a wide streak of deceitfulness in him. It is almost as much of a shock that the phlegmatic David should emerge from an utterly unattractive boy into a sterling youth. Yes, toward the end the book lacks the qualities that makes the first of it so enjoyable; as when Katy suddenly turns the English Christmas exercises into an old-fashioned "German Belnickel" to please the Governor, and when she worries the life out of the teacher by her assiduous study and advancement.

The complicated tragedy involving two guiltless men in the disappearance of the silver communion service from the church gives a "mystery" and theme of interest to the story; but the whole affair is rather far-fetched and unreal.

Descriptions of life in the German community, amusing characteristics and fancies of the people, are infused into the story with delicate touches that add much to the charm of the book—for charm it has, and a distinct one.

A poet.

Robert Frost, author of "North of Boston" and "A Boy's Will," who has been suddenly acclaimed as a true poet. Both volumes of verse will be reviewed on this page next week.

UNCLASSIFIED.

STEWART EDWARD WHITE.

THE REDISCOVERED COUNTRY. By Stewart Edward White, F.R.G.S., Doubleday, Page & Co., Garden City, N. Y.

IN COMPANY with R. J. Cuninghame, described as the best "elephant man" in Africa, Stewart Edward White penetrated the last of the virgin game fields in 1913, traveling some 1700 miles on foot through the wilderness north of Lake Natron and east of Victoria Nyanza, Africa. The country was previously known, but not explored; hence the justifiable title of "the rediscovered country" for the journal kept on the trip.

Mr. White has been modestly parsimonious with facts of general interest, though with exceptional detail he gives instruction and advice for the benefit of other hunters who may care to follow on his trail. One wishes that he had been more gossipy; but the fatigue of a hard day's travel, combined with a painful illness, are not conducive to verbosity in a diary. On the other hand, the daily entries are models of condensation, words are not wasted, and valueless, uninteresting material is heartlessly eliminated.

Undoubtedly the most dramatic and thrilling story of the hunt is that which recites Mr. White's appalling experience with the lions. It gives one the shivers. In the midst of a jungle he had four full-grown wounded lions charging him at once, and he stopped them all with eighteen cartridges. One got within fifteen yards and the last and largest was dropped at eighteen paces. The other two were bowled over at a more comfortable distance.

The meetings with native chieftains and exchanges of gifts and civilities, the amusing experiences with porters, descriptions of the virgin and remarkable country, a few anecdotes, always pointed, the perilous and successful hunt for elephants are among the many features that make the book absorbing reading.

As Mr. White visited the last of the large, unexplored game fields, so is "The Rediscovered Country" one of the last books of real adventurous hunting that will be pervaded with the magic of primitive, unknown wilderness.

In conclusion he has two chapters, one of especial interest to big-game hunters; the other of especial importance to coloration theorists, wherein he sets down opinions arrived at through observation and disagrees with the radical faction who hold animal coloration to be purely protective in effect.

DEFENSE OF CAPITAL PUNISHMENT.

BY RIGHT OF SWORD. By Leigh H. Irvine. The Baker & Taylor Company, New York.

MR. IRVINE has crammed a small argumentative volume defending capital punishment with the ancient and modern testimony of philosophers and statesmen, churchmen and men of law. He establishes the palisades of his defense on all sides of the question, invoking both the Old and the New Testament, Darwin, Spencer, Aristotle, Carlyle, Nietzsche, and scores of others. Facts are ranged to showed something of the increase in crime where humanitarians have succeeded in abolishing the death penalty, and instances cited of where criminals have left Draconian States that they might commit murder under laws less severe.

He takes the position—one that sentimentalists grudgingly recognize—that the punishment of criminals is purely a protective measure, not one of revenge; that the self-preservation of society demands the extermination of fiendish humans the same as the extermination of vermin or savage beasts.

Life imprisonment, he points out, is not practicable since the average life-termer is pardoned at the end of a few years and is seldom in any sense reformed.

Death is described as the "king of terrors" to men of the depraved type; it is the one deterrent that halts the criminal, the one fear to which he cannot resign himself. With all other forms of punishment the criminal is willing to "take a chance," but the gallows is like a forbidding hand ready to pluck the offender into oblivion—or hell.

Mr. Irvine has designed the book as a standard campaign argument against those of any State who seek to modify the extreme punishment. He is palpably impatient with the "abolitionists" of the gallows, but his arguments are dignified, not in the least abusive, though expressed with fervid intensity. "By Right of Sword" is certainly comprehensive and emphatic.

EUGENICS AND HEALTH.

PAINLESS CHILDBIRTH.

TWILIGHT SLEEP. By Henry Smith Williams, B. Sc., M. D., LL. D. Harper & Bros., New York.

THIS is a simple account of new discoveries in painless childbirth, written by a physician who speaks with authority, and who has the faculty of expressing his ideas precisely. The book presents every phase of the subject, from the "twilight sleep" methods of the European hospitals, to the successful efforts of American physicians at the present time.

Perhaps the most interesting chapter is the one in which the author discusses the once mooted question as to whether or not labor pains are a disguised blessing. Dr. Williams shows that such suffering is an extraneous and in a sense abnormal product of civilization, and suggests that not to find some method of overcoming it would be "a reproach to medical science and a blemish on our boasted twentieth century civilization."

The author's masterly presentation of this subject is opportune, since even in this enlightened age there are still some individuals who interpret the ancient Hebrew observation that "women shall bring forth children in sorrow" as a divine command that they must do so. Dr. Williams riddles this reminiscent bigotry.

"TWILIGHT SLEEP."

PAINLESS CHILDBIRTH. By Marguerite Tracy and Mary Boyd. Frederick A. Stokes Company, New York.

THIS is a book that is likely to impress the general reader rather more than persons whose knowledge of the subject enables them to judge its merits somewhat critically. It is a description of the so-called Freiburg method of inducing "twilight sleep," reported from first-hand experiences, and with excellent European coaching.

The book purports to give a full account of the efforts to produce painless childbirth from the time of the discovery of anesthesia to the final triumph, such as it is, of the German method of relieving the pains of labor by means of hypodermic administration of narcotics. But curiously enough the greatest event in the history of anesthesia—that is, the discovery of anesthesia itself by the American, Dr. Morton—is practically ignored.

On the other hand, the work of Sir James Young Simpson, who "discovered" anesthesia something like a year after Morton had made his public demonstration, and after Oliver Wendell Holmes had coined the word "anesthesia," is given great prominence. Indeed, the impression conveyed is that Simpson was the discoverer of anesthesia, although in point of fact he merely demonstrated that chloroform would produce unconsciousness similar to that produced by sulphuric ether, which fact Dr. Morton had already given the world.

Apparently the authors of "Painless Childbirth," in working up the historical part of their book, were guided by English writers. Had they sought American or continental sources they would have found the facts officially recorded.

"FOR HEALTH'S SAKE."

MY SYSTEM; (2) MY SYSTEM FOR LADIES; (3) MY SYSTEM FOR CHILDREN; (4) MY BREATHING SYSTEM. By J. P. Muller. David McKay, Philadelphia.

EACH VOLUME of this series is complete in itself, and presents a system of practical exercises for men, women and children as the titles indicate, with one volume devoted to breathing exercises. The first of the series, "My System," needs no introduction to American or European readers, as the earlier editions ran into hundreds of thousands of copies. Its popularity rests upon three important features: (1) the practicality of the suggestions; (2) the fact that no apparatus is suggested; and (3) the short time required to perform the exercises suggested.

The last item is probably the most alluring, the entire time consumed in going through the series of exercises being fifteen minutes, including the bath. Yet Lieut. Muller has studied his system so carefully that the ten minutes actually devoted to exercising the muscles produce results in muscular tone and development greater than haphazard methods extending over a much longer period. It is really an intensive method of scientific muscle culture, and most effective.

The systems of exercises suggested for ladies and children are merely modifications of the original idea, with necessary adaptations. Children as a rule need no instructions about taking exercise, as these are suggested by their own activities. But the sickly or backward child needs encouragement and intelligent direction; and Lieut. Muller's system offers useful help for these little ones.

"My Breathing System" is somewhat more comprehensive than the name implies. It focuses upon the organs and muscles of respiration, it is true, but it includes many useful practical hints in matters of hygiene that make it peculiarly valuable.

SENSIBLE AND CHARMING.

MOTHERS AND CHILDREN. By Dorothy Canfield Fisher. Henry Holt & Co., New York.

THIS BOOK, which is concerned essentially with the home life of children and their parents, is full of helpful suggestions that will appeal to thoughtful parents. Moreover, these suggestions are of the practical, commonsense kind.

One might suppose that the author of "A Montessori Mother" would be obsessed with a certain number of novel or bizarre notions about the proper training of children. But such is not the case. She appreciates fully that the children of today are no different from children of past ages; and that "good training" needs no very novel interpretation. "We do not need new principles," she says. "For that matter, there are no new principles. Like everyone else facing new conditions, we need to go back to the oldest of general theories for our guides."

In "Mothers and Children," therefore, we have simply a lucid presentation of the practical interpretation of old principles, offered in readable and intensely interesting form. The charm of the book is its pleasing presentation, but its real value lies in the practical suggestions for meeting the varied problems of childhood.

"LAW AND USAGE OF WAR."

Sir Thomas Barclay, vice-president of the Institute of International Law, has issued a practical handbook of the law and usage of land and naval warfare and prize in "Law and Usage of War" (Houghton-Mifflin Company.) This comprehensively covers for the layman all the features of international law pertaining to war, gives the history of certain provisions and calls attention to nations entering into the agreements.

All terms are classified and explained; what is "lawful" and "unlawful;" the rights of belligerents and of neutrals is succinctly set forth in unambiguous language, so that the book is valuable in assisting the student of the present war to have a definite understanding of the numerous controversial questions continually being raised among the nations.

"THE VALLEY OF THE COLORADO."

Pat Emery, publisher and author of "The Valley of the Colorado," has told something of the prosperity and charm of the country around Imperial City through the medium of a romance involving Mr. Tims and Mrs. Halley. When Mr. Tims is called to San Francisco to testify before the railroad commission, his Irish spirit is aroused and he pours out whole pages of economic tribute to his beloved community. Later, when one who calls herself Mrs. Tims appears on the scene and attempts to appropriate him as her husband, Mrs. Halley comes to the rescue, and the complications are straightened out in a way that brings a "happy ending."

"FELIX TELLS IT."

In "Felix Tells It" (D. Appleton & Co.) Lucy Pratt has presented a 10-year-old boy who undertakes to chronicle the happenings in his family. Felix learns that Macaulay wrote a history when 8 years old, and concludes that he must redeem the wasted years between eight and ten to equal Macaulay. The stories are in no sense lively, and their length sometimes indicates that Felix doesn't adhere to the technic of story writing, but such tales as "David Dodd and I" (describing ill-mannered cousin) and "Father Ran for Mayor" are wholly amusing and streaked with irony.

"THE SILK-HAT SOLDIER."

"The Silk-Hat Soldier and Other Poems," by Richard Le Gallienne (John Lane Company) is a very thin volume of poems that may attain more recognition than poetical merit entitles it, through the provision that the profits and royalties derived from the sales of the book will be donated to the Belgian Relief Fund. Mr. Le Gallienne is most emphatically not a poet of power and the attempts to be Kiplingesque (as in "The Silk-Hat Soldier" and "Soldier Going to War") are rather feeble.

BITS OF VERSE.

Inspired by the War.

Peace,
Give us peace, we pray,
While in our hearts we sometimes say
If thrills of warfare cease
Were not the hardier virtues flown
That war hath called her own?
The lamb and lion paired, the little child,
The useful pruning hook, the broken spear—
How tame the vision! Too inert and mild
To nerve weak souls for casting out of fear.

A thousand years of peace! Would these consign
Mankind to lassitude, with powers supine?
No recreant peace be ours, but bold emprise?
If war alone can give us manly men
With hearts of strenuous fortitude—ah, then
Welcome be war in all its hideous guise!

Nay, peace hath conquests, more renowned
Than war can boast. Be these with laurels crowned!
Change thy meek aspect, peace. Show visage bold.
Adopt the trappings that from days of old
Make war attractive—music and the march,
Shouts of the people, the triumphal arch,
Be these to peaceful victories dedicate,
And of this glorious pomp no whit abate.

The conquest of the air, and secrets hid
In nature's womb—do these indeed forbid
Hardihood's ventures? Battles with disease,
Outwitting death by helpful ministries;
The overthrow of things that make for harm—
Are these so poor in danger's subtle charm?
War's senile shape too long hath claimed the right
Exclusive for the deeds of valiant might.
But, oh! 'tis time such spurious claim shall cease.
Come, then, with banners brave, O kingly peace!
Lift high thy scepter, summon all thy power,
Absence of war's excitements do not rue.
Inspire men's hearts with strength to dare and do.
Come, peace, it is thine own auspicious hour!

The Grass.

Clothing kindly the naked places—
  Under the feet of the toiling mass—
Hiding the past with its scars and graces,
Covering crimes and dead men's faces
  Greenly it grows—God's wonderful grass!

O'er grave and garden we see it growing,
  Changeless, impartial, from year to year;
By slender streamlets rudely flowing
Thro' dells where noisy winds are blowing
  Always familiar and ever dear!

Over the saint and the sorry sinner,
  Over the forts of caste and class;
The former loser—the former winner—
Over the pitiful cobweb spinner
  Quietly, patiently grows the grass!

Over the mountain and by the river—
  Over the dreams that arise and pass;
Over the lips that are still forever,
Over the eyes that see us never
Over the distant dead endeavor
  Willingly, eagerly, grows the grass!

Over the field of conflict gory,
  Over the treacherous, dark morass—
Nothing knowing of guilt or glory,
Ending a chapter in earth's strange story—
  Tenderly, faithfully grows the grass!

Over the ruined and the defeated,
  Over the stains that will not pass—
Over the folly and wrong repeated,
Over the marred and the incompleted
  Freely and loyally grows the grass.

And when my doubts and my dreams are over,
  And the sands are run in time's gray glass—
When I am no more loved—nor lover
Then in your pitying kindness cover—
  Cover and comfort me, beautiful grass!

OVER THE SEA.

The late Lord Rothschild demonstrated his faith in the Talmud by leaving unfinished the superb cornices in the grand entrance hall of his town house in Piccadilly, and at his country seats at Tring and Gunnersbury. This was in accordance with the Hebrew precept which forbids any devout believer in the Talmud to regard his home on earth as anything but temporary, and therefore uncomplete.

Queen Wilhelmina of Holland has selected an English governess to have charge of the education of Princess Juliana. The Queen herself received her education from an English governess. The Queen's mother is by birth a Princess of one of the sovereign houses of Germany, and her husband, Prince Henry, is a German, and was a Prussian officer until his marriage.

Maj.-Gen. William R. Robertson, the new chief of the British General Staff, of the expeditionary force, has had a remarkable career. Born of a Lincolnshire family in 1860, he enlisted in the Sixteenth Lancers and served several years as a trooper and noncommissioned officer before he was promoted to a second lieutenancy in the Third Dragoon Guards. He joined this regiment in India, and one of his first experiences as an officer was the picturesque and splendid cavalry concentration of Muridki Camp, near Lahore, in January, 1889, at which Prince Albert Victor, Duke of Clarence, the elder brother of His Majesty King George, reviewed sixteen regiments of British and Indian horse.

King Haakon of Norway is said to have easily assumed the free and cordial manner of the Scandinavian kings. He shakes hands with the clergy at church, speaks oftenest of Queen Maud simply as "my wife," and does not scorn to walk down Karl Johans Garden at Christiania quite as an ordinary citizen. His court is extremely simple in its arrangements. His military household is appointed by the government for short fixed terms, and dignitaries no longer wear uniforms.

The Queen of Belgium is said to give marked evidence of the grief she feels for the misfortunes of her people. She dresses in a severely plain costume and her eyes indicate that she has cried long and cannot cry more.

Lady Mackworth, the militant suffragette wife of Sir Humphrey Mackworth, who has just arrived in New York from England with her father, David Alfred Thomas, the great coal magnate of Wales, and who is staying with him at the Waldorf-Astoria, has served her "bit" in jail in London for having set fire to a letter box with the object of destroying the mail therein, but was released after a hunger strike.

HENLEY.

HENLEY.

LOS ANGELES' CELEBRATED PSYCHIC.

THE OLDEST PSYCHIC IN THE CITY.

317 W. THIRD, NEAR HILL.

REMEMBER, MR. HENLEY IS NOT A CARD READER OR PALMIST, BUT A NATURAL-BORN PSYCHIC.

Without asking you a question he gives dates, facts, figures. Are the people pleased? They are simply astounded. AMAZED. They say they never saw anything like it. Spiritualists, scientists, bankers, merchants and people of the highest class of society have had readings with him and pronounce him unequaled in his profession. Readings daily.

PERSONAL—
MRS. MASSON,
the noted palmist, of London, England, may be consulted at 322 SOUTH SPRING STREET, by those desiring CAREFUL, CONSCIENTIOUS AND SCIENTIFIC HAND READINGS, FROM ONE OF THE FOREMOST PALMISTS OF THE DAY.

The earnest student and thinker will soon learn in his investigations along psychological lines that that which pertains to occult phenomena proper can readily be distinguished from crude and oft-exposed SLEIGHT-OF-HAND TRICKS, the most common of which is the telling of the subject's name, age, etc., AFTER HE HIMSELF HAS WRITTEN THAT information.

PALMISTRY HONESTLY PRACTICED WILL NOT tell your name, but it WILL give you information of considerably greater value in every-day life. Your vocation, your present line of work, matters of health and domestic life, financial conditions and ways and means of climbing out of a rut of ill luck into wide paths of success and prosperity, can all be told you through scientific palmistry, WITHOUT A SINGLE QUESTION, WRITTEN OR VERBAL.

MRS. MASSON DOES NOT APPEAL TO IGNORANT SUPERSTITION, BUT TO THE FINEST INTELLIGENCE.

HIGH-CLASS PATRONAGE SOLICITED.

ARE YOU THE MAN
THAT I AM LOOKING FOR?

I can use several more good men upon my sales force. If you are the right man I have a place for you. It will mean more money to you than any salaried position you can secure and at the same time will give you an independence that comes from being in business for yourself. You must be sober, gentlemanly in appearance and a willing worker.

If you have never had any experience as a salesman I will guarantee to teach you the business. If you are an experienced salesman I will guarantee that under my system your efficiency will be increased at least 25 per cent. A man can be a salaried man all his life and in the end realize that he has accomplished very little.

Why not get into a business that really offers opportunities that are worth while. I have a number of men upon my sales force who a few months ago knew nothing about this business and who are today making an average of $250 per month.

Now listen, what others have done and are doing you can do. Let me show you the way. Call at my office any morning between the hours of 8:30 and 10 a.m. and ask for

W. S. MYERS, Sales Manager,
THE McCARTHY COMPANY,
60409. 609 S. HILL ST. Main 8172.

WANTED — THOROUGHLY EXPERIENCED salesmen. Not has-beens. Men that are now actively and successfully engaged in the business. The sales of 4 of my men in the past 2 weeks have aggregated nearly $40,000. I want 4 more such men. These 4 extra men will receive the same support in every particular as the 4 men mentioned above. No partiality shown in my department.

To qualify as one of our permanent men and enjoy all of the advantages of being associated with this big concern we must know that you are aggressive, full of initiative, and above all, truthful and loyal. Inexperienced men need not apply.

Telephone me for appointment or come in any morning.
C. E. CULBERSON,
Sales Manager,
LOS ANGELES INVESTMENT CO.

I WANT A MAN

If you are the man I want I will spend patience and time to teach you the real estate business. You can make a good deal of money while you are learning if you do as I tell you to do. A man alone is very often like a ship without a helm. I am the helm. If you have a little better than average personality, appearance and good manners, if you know what the value of sticking to the truth means, I will steer you on the road where other men are making from $3000 to $10,000 a year. This may be the definite chance you have been waiting for to shape your future to success; I want to talk to you any morning after 9 o'clock.

FOR SALE—CO-OPERATIVE DRY MASH.
QUALITY OF SIMPLES AND NOT FORMULA MOST IMPORTANT.

There are hundreds of formulae to be had for making a dry mash. Some even go so far as to say any one could sit down and run off one thousand different plans for building a dry mash. Such talk is simply the "Valor of Ignorance." To be sure, there is some chance for variety, but the fundamental principles of nutrition cannot be altered at the feeder's whim. Different samples of the same feeding material may vary as much as 50 per cent. in feeding value. Thus bran may contain 17 per cent. protein or some other bran may contain but 11 per cent. The best quality must go in.

Co-operative Dry Mash has the quality. Why not try a sample order now. Circular on feeding sent on request.

We deliver in most parts of the city.

FINDS CHRISTMAS PRESENTS IN SWAG.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

POMONA, May 1.—The spirit of the Yuletide was brought back to the J. B. Stoker home at No. 536 West Holt avenue today when Mrs. Stoker identified, in a wagonload of burglar swag which was recovered from the home of John Anderson at No. 993 East Fifth street on Friday, three articles from a Christmas box that her mother sent to her from Texas, but which was stolen from her home on the night of December 23 while the Stoker family was attending exercises at a church, and before any member of the family had taken a peep inside the wrapper.

When the Christmas box was stolen, along with a large quantity of silverware, Mrs. Stoker grieved greatly over the loss, for the box contained a beautiful dining-room table centerpiece worked by her mother, Mrs. S. A. Black, in Breckenridge. Mrs. Stoker placed especial value upon the piece for the reason that her mother is 76 years of age, and she was very regretful at not having a look at the piece of needlework.

The mother sent a sample of the goods and a piece of lace such as she had used in making the gift, in a letter, after hearing of the burglary. When a local officer arrested Anderson for stealing two bales of hay and discovered that his house was full of things stolen here during the winter, Mrs. Stoker identified the lost Christmas centerpiece by matching her sample of goods with a piece of the swag.

She also recovered a pretty doily, and her 10-year-old son found a newsboy whistle that was sent to him. Fifty-two pieces of community silver, stolen from the Stoker home, were not recovered.

BROLASKI IS READY.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

REDONDO BEACH, May 1.—Petitions asking for the recall of Harry Brolaski, a member of the Board of Trustees, were filed today with the City Clerk. The petitions allege "incompetency, inefficiency; that he used his office for political purposes and thereby has obstructed the progress of Redondo Beach." Mr. Brolaski announced that when the petitions come before the board he is ready to put the motion calling the election, as he is willing to submit his qualifications to the voters and prefers that they cast the deciding vote in such a matter.

COPPER'S VALUE IN WAR.

Is Needed for Shells and for Bands and Cartridge Cases for Quick-Firing Guns.

[Ulster Guardian:] The Times published on Tuesday an article on copper in war, and explains why Germany needs it. First and foremost, are the cartridge cases for rifles. The alloy of copper and zinc, from which rifle cartridge cases are drawn, is so thin that the metals must be very pure to insure against flaws. Then there are the cartridge cases for the quick-firing guns. These also require the highest quality copper and zinc, since they must be exact to a 500th part of an inch, and gas-tight. On shells there are copper bands encircling the steel, to insure close fitting in the rifling. Germany requires in normal times about 250,000 tons of copper. In 1912 she consumed 252,000 tons, and in 1913 265,000 tons. Her internal production was only 25,-319 tons in 1913, the Mansfield mine in Prussian Saxony alone producing 20,201 tons. Austria's total production in 1913 was but 4300 tons. Consequently, even in normal times, Germany requires to import 230,000 tons annually for domestic consumption, and if she can be prevented from obtaining supplies, it is evident she must soon be unable to continue to manufacture war munitions, or must destroy plants to satisfy her requirements.

THE NEW AMAZONS OF ENGLAND.

BY ALMA WHITAKER.

THEY call it the Women's Volunteer Reserve and it is an established fact. They already boast 300,000 recruits, with a colonel-in-chief, who is Lady Londonderry, and a colonel, who is the Honorable Evelina Haverfield.

And Lord Kitchener has given them his blessing.

Think of it. An army of women in training, nearly three times as large as the United States Army! And seventy thousand of them have enlisted for work in the trenches and are using every possible influence to get the government to let them go. These are women who have learned to use firearms and reached a high standard of skill in rifle shooting.

It is an amazing thing, this Amazon army of the twentieth century, coming out of conservative old England, where woman has been kept in her place by an overwhelming masculine opinion for centuries. Where only a year ago the Law Society voted without a single dissent that women could not be admitted to the bar, that a female lawyer was unthinkable and against the best interests of the state, where women doctors are still looked upon as oddities, where the professional woman of any kind meets the utmost discouragement, where even now prominent men are writing long weighty articles for the press enjoining women to cultivate domesticity and sink their professional ambitions, and bear children to their utmost capacity.

And all the time these women are grimly, calmly, offering themselves all over the country for the men's work. They are working in ammunition factories to the extent of many thousands, they are taking the places of conductors on the street cars, of taxicab drivers, of city officials, of railway employees, of all kinds of government clerks, even of coal miners and dock laborers in many districts.

It is a tremendous thing that is happening in England today. If woman's cry has been for the right to labor, she has come into her own. Precious few branches of labor are denied her now—at equal wages.

The Labor Party has shown up selfishly enough in this crisis.

Theirs has been one seriously protesting voice. They dread the efficiency and competition of the women with a wholesome fear. And well they may. In this great crisis of the world the women have shown themselves wonders of endurance.

And it is a little ironical that their chief need of protection is against their protectors, against the men who have declared that women's place is in the home, sheltered and cared for, protected from the rougher elements of life.

What have not the sheltered women of Belgium suffered in this war? What more could they have suffered fighting side by side with their men in the trenches? All the fine old gallant traditions are being swept aside ruthlessly these days. Theory is giving place to hard practice and the women stand forth in a new light.

With bombs hurling down from the peaceful heavens, with villages bombarded from a distance of many miles, what profits it that the woman remains peacefully in her home, doing her domestic duty? While that home tumbles about her head, leaving her wholly unprepared to face the bitter facts of the situation. The tales that the Belgian women have told their English sisters are responsible for this great woman's army. The sheltered woman is fair game, the spoils of war when the invader lands, and the horrors they endure can never be written. They have none of the old time immunity of the noncombatant. The noncombatant is not recognized these days. So they might as well shed the sweet illusion once and for all and train themselves for serious combat, for common self-defense against the protecting half of mankind.

One can imagine the emotions of the Englishman as he views this great army of women, soberly dressed in workmanlike uniforms, solidly shod in square toed shoes, marching straight and taut, with a fine athletic stride. My letters from England are full of the wonderful sight, grudging admiration from even the most convinced of antis.

There is a great training camp where the women are being taught signalling, drill, shooting, gun-loading, fencing, aeronautics, mechanics, first aid, camp cooking, handicraft. Where a cyclist corps, an automobile corps, a telephone and telegraphists corps are all attaining an efficiency that makes the old soldiers who have the job in hand concede their unstinted admiration.

The headquarters are in the very heart of London, besieged daily by a long army of earnest recruits, only too willing to take up their share of the burden. Hale and hearty old ladies are lying glibly about their age in a new cause, for the age limit has been set at forty, and strong healthy dames in the fifties with unimpeachable digestions and supple muscles object to being relegated to the shelf. And to think that in Jane Austen's day the matron of thirty took to black silk and a lace cap and regarded herself as too old to dance.

England will never be the same again. This war has brought about a great upheaval of some of her most cherished traditions. Her whole character will be changed—for better or worse. Certainly it will be the woman's era and her voice will be heard in no uncertain tones. She will overrun every trade and profession—and prove most disconcertingly capable. Whether men's dearest privileges will be ruthlessly abrogated or whether woman will merely assume most of them as well, remains to be seen. But British masculinity will get the jolt of its life and if it is to retain any semblance of superiority will have to earn every ounce of it.

But men will be valuable and unco scarce. It is well these women are providing themselves with new interests, new careers, new loves. Before the war there were more women than men, and now husbands and lovers are being wiped out like flies. When to own a man was the be-all and end-all of existence, women had a rotten time of it. Now they will find ample solace in work—and there is no happier woman than she who fills a necessary place in the scheme of things, who is achieving something, expressing herself in tangible results.

It is said that male babies are the result of anxiety, trouble. Certain it is that more male babies are always born in war time. So in a decade or so the balance may possibly be readjusted, but in the meantime the women of England will have left their traditional grooves forever and Britannia enters upon a totally new phase of her existence.

THE SHADOW.

BY MARSHAL SOUTH.

Deeply ye sleep in blind content, while through the heedless land
There flicker signs and portents that ye do not understand.
Ye are too wrought with commerce and yet will not pause to heed,
Ye have no time to pause and think, to guard against your need.
Ye heed the voice of comfort and ye heed the voice of cost,
And fools who prate of "brotherhood" till every hope is lost.
Ye have no time to reason, for self-glory blinds your eye—
But the heavy hand of Judgment shall find you by and by.

Ye tread the path of Pleasure and ye throng the road of Trade,
But ye forget the bitter coin with which the weak are paid.
Ye glory in prosperity, ye glory in your wealth
And worship at a golden shrine the blatant god of Self.
Ye glory in your liberty, the strength that made you free,
BUT YE FORGET THE WATCHFUL GUN THAT BIDES BEYOND THE SEA.
Ye will not heed the flickering signs, for peace has made you blind.
Ye cannot see the banking storm; the steel that looms behind.

Massed hulls against the skyline and lean craft that strike and fly;
The green-gold glare of seaward guns against the darkening sky;
Strange guns that mock your harbors and strange troops upon your soil—
Shall ye restrain with windy words the victor from the spoil?
Shall ye then rush swift to slaughter, untrained, courageous, blind;
The withering guns before you and the ghastly dead behind?
Long looms your ocean frontage, thin stands your battle line:
Think ye that that which now ye hold, ye hold by writ divine?

Guns, guns, Ye gods, O give us guns, and give us brains to see,
That upon strength and strength alone, rests freedom for the free.
The years have fled, the times have changed, the seas no longer bar;
But deathless, changeless, tireless waits the blood-red god of War.
Vain vapid vaporings of the Hague; think ye that these will save?
For ages down the years unborn the War god's plumes shall wave.
Fatuous folly, legal webs, soft words that would defend—
Before the bellowing twelve-inch gun these arguments shall end.

Disciples of the "Great Mistake," blind leaders of the blind,
Know that your peace rests on your guns and they who stand behind!
Ye cannot hold with words or gold the peace which ye desire;
Lo, empires in the past have tried—they rest beneath the mire.
Changeless, immutable the law; while still the planets wheel
Ye deal with faulty human clay—match steel to living steel!
Of no avail the patriot stands, untrained to meet the need;
And strength is forged before the storm; the sky is dark; take heed!

WOMAN'S EXPERIENCE IN THE JURY BOX.

Finds the Pay of $3 Per Day Very Meager for Nervous Energy Required—Hubby Left at Home with the Babies While Wife is on the Jury—Didn't Like the Lawyers—A Los Angeles Woman's Narrative.

BY MRS. L. G. PARSONS.

I WAS one of the first women in the United States to serve on a jury. I lived in Seattle, and shortly after women were recognized as the "judicial" equals of men I was drawn for jury service.

The case was a damage suit brought against a railroad. The defense said the auto had run into the train, and the plaintiff said that the train had run into the auto. We were to decide.

After the jury was impaneled a faint weary hope for lunch rose up, but passed away, when the attorney for the plaintiff jumped up and said if the court was willing he would like to have the jury view the premises. The woman next to me, who had been looking at a fashion book, grabbed my arm and looked queer. I guess she thought she was to see some horrible sight.

The bailiff marched us out and into a waiting motor that looked like a patrol wagon and we were driven through town to the scene of the accident.

I tried to be as busy and as important as the rest, as they examined each foot of ground as though they were the real Sherlocks. The men rubbed their chins and teetered on their feet and gazed at the arc light that was supposed to have been lighted or was not lighted, according to which side stated the facts, till even the long-suffering bailiff yawned and asked them to hurry as he wanted his lunch.

Some of the witnesses were examined that afternoon. I would think those lawyers would die, if hate would kill, for if I had been talked to and at the way some of those witnesses were, I would hate those lawyers the rest of my natural life. A good many of the witnesses were reduced to a state of shivering idiocy before the loud-spoken counsel for the defense got through with them. I hate arguing, anyway. And the more I listened to the wrangling and jangling and veiled sarcasms and some that weren't veiled but shone with unblushing nakedness, the more I thought there was going to be a free-for-all fight, but they seemed to calm down and proceeded peacefully again.

LAWYERS TROUBLESOME.

Either it was the strong light, for the jurors faced the windows with the late winter sun pouring into our eyes, or it was the fear that the lawyers were going to fight every minute, that made me feel faint and queerish. I noticed the lawyers stop and look at me for a second and just then the judge announced recess and I was saved the disgrace of fainting in the jury box.

The big, blustering lawyer came up and said: "You mustn't let this use you up." And I had thought him the meanest thing! I told him that I was very much interested and it was only the excitement of serving on the jury that had made me forget to eat much lunch. The next day I took some chocolates in my muff and munched them whenever I felt hungry.

The court stenographer was a prematurely white-haired youth and didn't think at all badly of himself. I was fascinated in watching his pen fly over the pages. After awhile he took a book from his desk and read whenever there was a lull in the storm.

HARD TO BELIEVE WITNESSES.

Some of the witnesses swore that the auto was only going twelve to fifteen miles an hour and the other witnesses swore that it was going forty to fifty miles, and yet they all saw it pass them within a block of one another. Some swore the plaintiff didn't have a light on his car and others swore that he did. I got so mixed up trying to follow all the swearings that I was ready to swear to anything myself.

After several days we at last received the instructions of the court and were locked in an evil smelling juryroom. We appointed a foreman and he stumbled through the voluminous instructions of the court.

BABEL OF ARGUMENT.

Then a wild babel of arguing and discussing went on. Of course two or three did all the talking. The women all thought the quiet lawyer was the nicest and the other horrid. And most of them were ready to vote for the plaintiff. Poor thing, he got his auto smashed and was so badly hurt. But in a break of the argument I got up and said let's think of the corporation and not always of the individual. Some one had to think of it.

So then we cast a ballot and stood seven to five in favor of the plaintiff. And I voted for the poor, injured man after all! A fat German woman sat next to me and she got to telling me how to make something that contained apples and milk, but my German had hard work understanding hers. I understood enough though to make me feel hungry. She couldn't write in English and all her balloting was done in German; but that didn't matter—there wasn't any prejudice against Germany then. I know that one of the men didn't even know what he was voting on.

I was anxious to get home to my family and moved that we take another vote. We stood eight to four in favor of the plaintiff. And there was no hope of moving the four. A man looked at his watch and said, "Good, if we stay here five minutes more, we will be taken out to dinner."

"Where shall we be taken?" I asked, and had visions of the jail, for the odor of the prisoners' dinner penetrated even to the juryroom. The bailiff opened the door and said to get ready for dinner, as we had to go downtown to eat.

The jurors were tickled to pieces and were excited at eating in a restaurant, at least, the women were, as it was a change from eating their own cooking at home.

MARCHED LIKE A "CHAIN GANG."

We marched two and two like a chain gang, headed by the bailiff, down the street, and into a place I had never been before. We had a table d'hote, a dab of everything, and the German woman still sat next to me and talked of those "gute" and wonderful things to eat.

Then back we were herded like sheep to the Courthouse, passing the theater with its crowds of gayly bedecked patrons.

We took our places again in the big courtroom and I was asked to read the instructions again to the jurors.

"Now," I said, "you have to decide whether the plaintiff or the defendant is guilty of contributary negligence."

A lost expression came over the jurors' faces. And the hours dragged on and I had visions of staying all night sleeping on a cot in the garret with these fellow-jurors of mine. And I knew by the looks of them that most of them snored and wheezed.

I was getting desperate and turned to the man next to me and said, "What do you think about it?"

ARGUMENTATIVE COMPLICATION

"I think like you," he said. "Well why don't you vote for the plaintiff then?" "But you were arguing for the defendant." "I know I was, but I voted for the plaintiff just the same," I told him. And he said, all right, I'll vote for the plaintiff, too, for I think he ought to have something." So we rushed through another ballot, and stood nine to three in favor of the plaintiff.

And I started in to argue with the three that were holding out. One man refused to talk and backed off into a corner and said he wouldn't give up if it took all night, and all week. I asked the woman why she wouldn't vote with the majority, and she said the old auto wasn't worth $5000 damages, and I said it wasn't either, and asked her what price she thought was fair. She said $200, and then we tried to compromise on $500, and stuck at $1000, and all our pleadings wouldn't pry them loose. The bailiff stuck his head in and asked if there was any chance of reaching a decision that night, as he had to go home and had to arrange some sleeping quarters for us.

"I could just see that garret and the rats and hear the snoring. That hungering to be independent, mentally, morally and physically had passed and I longed passionately for my own bed. I looked around on the calm, placid, stolid faces of most of the jurors seated around the big table and wondered if they longed for home as much as I did. One or two of them looked like they didn't have a home. The poor cross-eyed man unkept and dirty, that owned to cleaning yards for a living, had he a home?

I begged the bailiff for five minutes more time and taking my courage in my hands, I walked over to the sulky man in the corner.

I argued with him for the five minutes, told him we might as well settle this case as push it off on another set of jurors, and if we didn't settle it, it would cost the city a huge amount of money for a new trial, as each day added to the cost. Then we made a last ballot, and stood 11 to 1, and the day was won, or the night rather. And with a sigh of relief, I went down to my car and found it lighted. That nice little chauffeur. But still I had to go home alone though the rain and the fog and none of the jurors went my way. I didn't feel at all like a brave juror and wanted a man to protect me. We can't get along without men after all. A man to protect me from what? Another man most likely. So it wasn't for the evil in man, woman wouldn't be afraid.

HUBBY IN COMFORT.

I found my husband at home entertaining some neighbors while his wife served on the jury. He asked me how I got home alone, and I told him that the bailiff brought me. What if I had had to have stayed all night and couldn't have even telephoned to find out about my babies. I am afraid that the experience killed a cat kind of curiosity for me, and am sure that the $3 per day doesn't begin to pay for the strain and energy.

THE SELF, THE SOUL.

Every Act is Linked with Its Purpose and We Have no Right to Ask Its Causes.

[Hugo Munsterberg, in the North American Review:] As soon as purposive psychology is acknowledged as a full-fledged science we cannot go very far without discovering that it leads us straight to the old idea of the soul. We understand the meaning of a thought or memory or will act by linking it with the aim toward which it points, and this inner forward movement is understood as the act of a self. What do we know of this self? One thing above all—it is perfectly free. We saw that in this whole world of meaning everything is completely understood as soon as every act is linked with its purpose, hence we have no right at all to ask for causes. It has no subconscious causes, and it has no brain causes. The mere inquiry after its causes would falsify its status. It has not causes any more than it has weight or color. Its whole reality lies in its purposiveness, and this detachment from any possible cause, this completeness in itself, is the fundamental freedom of the self which stamps it as a soul.

Moreover, for the casual psychologist, whether he be of the subconscious or of the physiological temper, mental life is a multitude of elements. The parts of the mind are externally linked, but they remain separate mental atoms. In the world with which the purposive psychologist is concerned one act is internally bound up with another, one idea means another, one thought refers to another, and every single act points backward to the self which expresses its meaning in its purposive deeds. This is a self which is not a mere pile of psychical doings, but which really asserts itself as the same in every new act. Everything which springs from it is involved in its selfhood.

This soul, finally, cannot be dependent upon the beginning and the end, upon the days and the hours of the physical body. It expresses itself through the body, and the sense organs determine the selection of objects toward which it takes its attitudes, but the soul is neither in the time nor in the space of the physical meleucules? If we suriously ask, "How can we describe the soul?" we must learn to recognize the absurdity of the very question. Every description refers to an object, but the essential meaning of the soul is that it is never an object, but always a subject, always a self, always an action.

The Sikhs' Deadly Weapon.

[London Tit Bits:] The Sikhs fighting in the war can certainly claim to possess a unique form of weapon. This is a hand-thrown missile, composed of metal similar in shape to the discus with which we have been made familiar in Roman history. Its edge is sharpened like a razor, and the weapon, when thrown with a peculiar circular motion, has extraordinary penetrating power. It cuts like a knife through paper when it strikes any object in its path. At a distance of 100 yards the disc is capable of cutting its way through a piece of hard wood two inches thick. It is the peculiar twist given to the weapon when it is thrown which causes the cutting edge to bury itself so remorselessly in anything that it meets. It is doubtful whether any but the Sikhs could effectively use this weapon. They made deadly use of the disc of death at the battle of Dixmude.

Architect A. C. Martin's perspective of new Macy-street school.

FACT AND COMMENT.

[illegible] little is heard these [illegible] the cleaning up of vacant [illegible] 1915." Time was, and not so [illegible] months ago, when people ap[illegible] to be really aroused about the [illegible] condition of much of the [illegible] property in Los Angeles [illegible] it seemed certain that the [illegible] exposition-year visitors would [illegible] a city neat beyond criticism. These weeds, [illegible] 'em, won't stay cut! Jungles [illegible] are springing up all over the [illegible] and the company we have been [illegible] has already begun to arrive [illegible] carload.

It will be [illegible] look with calm unconcern at [illegible] lots of the city when there [illegible] many of them.

[illegible] all that has been heard re[illegible] in relation to the vacant-lot [illegible] has to do with a wrangle over [illegible] of collections by the city [illegible] cleaning up done under the [illegible] of the Board of Public Works [illegible]. It seems that certain own[illegible], at the time of the great [illegible]-up crusade, neglected to put [illegible] own premises into presentable [illegible], have roared raucously at [illegible] pay the city clean-up squad's [illegible] for attending to the job. The Foreign Quarter.

DESIGNED FOR YOUNG AND OLD.

Macy-street School will be Neighborhood Center.

To be Both Social Hall and "Movie" Theater.

Plans Call for Building of Fireproof Type.

Of the many new school buildings to be erected under the provisions of the $6,000,000 bond issue, none will have a wider usefulness than that projected for the site of the present antiquated Macy-street school. The location is in the midst of a district that has an almost entirely foreign population, and the new building is to be both a place of instruction and a neighborhood center.

The present Macy-street school is composed of two frame buildings that, because of their overcrowded condition and the inflammable character of their construction, have long been a source of anxiety to the public school authorities. One of these old structures is to be razed at once to make way for the modern fireproof building contemplated under the bond programme. The other, it is considered probable, will be replaced with a substantial building within a few years at the outside.

In planning the new Macy-street building, A. C. Martin, the architect, has been confronted with the problem of designing a structure that, while meeting all the requirements of an up-to-date grade institution, should at the same time be adapted for the purposes of a vocational school and a neighborhood meeting place. Children of thirty-three different nationalities are now enrolled in the school and these, with their elders, are using the building almost nightly for various community gatherings and social events. In addition, the school is maintaining night classes for adults, large numbers of whom, in the last few years, have seized the opportunities it afforded for thorough instruction in the English language and in the ideals of American citizenship.

The new building will be three stories in height and will cover a ground area of 120x75 feet. It will stand on a portion of the present school grounds cornering at Avila and Clara streets and just off Macy street. The walls of the structure will be of brick, the facing being of the same material and the trim of artificial stone. All floors and stairs will be of reinforced concrete and all partitions of hollow tile.

The ground floor will contain a gymnasium, recreation rooms, a swimming tank, numerous shower baths and locker space and will be completely equipped for class work in hygiene and physical instruction. This part of the building will be open at all times to the children of the district.

The second or main floor is to contain an auditorium, domestic science room, a sloyd room, and a lunch room, which will also serve as a parlor for receptions. The auditorium will have a seating capacity of 400 and will be provided with a fully equipped stage. By the use of roller partitions, the room will be divided into a number of class-rooms during the day. On a mezzanine floor, back of the auditorium, will be a room for the display of moving pictures.

The third story will contain a millinery room, metal work shop, sewing room and laundry. There will be a roof garden over the auditorium.

The swimming tank on the first floor will be equipped with a filter and taps for both hot and cold water. There will be drinking fountains and fire lines to each floor. All rooms will be connected with the principal's office by electric annunciator service. The carefulness with which any possible fire risk has been considered, is evidenced not only in the construction of the building, but in the provision of wrought iron exits from the auditorium. Boilers for heating both the old and new buildings will be housed in a small separate structure.

RECENT DOWNTOWN LEASES.

Newly Consolidated Firms Secure South Hill Street Building; Broadway Sites Rented.

F. W. Katletz, manager of the leasing department of W. I. Hollingsworth & Co., reports the leasing of the two-story building at Nos. 636 and 638 South Hill street for the Knickerbocker Fireproof and Electric Company to the Beacon Light and Electric Company and the Los Angeles Gas Appliance Company, which firms have consolidated and will occupy the entire building by June 1. The lease covers a long term of years, with an aggregate rental of $30,000. Other leases reported by Mr. Katletz follow:

To the Courtney Kodak Company, storeroom at No. 602 South Hill street, for five years, at given aggregate rental of $20,000; Security Leasing Company to C. B. Reaben Piano Company, loft in Forresters building, No. 640 South Broadway; to N. Sklar for Brown block, loft on second floor of building at No. 820 South Broadway; storeroom at No. 604 South Hill street to Panner Crystalleries Company; Emilie Humphrey to Max Immerglück, southeast corner Pico and Hope, for two years; James Henderson to Miss Margaret Riordan, Hotel Edinboro at No. 549-551 South Grand avenue, for five years, at given total rental of $30,000.

Mr. Katletz also reports the sale of the property at No. 1227 West Pico street to J. F. McFarland for a consideration of $15,000. This site is improved with a one-story brick building.

FINE SCHOOL FOR SOUTH-END SITE.

MANCHESTER-AVENUE GRADE INSTITUTION TO BE MODERN IN CONSTRUCTION.

Work is to be begun at once on a modern grammar school to serve the rapidly-advancing district in the vicinity of Manchester avenue. The building, which was planned by Train & Williams, will stand at the corner of Manchester avenue and Hoover street, occupying a large site recently acquired by the Board of Education. The school is one of the numerous structures provided for under the $6,000,000 bond issue approved by the voters last fall.

The building will be of brick construction, excepting for the floors and stairways, which will be of reinforced concrete. It will be three stories high and will eventually contain thirteen class rooms, domestic science rooms, sloyd rooms, nature study rooms and an auditorium. A portion of the structure, containing six classrooms and the auditorium will be erected at this time, the rest being added as the need arises for more space. The architects have completed plans for the entire building.

The school will be of handsome design and will be faced with blue brick. All the ornamental features will be in artificial stone. The appointments will be complete in every detail.

The same architects have just completed plans for a new school, to be built at Compton avenue and Seventy-first street and to be known as the Miramonte school. This structure will be slightly smaller than the Manchester-avenue building.

MOVES SOUTHWARD.

Optical Concern to Go from Fifth and Broadway to Barker Brothers' Building—Wholesale District Leases.

The leasing department of the W. Ross Campbell Company, represented by George E. Short, has just leased for Barker Brothers to the Cahn Standard Optical Company, now at No. 512 South Broadway, the storeroom at No. 718 South Broadway. The lessees will fit up an attractive establishment.

The same realty company, represented by J. C. Thomas, has closed the following leases for the Grayco Manufacturers' Building, Nos. 752-6 South Los Angeles street; to A. B. Hoffman, manufacturer of ladies' dresses, loft floor; to Daniel Thomas, wholesalers' representatives, sample room; to Daniel Evans, display and salesroom for baby dresses and white goods.

EXTENSIVE CONTRACT.

The Board of Public Works has delivered to the Elliott & Horne Co. a warrant amounting to $98,771.47, to cover the cost of work in the Mateo-and-Willow-street improvement district. This is one of the largest special assessment improvements of the year and affects 1100 parcels of property in the industrial area lying south of the Southern Pacific station, fronting on Mateo street between Sixth and Ninth streets and on streets intersecting Mateo between the points named.

SCIENTISTS TO BUILD.

Plans have been started for a new church edifice to be built at the corner of Hollywood boulevard and La Brea avenue for the Fifth Church of Christ Scientist of this city. The structure will be of brick construction and will occupy a ground area of 80x120 feet. It will contain an auditorium seating 1000, together with Sunday-school and classrooms. Frank L. Meline, a Hollywood contractor, is in charge of the work.

STEADY GAIN IS APPARENT.

April Bank Clearings, Building Permits and Shipping Show Substantial Increase.

A steady improvement in business and financial conditions is evidenced by the reports for April of building operations, bank clearings and customs receipts in this city. Building permits issued in April numbered 721 and represented construction work to the valuation of $1,591,399. The valuation total is the best for the year to date, being a fifth larger than that of March and more than twice that for February.

April's bank clearance total was $87,983,243.56, as compared with $88,316,283.56 for March, $75,003,106.30 for February, and $86,625,062.37 for January. The bank clearings for the first four months of the year have reached the enormous aggregate of $337,927,695.36.

Exports sent through Los Angeles Harbor to foreign countries in April amounted to $383,098, an increase of $100,000 over the total for March. Last month's total was more than three times as great as that for April, 1914.

April exports to other parts of the United States by way of the Panama Canal were $229,512. The April imports amounted to $358,500, the total being practically unchanged from a year ago.

TO LOCAL FIRM.

To the F. O. Engstrum Company of this city has been awarded the contract for the construction of two buildings projected by the Colony Holding Company at Atascadero, in San Luis Obispo county. The buildings are among a number planned in connection with a colonizing scheme headed by E. G. Lewis, formerly head of the University City settlement at St. Louis. The structures to be erected at this time will be an administration building costing about $175,000 and a press building to cost approximately $50,000. The former will be four stories in height and the latter two stories. Both will be of reinforced concrete. Bliss & Faville of San Francisco are the architects for the scheme.

ON WESTERN AVENUE.

Work is to be begun within a short time upon a three-story brick parish school projected by the Roman Catholic diocese for a site on Western avenue between Second and Third streets. The building will be 75x90 feet in size and will contain, in addition to eight classrooms, a chapel seating about 350. E. J. Borgmeyer is the architect.

NEW WING PLANNED.

Announcement is made that a new wing will be added to the Hotel Maryland at Pasadena. The addition will be three stories high and will increase the capacity of the famous Crown City hostelry by forty rooms. Myron Hunt, architect of the present building, will draw the plans.

TO RUSH WORK ON NEW DESMOND'S."

ARCHITECT NAMED TO PLAN MODERN STORE BUILDING, SPRING NEAR SIXTH.

Following the exclusive report in last Wednesday's Times of the conclusion of Desmond's of a fifty-year lease on a lot 60x165 feet in size, on the west side of Spring street, just north of the Trust & Savings Building, comes the announcement that A. C. Martin has been commissioned to prepare architectural plans for a handsome and modern structure to be built for the big clothing concern at this new location.

The building will be erected jointly by the Desmond interests and Madeline F. Willis, owner of the ground to be occupied. The antiquated one-story structure now on the site is to be removed at once, and excavations for the new store will be started next week. It is planned to have the building completed by September.

Architecturally, the new home of Desmond's will be unique. The design will follow entirely original lines, as it is the intention of the builders to make the structure distinctive in appearance. The entire street front will be faced with terra cotta. Special attention will be given to the designing of the show windows and to the lighting and ventilation.

The entire building will be devoted to the business of the one firm. The basement story will be equipped for the convenience of tradesmen. Provision will be made on the main floor for furnishings, hats and women's dress accessories. The second, third, and possibly a fourth floor, will be given over to men's and boy's clothing.

For the half-century ground lease of the property Desmond's will pay the huge total rental consideration of $1,600,000. The exact cost of the building will not be determined until the architect has completed the plans.

UNDER NEW MANAGEMENT.

Victoria Hotel at Seventh and Hope Streets Leased for Term of Years to Local Man.

Through the agency of H. Jerome Toy & Co., the Orena estate has leased the Victoria Hotel at the corner of Seventh and Hope streets to Frank E. Rose, a local hotel man. It is understood that the lease extends over a long term of years. The hotel is now undergoing a complete remodeling and will be open for business June 1.

The same firm reports the sale of the lease and furniture of the Ponce de Leon apartments at No. 1136 South Alvarado street to Mrs. Nevada Irwin.

FOR DOWNTOWN SITE.

The contract was awarded during the past week for a one-story brick store building to be erected by Thomas Higgins on Spring street between Seventh and Eighth streets. The structure, which was planned by A. Reif, will have ground dimensions of 45x150 feet.

WANT VALUATION CLERKS.

The County and City Civil Service Commissions will hold jointly the 15th inst. at the Los Angeles High School an examination for clerks in land and building valuation work. The jobs will be temporary, from three to ten months, and carry salaries of $100, $90 and $75 a month. Men of experience in rapid computation, use of the slide rule and other modern computing machines and office equipment are much desired. Application blanks may be obtained at the rooms of the County Civil Service Commission in the Hall of Records, or at room 4, Normal Hill Center, Fifth street and Grand avenue. Applications must be filed before noon the 13th inst.

FIFTEEN YEARS ADDED.

Man Today Has a Longer Span of Life and Better Mental Equipment Than a Few Years Ago.

[New York World:] A dictum attributed to one famous physician, Dr. Osler, was that by the time a man was 40 years of age he had attained such success as he would attain in life, and that at 60 a man should be chloroformed.

However, that was some years ago. Now comes another famous physician, Dr. Victor C. Vaughan, president of the American Medical Association, to give us science's latest deductions as to potential possibilities of those who are no longer young men.

Age as expressed in terms of years does not mean at all what it used to mean, says Dr. Vaughan. The average length of life has increased. A man now is as young, has as many possibilities before him at 50 as his father had at 35.

Doubtless the Osler theorem expressed a truth. Being, however, based on the experience of former years it does not fit present conditions with exactness, and to be brought up to date requires some slight modification to adjust it in conformity with the data on what the Vaughan theorem is based.

Making the changes needful to fit the new terms in which age is expressed it appears that the man who has not by the time he is 55 years old—formerly it was 40 years old—made a success in life, never will make a success. And the age at which chloroform must be ordered is 75, not 60.

It is a pleasant thought that the man of 35—new reckoning—has nowadays all the experience, the sound judgment, the wise maturity of the man of 50. With this great advantage, why should not he make a success of his life, especially as he has many more years in which to win success than his father had?

We not only have a better equipment than men used to have, but things have been shoved along so as to give us at the time when men are at the fullness of their powers fifteen more years in which to do our work.

What use are you going to make of these fifteen years?

OUR idea of a home is one both PRACTICAL and ARTISTIC. By careful thought we manage to instill certain INDIVIDUALITY into each home.

It quite frequently happens that the PROSPECTIVE BUILDER'S IDEAS and PURSE do not correspond. In such cases our PRACTICAL knowledge comes to the rescue, and often where others have hopelessly FAILED, WE SUCCEED.

We build homes from the modern one-room plastered bungalow at [illegible] to the most elaborate dwelling. It rests with the INDIVIDUAL entirely, what his home will cost. By concentrating our PURCHASING POWER, combined with our PRACTICAL knowledge, and being in a position to DISCOUNT our BILLS, we can, for a given quality of work, discount our competitors' prices.

We build either by contracts on a fixed fee of 10 per cent. of estimated cost of work, or on our own lots in Los Angeles, Hermosa Beach and San Pedro, on easy terms.

We make no additional charge for our Architectural services if we build, or if we fail to satisfy you both as to price and design.

DECIDE TODAY.
TOMORROWS NEVER COME.

"That's the reason why so many people are paying rent. Yes, they are going to have a home of their own tomorrow, or some future time, but as yet they are paying rent. Why do it, when the same amount that you are now paying for rent will purchase for you an acre or half-acre of rich, sandy loam soil, within 1 1-4 miles of the city limits, 8½ miles from the ocean, and city car line within 4 short blocks, which gives you all the conveniences of the city, and at the same time affords you the joy and independence of suburban life. Now listen. All this is possible at GARDEN ACRES. A $25 to $50 cash payment and $10 per month will make this all a reality.

Daily excursions leave our office at 10:30 a.m. Phone immediately for your reservations.

FOR SALE— Harbor Property.

FOR SALE—
FOUR "GOOD BUYS" at LOS ANGELES HARBOR.

Snap No. 1. 31,000 square feet, with frontage of 245 feet on S. P. R.R., within 2 blocks of municipal docks—probably the largest piece of undivided industrial property at the harbor today. Wide streets bound this property on the east and north. A 16-foot alley runs into the middle of it. The Consolidated Lumber Co., worth over $300,000, adjoins on east side and their future expansion must affect it.

Snap No. 2. 2 full lots on Canal st., Wilmington, the principal thoroughfare to municipal docks. An 80-foot frontage running back to alley.

Snap No. 3. 2 full lots, with 120 feet frontage on the S. P. R.R. and near Pacific Electric R.R., between Long Beach and Wilmington. The coming center of industrial development.

Snap No. 4. 6 full lots, facing two streets, near Seventh st., midway between Wilmington and Long Beach.

This property will probably quadruple in value in a short time, as has been proven around every harbor in the world. The present war and foreign trade—especially with South America—will greatly hasten this increase. An instance of this development is the coming into our harbors within a single month of the 22,000-ton steamships "KROONLAND and FINLAND," plying between New York and the west coast, via the canal, and the entry into the west coast trade of the new Japanese line with the four magnificent steamers.

R.R. frontage values here are greatly increased since the abolishment of switching charges in California. Address MM, box 511, TIMES BRANCH OFFICE.

WE ARE NOT "KNOCKING"
THE PRICE OF CHINO ALFALFA LAND.

If you want the best Chino alfalfa land, all in alfalfa, with water developed and in the more thickly settled portions of the Chino Rancho—you will be lucky to get it at $400 to $600 an acre.

What we are selling is land only a short distance away, not now developed, but which CAN be, and much of which we believe can be made just as productive, just as attractive and just as valuable as the other lands.

The price we are asking is from $125 to $250 an acre; some land with water and planted in alfalfa—a fine stand, on fine land—for $250 an acre.

VERY EASY TERMS makes it possible for a man with not much money to get a toehold on a fine piece of land, develop it into a fine farm, and pay for it. Hogs are great mortgage lifters, and the Chino Rancho is the most profitable locality, we believe, in the whole United States for hog raising. "Corn Belt" not excepted.

It's a short, short way to Chino, almost at the doors of Los Angeles, there, all over the land, and back in less than a day. For arrangements for the trip—

GOOD LAND THE FARMER'S BEST INVESTMENT.

Poor land and doubtful water is dear at any price. You can't sell it—you can't trade it—you can't crop it.

CONSIDER THE INTRINSIC VALUE OF THE SOIL ON PERRIS IRRIGATED FARMS

Compare it with any other good soil in Southern California for all general purposes. It is deep, rich, level and naturally drained. Choicest fruits grow there. Heaviest alfalfa stands are cut six times or oftener every year. Garden crops excel in quality and exceed in quantity. That's why Perris Valley products command best markets. Handsomest herds of dairy cattle are raised there, where dairy pursuits and hog and poultry raising pay big profits.

YET ONLY $150 AN ACRE.
EIGHT YEARS TIME—WATER RIGHTS FREE.

You could pay double and not do as well. These farms have been plowed, have water ready for delivery at once, and they share in one of the largest and most efficient irrigation systems in Southern California. The elevation is 1400 feet. Railroad freight station on the land. $25,000 high school near them. So close to Los Angeles that the trip only takes 2½ hours.

City maps are everywhere, but authentic maps of the country district are hard to find.

I have had my own personal map prepared and printed with a view to assisting the new arrival to immediately get his bearings. It is free.

It shows the vast country tributary to Los Angeles, embracing the four best producing counties in the State. It gives the cities, towns, rivers, mountains, transportation lines, roads and boulevards, with table of distances, elevation, population, etc., of all important points.

To the newcomer it is almost invaluable, as it is geographically correct.

I am prepared to distribute $50,000. Cut out and sign this request and mail. If you are considering buying farm land, ask for my illustrated Perris Farms folder, free.

GOVERNMENT LAND—

SONS AND FATHERS!
Last week two sons were having me help them find VACANT LAND in the same section where their fathers took some land 30 years ago. One has filed, the other expects to file next week in same section, on adjoining land to what his father took many years ago.
Does this PROVE to you that there may be some WELL-LOCATED overlooked LAND, covered-up LAND that we can help YOU obtain in one of the nine ways in which YOU can use YOUR nine rights in getting land? Do you know that you can get LAND in eight days without living on it?
For $10 we will send you lists of STATE LAND in THREE COUNTIES that you may buy NOW, and two County Sectional MAPS showing VACANT U. S. LAND plainly marked on them. These maps are also helpful in finding STATE LAND described in the lists. They have the towns, railroads, wagon roads, streams and other data that is helpful in seeing, selecting and getting YOUR choice. Map alone of any county, $2.50.
Start $10 our way and we'll start lists of STATE LAND in three counties and two County Sectional MAPS showing VACANT U. S. LAND your way, and give you our services until 1916. Will you order TODAY and avoid the summer rush? Write CALIFORNIA STATE LAND INFORMATION BUREAU, Joseph Clark, manager, 1511 K St., Sacramento.

LANDS FOR 2 PARTIES STILL REMAINS OPEN, not taken; magnificent alluvial loam, heavily enriched. Climate is semi-tropical, adapted to the cultivation of dates, grapefruits, oranges, lemons, eucalyptus, alfalfa and all kinds of grains, etc., all of which may be seen growing in this vicinity under the earlier project of the government, where the lands of the same character are now selling for $200 per acre. These lands are within 4 miles of a town on railroad, and 25 miles of a city of 60,000 population. Water for irrigation to be had from canal now built. 20 years' payments. Don't be a pioneer on the desert when you can grab this opportunity in a rich settled community. You will have to act at once and it will bear the investigation. FOR EXCHANGE—

SIFTED, STANDARD VALUES IN ORANGE GROVES, FARMS, UNDEVELOPED GOOD LANDS,
ALFALFA AND RICE LANDS.

Each item in this list represents a sifted value, not trash or trading stock. The owners want good Los Angeles values in exchange.

It will pay owners of Los Angeles property to look this list over carefully. If any item in it looks good to you, please give full particulars in regard to properties offered in your first letter.

TULARE COUNTY ORANGES FOR LOS ANGELES INCOME.

720 acres land, water developed, complete irrigation system, 110 acres in lemons and oranges, best varieties, trees 2 to 8 years old. District 6 weeks earlier than rest of California. Crops for past season sold at 100 per cent higher than Southern California. Pronounced by Prof. Shaw, Horticultural Expert, one of the best tended and most scientifically planted groves in the State. Property is clear. Will exchange for Los Angeles income up to $400,000.

FIFTY-FIVE ACRES for Los Angeles income or Southern California Valencias. 20 acres Washington Navels, 14 years old; 8 acres Valencias, 5 years old; 18 acres grapefruit, 14 years old; 5 acres walnuts. Fine modern bungalow, all buildings including packing-house on the land. Will exchange for Valencia grove in Southern California or for high class apartments or income property in Los Angeles, from $75,000 to $100,000.

TWENTY ACRES NEAR PORTERVILLE—13 acres in Washington Navels, balance in Valencias and family orchard, trees 10 years old, beautiful home, 2 acres in grounds and shrubbery, all buildings, tools, team, etc. One of the show places of Tulare county. Frostless. Want to exchange for apartment house, Long Beach, Venice, Hollywood. Will consider Los Angeles, or bungalow court or small business up to $40,000 to $50,000, and adjust mortgages.

FINE ESTATE, RIPE TO SUBDIVIDE—800 acres, more or less, fine alfalfa and deciduous fruit land, close to city of 8000 population; joins 2 boulevards, 3 railroads, 2 steam lines and one electric line. Has all the advantages of a fine suburban home, or is ready to subdivide. Fenced and cross-fenced hog-tight, pumping plant and gravity water, abundant supply, absolutely level, no waste land, large oak trees, alfalfa cuts from 5 to 7 times, has produced as high as $120 an acre in sugar beets. Property is clear, and would prefer in exchange small property to $50,000 and give long time on balance, or will consider strictly high class business or apartment income in Los Angeles to $100,000.

HERE'S THREE IN A BUNCH—Trade any one of them or all three. Values run from $50 to $250 an acre. Will trade for L. A. income, acreage, subdivision, bungalow courts or apartment houses; prefer west side, Hollywood, Santa Monica or Long Beach.

(a) 211 acres of alfalfa, grain or rice land, in the shallow-water belt of Tulare county. About 4 miles from railroad and adjacent to several thousand acres now in rice. Climatic conditions very favorable. This district produces more No. 1 rice than any other district in the United States. I predict this land in raw state will be selling for $150 in two years, priced now at $75.

(b) 640 acres fine alfalfa land near Blythe, in San Bernardino county, in shallow water belt adjoining Colorado River. Described as good silt land, carrying high sage brush, and adapted to alfalfa and fruits of all kinds.

(c) 140 acres fine land, Central California, in the proven cherry district, also good for prunes, apples and pears. Living stream through land, adjoining places show development of abundant water at shallow depth, most attractive for fruit or dairy ranch. Fine oak trees.

If you want to turn your Los Angeles property into farm lands which seem certain to greatly increase in value—look these over and then investigate them carefully. Remember—the next great rush of population is sure to be to the Pacific Coast, and good lands are bound to grow in value fast.

WHIFFEN ENDS HOT CAMPAIGN.

Confident of Leading at the Primaries Tuesday.

Sebastian Issues Appeal to the Voters.

Other Mayoralty Candidates in Finish Fight.

Six candidates for Mayor, a host of candidates for the Council and a great number of aspirants to the Board of Education and the Board of Freeholders virtually closed their primary campaign activities last night.

Today the headquarters of candidates will be filled with workers arranging the details for getting out the vote on Tuesday. The candidates will have some meetings Monday and Monday night, but the day before election will be more like a calm before the storm of ballots.

President Whiffen ended yesterday's activities with a number of speeches. He has spoken at the rate of ten meetings a day during the closing week of the campaign. Because of the rain and wind last night a damper was put on the street activities of all candidates, but Mr. Whiffen managed to find audiences at the Swedish-American Auditorium, Eighteenth and Flower streets, and at various motion picture theaters.

"The primary campaign waged under my direction has been solely and strictly on Mr. Whiffen's merits as a public servant," said Campaign Manager Snowden last night. "I feel absolutely convinced that he will have a big lead at the primaries, and all of us are certain that he will be the next Mayor. Our organization is complete and we are satisfied that the preliminary work done will be productive of happy results."

The Whiffen organization is said to consist of volunteer workers in every voting precinct in the city.

Tomorrow Mr. Whiffen will return to the industrial district for another series of meetings and in the evening will hold several street meetings, appearing personally to address the voters.

"I have certainly enjoyed the campaign work," said President Whiffen last night, "and it is gratifying to me beyond words to express the cordial way the people of all classes have received my appeals."

SEBASTIAN STATEMENT.

C. E. Sebastian, who has not taken an active part in his own campaign during the trial, but whose organization is still very much intact, issued a statement to voters last night. He said:

"In spite of efforts to hasten the hearing of the charges against me, in order to clear that issue before the primaries, it seems doubtful if the case can be completed in time to reach a verdict before next Tuesday.

"I again assert my innocence of any wrongdoing. I ask your vote at the primary election on the principle that a man is innocent until he has been proved guilty. In the name of fair play I urge that you vote for me and place me on the ballot for the general election in June. By that time my record will have been cleared of the charges which have been made against me, and then I shall merely ask that you weigh the relative merits and qualifications of myself and my political opponent, whoever he may be, to the end that you may select the man best fitted to become the chief executive of Los Angeles.

"If I were not absolutely innocent of the charges that have been brought against me at this eleventh hour, I should not have either the temerity or the conscience to seek the office of Mayor. If my past record for integrity and ability has been such to have enlisted your support before these charges were preferred against me, I ask that you give me that support at this time, withholding judgment as to the truth or falsity of these charges until my side of the case has been heard.

"If the only obstacle to my success in my campaign for the Mayoralty is the clearing up of these charges against me, then I assure you in the sincerity of a clear conscience and clean heart, I shall be the next Mayor of Los Angeles."

FROM CHIEF'S COUNSEL.

Ralph Graham, of counsel for the defense in the Sebastian trial, said last night:

"If the voters of Los Angeles will place the name of C. E. Sebastian upon the ticket as a candidate for Mayor, it will be proven before the day of election that he is absolutely innocent of every charge that has been placed against him."

Satisfied that his campaign has been effectual, Robert M. Allen will devote all of his time Monday to assisting in the preparation for the ballot battle Tuesday.

Monday night he will make a few addresses, but will not attempt to follow the pace he has kept up during the last fortnight.

H. S. McCallum, Clean Sweep candidate, announced last night that 200 meetings had been held by broom wielders during the campaign and that about seventy will be held on Monday when a squad of speakers will sally forth. The voice of Attorney McCallum is wasted away to a whisper, but he says he will whisper to the folks at three meetings Monday night.

Hollywood and Highland Park will be invaded again and the drum corps will be out until midnight Monday.

The Casselman organization will be augmented on Tuesday by a flock of volunteer autos which will carry voters in every precinct. Monday night Mr. Casselman will address two down-town gatherings and will attend two neighborhood rallies.

LATEST SCORE OF VOTES IN SCHOLARSHIP RACE.

Interesting Feature is Showing Made by Many New Contestants and Changes in Position of Others—Magnificent Offer to Boys is Added to Number of Scholarships and Heads this List Today.

THE latest standing of votes of contestants in the great Educational Contest of The Times is given on this page today. It is full of interest, showing how it is possible for boys and girls to enter the campaign right now and speedily make a good showing in the scoring column.

Today's vote report shows cases where boys and girls have not even appeared in previous lists, but who come in this column with a fine showing of ballots. There are great possibilities ahead, for the offer of 20,000 extra votes for each club of five new and old subscriptions for one year, or their equivalent in shorter-term subscriptions, holds good until May 29. This means that all subscriptions turned in by a candidate between April 20 and May 29 will be applicable to this proposition. At the close of the offer the results will be computed and many a candidate will receive substantial boosts by these extra votes.

It is interesting to analyze the vote report today and note how the various candidates who have been appearing since its start have shifted places. There are bound to be most exciting changes in the line-up, and each report will be watched with the most eager interest. From a vast number of sources The Times is receiving commendation for offering such opportunities as it does in this Educational Campaign, and expressions of deep interest in the progress of candidates.

A feature of special note is the entrance of new candidates and the manner in which their friends rally to give them help through subscription contracts and voting coupons.

HERE'S BIG NEWS.

And now for some big news that will be of interest to every boy in the campaign and to hundreds of other boys who have not yet entered the list of active workers.

At the very top of the list of scholarships offered today is a brand new one—one to stir the ambition of every boy. It is a scholarship valued at $550 in the San Diego Army and Navy Academy, and includes room and board. This school has a splendid standing. The prize is one worthy of the most earnest effort and is certain to inspire many boys of Southern California. Some one is sure to win this good prize. You may be the fortunate one if you get in at once and buckle down to earnest work.

So many boys will be deeply interested in this magnificent offer that The Times wants to direct especial attention to it right now. This is just the opportunity for which many a lad would jump.

EXTRA VOTES TODAY.

Every contestant and all their friends should make special note of the fact that today a twenty-vote coupon is printed. This appears in the page advertisement of The Times Educational Contest, on Page 24, Part III. Also note this coupon must be voted on or before May 7.

In this big advertisement will also be found the entrance blank, so that boys and girls who have not yet entered the great campaign may cut it out, fill in their names and addresses and send them in at once. The manager of the contest will see that such applications have immediate attention and will supply the necessary outfits for you to begin work with at once.

It is a pleasure to the contest manager to present in this big advertisement the portraits of a number of the boys and girls who are already entered in the work. From time to time the photographs of other workers will be published. Watch for the news of this campaign. It will be full of interest every day.

PROFITABLE WORK.

Glenn R. Anderson of Pasadena was a contestant in one of the former Educational Contests conducted by The Times. Here is an expression from him as to the advantage of participating in these campaigns:

"Indeed, I am pleased to be able to recommend The Times Scholarship Contest and all that it stands for.

"I spent a very profitable summer, both from a financial and pleasant education standpoint. My scholarship was in the Los Angeles Military Academy, and I derived so much good and pleasure from this school that I returned for another season with it. My Spanish that I learned there secured for me a very nice position in Mexico."

DEVELOPS BUSINESS TACT.

Miss Vida B. Gard was also a contestant in a former contest conducted by this paper. She speaks most interestingly of her experiences in that campaign. Young people who are still considering the matter of entering the present contest should read this letter closely and to their benefit.

"It was in the contest of 1910 that I participated," says Miss Gard. "This was my first real work in and with the business world. It took a good deal of nerve in some instances and a great deal of determination all the time. One finds all sorts and kinds of people to deal with when engaged in such work. I well remember in one case where I called upon a man several times before I received the long-desired subscription. My motto was 'Never give up.'

"One not only gets many helpful experiences and business ideas, but many lasting friendships are formed in this way. These friends are people who are really worth more in the end than the money or scholarship received for your earnest labor.

"I was fortunate in getting a musical scholarship in a local conservatory. I have been unable since completing my year to continue further. My school work has been too heavy to allow me to keep up my music study. I am now in Normal School and find my time still very full. I hope some day to go further on. I receive a great deal of pleasure from my music, just for my own personal enjoyment.

"The contests are a wonderful help to young people who could in no other way seek the desired end. I am sure any boy or girl entering this contest will find it very nice work. There are many funny experiences, and some very pathetic ones—but on the whole it is quite enjoyable.

"For those who find it impossible to reach or climb to the first place, I want to say, don't be discouraged. You may gain just as much or more real value from your experiences as those who are numbered at the head of the list."

CAMPAIGN NEWS.

Notwithstanding the excitement and distraction from campaign affairs, caused by the big parades yesterday, and the coincident festivities, there was much action in The Times' great Educational Contest. Boys and girls had freedom from school duties and they made their time count in winning votes through securing subscription contracts.

Phillip Johnstone of No. 2022 West Thirty-first street is a new lad in the race, but his first showing is highly creditable. It appears he will make a lively campaign and will quickly forge ahead.

Miss Alpha Prindle of Glendale has a substantial increase in her vote standing—and more in sight.

Earl Stanley jumps from a voting score of 2000, way up the list, showing a fine lot of hustling during the past few days. You want to watch this score.

Alvin Goodale of Pasadena also climbed upward in the vote-standing column with very satisfying results, showing how it is possible to change your position materially with only one week's work.

Bessie Jones, the Moneta girl, who is in the campaign with a firm determination to be found in the list of winners, sends in a fine showing of contracts, and her friends are piling up the coupon votes for her.

Earl Hazel is a new entrant from Anaheim, where he will find a rich field for his work. He is 17 years old and will graduate from the Anaheim High School in 1917. His father is a druggist of Anaheim. We may expect fine reports from Earl as the campaign progresses.

FRIENDS HELPING.

Friends of Edith Strain of No. 249 West Twenty-fifth street send in a fine lot of voting coupons for her score. During the ensuing week readers of The Times may look for good news from this candidate.

William Odemar, a new contestant from the Sentous-street school, showed his earnestness of purpose yesterday by getting two subscription contracts and placing himself in the active workers' class. He is certain to be heard from early and often during the campaign.

Raymond C. Olson of No. 1135 Wall street started in the scholarship campaign yesterday. He has been attending business college and wants to secure more schooling on that line. He is after a business college scholarship in The Times campaign. His first day's report gives a jump of no score at all to 8750 votes. This shows what opportunities are open for the boy or girl who will enter the contest right now.

Miss Fannie Steinberg, whose address is Box 303, R.F.D. No. 2, Los Angeles, is a High School student in the commercial course who joined the campaign forces yesterday. She will be heard from next week.

Other new candidates who enrolled yesterday are Glenn Smith of No. 804 North Orange Grove avenue, Pasadena; Floyd Bradford, No. 313 Mariposa avenue, Sierra Madre; Misses Eulla Chamberlain of No. 214 South Broadway and Elizabeth Gibbons of No. 602 West Sixth street, Santa Ana; Harold Holdegraff of No. 2117 C street, and Marvin Morrison of No. 1024 East Washington street, Santa Ana. All of these candidates are High School students.

Leo Rudolph of No. 400 West Thirty-third street is a 17-year-old student in the Polytechnic High School who is interested in telegraphy. He will make a lively campaign, has a wide acquaintance and the ability to hustle.

VALLEY RESPONDS.

Cecil Aynes and Helen Wilson, both Imperial Valley candidates, added to their vote scores by yesterday's reports.

Louis Martin of Arlington in today's report jumps from a credit of 500 votes to one of more than 10,000, this simply being another illustration of how easy it is to change your place to a good position by earnest work.

Sam Glassman of No. 1234 Ionia street, city, shows "good stuff" and will have further reports of interest to the public. Sam has received help from his friends in various quarters and was pleased yesterday to receive a nice bunch of coupons from Col. W. G. Schreiber of the California National Guard.

Louis Alexander of Long Beach sends in some good business that puts him ahead in the scoring column. He has good prospects ahead.

Harry McDonald of San Bernardino sends in three new subscriptions and two renewals for his first showing of work. He gives promise of quickly running up a score of votes that will be gratifying to himself and his friends.

ENGLISH CELEBRITIES.

The Beresford Brothers.

[London Tit-Bits:] Several good stories are related by Lord Charles Beresford in his memoirs, recently published. One refers to the memorable election to York City when he had for opponent, Sir Christopher Furness (afterward Lord Furness,) and his brothers, Lords William and Marcus Beresford, went down to help him in what proved to be a very fierce contest.

"Lord Marcus accompanied me to a meeting," writes Lord Charles, "and I told him that he must make a speech. 'I can't,' he said; 'I don't know what to say.' I told him to begin, because he was sure to be interrupted, and then, being an Irishman, he would certainly find something to say. Lord Marcus thereupon rose to his feet, and a voice immediately shouted, 'Who are ye?' It was enough. The fire kindled. 'Who are we?' cried Lord Marcus. 'I'll tell you we are. We are three brothers, and our names are Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego. And we have come here to put out the burning fiery Furness!'"

They did, but only just, for Sir Christopher Furness lost by only eleven votes.

Shakespeare a Catholic.

[Philadelphia Ledger:] Shakespeare was a Roman Catholic. Recent researches have proved this beyond the shadow of a doubt, according to the Rev. Sigourney Fay, of the Catholic University of America, at Washington, who lectured recently on "The Renaissance and English Literature" to a large audience in the Catholic Girls' High School, Nineteenth and Wood streets.

"Recent researches have made known to us so much of the private life of William Shakespeare that we now can affirm with assurance that he was a Catholic and that he went to a Protestant church only to save his skin," Father Fay said. "His father was a good Catholic, and he, too, was a firm believer in the faith, so the fact that he went to a Protestant church to avoid persecution was not a very grievous sin.

"He never mentions a Protestant clergyman in his plays, except to make fun of him. He never mentions a Catholic priest, except with sympathy. Moreover, he shows a deep knowledge of the church and a feeling for her which could be the possession only of members of the church. Persons may say that in Henry VIII he holds up the Catholic Cardinal, Wolsey, to censure. But Henry VIII is not really a production of Shakespeare's at all. In it he collaborated with a heretic named Marlowe, and the attitude toward Wolsey in the play cannot be considered Shakespeare's.

"Shakespeare was an artist in the Catholic and Romantic sense, and he made the last stand against the sterile classicism brought in by the Renaissance, which ruled from his time until the opening of the Nineteenth century. One might as well try to make Satan Christian as the Renaissance."

WHAT COMES FROM IT?

The Continual Hurry to Do Business Lest One Fall Behind in the Procession.

[New York Evening Sun:] The Gentleman from Jupiter stopped a Hurrying Citizen and spoke to him with mild surprise.

"Pardon my curiosity," said the Gentleman from Jupiter, "but would you mind telling me why you are are hurrying so fast?"

The citizen stopped in amazement.

"Why, to get down to the office, of course," he replied, mopping his brow.

"Ah! And what do you do at the office?"

"Do? Why, I work. Business, you know."

"Yes, but what good does that do you?"

"Good! It buys me food and clothing and—and things."

"Quite so. But why hurry about it?"

"My dear man, if I didn't hurry I wouldn't get to the office on time."

"I see. And do you hurry like this every day?"

"Sure. Every day, every night. Everything is hurry nowadays. You've got to hustle to keep up with the procession."

"And if you fell behind the procession you would die, is that it?"

"Well, perhaps I wouldn't die exactly, but—it wouldn't be good business."

"Ah, yes. And good business, of course, is the main object of life?"

"Certainly. Everybody who's up to date knows that."

"I am beginning to understand. But tell me, after it is all over what have you got to show for it?"

The Hurrying Citizen looked at the Gentleman from Jupiter with a growing suspicion. "Humph!" he said, "I guess you're one of these cranks that go around trying to upset things. You'll have to excuse me, I'm busy."

And the Citizen took a flying leap into a passing trolley.

KRUTTSCHNITT SCORES SYSTEM.

Asks Justice for Railroads in Labor Cases.

Subordinate One Board and Exalt Other, He Says.

Strong Suggestions Feature Open Letter.

Suggesting that the Federal Board of Mediation and Conciliation should be either co-ordinated with or subordinated to the Interstate Commerce Commission in the interest of justice to the railroads in labor disputes, President Sproule of the Southern Pacific made public a letter, yesterday, which Julius Kruttschnitt, chairman of the Executive Committee of the company, wrote to Chairman Frank P. Walsh of the United States Commission on Industrial Relations, under date of April 14.

Though Mr. Kruttschnitt's letter is, ostensibly, an amplification of answers which he gave to questions at the Industrial Relations hearing in Chicago, April 10, its promulgation at this time is significant in the light of the Board of Mediation and Conciliation's decision Friday in the wage case of the western enginemen.

In his letter, Mr. Kruttschnitt draws a comparison between the operation of the Newlands act, under which the Board of Mediation and Conciliation came into existence, and the Canadian Industrial Disputes Investigation Act, to the disadvantage of the former. Under the Canadian act, an appeal to the mediation board is compulsory and strikes and walkouts are automatically enjoined until the board can investigate the facts.

TIT FOR TAT.

One strong point made by Mr. Kruttschnitt for the co-ordination with or subordination of the Board of Mediation and Conciliation to the Interstate Commerce Commission is that thereby the same authority responsible for increasing experiences of the carriers would be made equally responsible for providing revenue to meet expenditures in the wage line, either as a result of mediation or other activities.

Mr. Kruttschnitt says, in his letter:

"One of the questions asked me when I appeared before your honorable commission in Chicago, on Saturday, April 10, was what could be done to settle labor disputes and maintain industrial peace in the future. I should like, with your permission, to explain my answer in some detail.

"The act of Congress, approved June 15, 1913, known as The Newlands act, providing for mediation, arbitration, and conciliation in controversies between certain employers and employees, is a great improvement on the Erdman act, which it supersedes, but it relates to employees engaged in train service or train operation only of common carriers engaged in interstate commerce. Its usefulness would be greatly increased if it were made to apply to all railway employees engaged in the interstate business of the employer, including those engaged in keeping in repair cars, locomotives, appliances, machinery, track, roadbed, and other instrumentalities of interstate commerce. The Board of Mediation and Conciliation, appointed by the President, under the act, has proven useful in maintaining industrial peace, but as it frequently results, as a consequence of invoking the services of this board, that railway expenses are increased, it is very important to the carriers that the board should be closely co-ordinated with, or better still, subordinated to the Interstate Commerce Commission, so that the same authority responsible for increasing expenses of the carriers should at the same time incur a corresponding responsibility for providing revenue to meet the expenditures. The reasonableness of such a provision is apparent when the complete control of revenues, and almost equally complete control of expenditures by government at the present time, is considered.

"The Newlands act provides that when a controversy arises either party may apply to the Board of Mediation and Conciliation for its adjustment, and the board may offer its services to the parties in controversy where interruption to public service is imminent. There is no obligation, however, other than a sense of obligation to the public, on either employer or employee to submit differences to mediation. Instances have occurred where mediation and arbitration have been stubbornly refused, with utter disregard of the public's interest and rights, and the act offers no remedy. This defect could apparently be remedied, as is done in the Canadian Industrial Disputes Investigation Act of 1907, which makes a combination, lockout, or strike illegal until the questions at issue shall have been thoroughly investigated and made public; and there should be a provision that where the board offers its services for investigation, mediation and conciliation, it shall be obligatory on and not optional to the parties to submit their differences so that the public may judge the dispute intelligently.

DESIRABLE.

"The desirable feature in the Canadian act is that it compels investigation and publicity, and peace pending investigation; and paves the way, as the Newlands act does, to arbitration, which, however, is optional with the parties to the dispute.

"Reports of the satisfactory operation of the Canadian act, and a conviction that like benefits would accrue through the adoption of some of its provisions in the United States, induced me to send an assistant to Canada in September, 1914, to learn at first hand from the managers of Canadian railways, and from the Canadian Department of Labor, their experiences with the operation of the act. The opinion alike of railway executives and of the Commissioner of Labor was that their disputes and investigation act was satisfactory and very successful in preventing lockouts and strikes. In discussing the results of our observations with the executive heads of some of our important railway systems the opinion was expressed, without exception, that the provisions of the Canadian act were most helpful in the interests of employers, employees, and the general public, the three parties to every industrial disturbance."

SIZZLING HATS CROWN MODISH

Fairs' Psychological Effect is Torrid Headgear.

No Matter What You Wear if It's Just a Panama.

Frantic Bands Also Leading in Sartorial Panic.

All the world is talking psychology. Maybe it's the psychological influence of the bill board that insolently inquires, "Ever had a fit?" when a new make of shirt is marketed. Maybe it's the psychological effect of the color of roses a man sends a girl. But one manifestation is a lap ahead of all the rest. It's the psychological influence of the Panama-Pacific Exposition upon man's headgear.

The hat this year fairly sizzles with its own importance. It doesn't matter what's under your hat so long as the hat you're under is a Panama. Natives, pseudo-natives and tourist all wear, want to wear, or ought to want to wear Panamas at both expositions. Even an April shower doesn't take the starch out of a Panama devotee's enthusiasm. It seems merely to have the same effect on the hats as on mushrooms—they spring up the more plentifully. The Panama hat emerged rather prematurely this year, the season ordinarily extending from April to September. But this is its banner year. Never in the history of be-hatted mankind has the Panama hat received such flattering homage.

All the rage.
Everybody's wearing a Panama.

When the Panama hat was forcibly introduced into the United States ten years ago its lightness and flexibility won it instant favor, but this had but a short run because it was made in only the conservative shapes, as the Optimo block and Fedora. But under the tutelage of style-makers the Panama was made to reproduce whatever felt hat happened to be in vogue. Since then it has been busily crowding off of milord's hat-rack all other chapeaux whose genealogy is connected with the hay-stack.

NOT ENOUGH OF 'EM.

From the Atlantic to the Pacific the Panama hat panic has swept with such gusto that there is a shortage among producers. A leading hatter estimates that 1200 dozen men's Panamas are sold here in a season, and that this summer it will be 200 per cent. more. The head of a hat department, handling women's as well as men's Panamas, says about $25,000 worth are sold in that store in a season. And there are several stores here as large. The most popular women's size is 4½, the most popular price $5, and the most popular style a high, tapering crown with a narrow brim finished with a pencil curl. It is only conservatively swagger to bind the crown of your Panama with the official colors of the San Francisco exposition—flag pole red, exposition-blue and wall-gold. It is considered very modish to wear a cravat of the same design and color as your hat band. Such a display would not detain the eyesight as did the accouterments of a movie "matinee idol," who made a human aurora borealis on Broadway last week. The coat of his green suit confessed concealing a pink shirt, his tan shoes were topped by orange-colored hosiery his hands that swung a fashionable cane were encased in white chamois gloves and even his hatband and tie took up the quarrel. The one formed a coalescence of blue, yellow and green, while the other convicted itself in stripes of Indian red and yellow.

It was scarcely more deplorable than the frequent appearance of a man in a Panama after sundown. When the sunset fades "beat it" with that Panama. It is so ordained by every fashion censor. Westerners are sometimes negligent, but in the East were a man to appear in anything but a felt or silk hat after sundown, he would score one in the social error column.

HOW THEY'RE MADE.

Erroneously enough, it is the general opinion that Panama hats are made in Panama. The fact is they have always been made in Ecuador, Peru and Guatemala and because Panama was once the main distributing point of Western South America, at that time, the hats became known as Panamas. For 275 years Ecuadorians have woven these hats, of toquilla straw, the product of a fanshaped palm that grows to a height of six to ten feet. At a height of five feet the young leaves are cut before they expand, the veins removed and after being dipped frequently in boiling water, they are exposed to the sun for natural bleaching. With extreme care the straw is then selected, the value dependent on the color, number of strands from each leaf, length of leaves and thickness, and is made into hats, the coarser straw being used for baskets. Only between sunset and sunrise, when the air is moist, can the weaving be done, and only the wild toquilla straw plants give the necessary qualities for hat weaving. From 7 to 12 cents a day is the average price paid a laborer. From three to six months, working from four to five hours a day, are necessary to complete a hat of the best grade.

The hats are shipped in great crates to New York or Philadelphia, where the bleaching is done. From two to three months they are placed in vats and then hung on pegs to dry, after which they are blocked according to the season's styles.

HIS A NEW ONE
In a restaurant.
Some men get new lids there instead of at the hatter's.

A factory-made product is easily recognized by its sewed edge, while the hand-woven hat has a finished edge.

The life of a Panama hat depends on environment. In Arizona, for instance, the alkali air dries and seems to eat the straw. The toquilla grass carries an oil and when this is gone, the hat deteriorates exactly as rubber does. For preservation in a very dry climate, it is advisable to throw a damp handkerchief over a Panama hat at night.

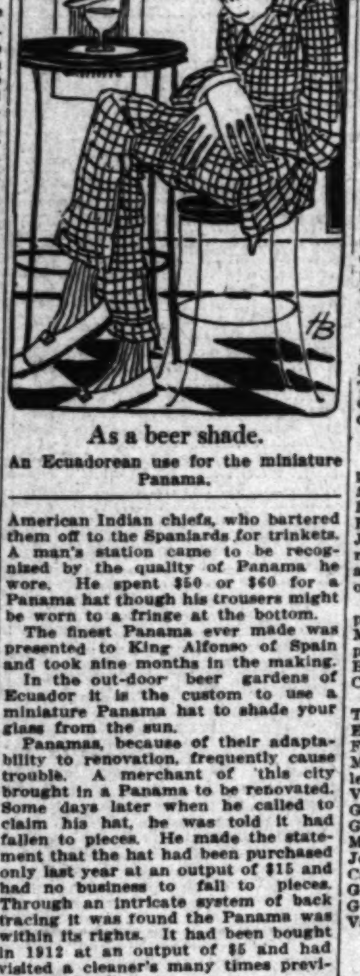
THE FINEST HATS.

The Panama hat that sold at $50 ten years ago sells at $20 today, due to the increase in the industry and skilled applicants for the weaving. There are, however, only sixty persons in the world who can make the finest Panama—the Monte Christo—which takes twenty-four days to weave and costs from $20 to $100.

Several years ago Japan began exporting a so-called Panama hat. It was taken up by the United States government at the behest of some who thought the hats were made of rice paper. But it was found to be a species of fibre that is grown in the swamps of Japan and is slippery enough for a fly to break his leg on. The Japanese importation is known by the knot in the center of the hat's crown.

People are often "bunked" by purchasing Panamas in Mexico under the impression that they were made there. Panamas were never made in Mexico and are only cheaper there because no duty is imposed upon their importation.

Panamas were first worn by South American Indian chiefs, who bartered them off to the Spaniards for trinkets. A man's station came to be recognized by the quality of Panama he wore. He spent $50 or $60 for a Panama hat though his trousers might be worn to a fringe at the bottom.



As a beer shade.
An Ecuadorean use for the miniature Panama.

The finest Panama ever made was presented to King Alfonso of Spain and took nine months in the making.

In the out-door beer gardens of Ecuador it is the custom to use a miniature Panama hat to shade your glass from the sun.

Panamas, because of their adaptability to renovation, frequently cause trouble. A merchant of this city brought in a Panama to be renovated. Some days later when he called to claim his hat, he was told it had fallen to pieces. He made the statement that the hat had been purchased only last year at an output of $15 and had no business to fall to pieces. Through an intricate system of back tracing it was found the Panama was within its rights. It had been bought in 1912 at an output of $5 and had visited a cleaner's many times previous to its collapse.

Hatters have a complaint. There are those who are passing the hat shops by to obtain a new "lid" at a restaurant. It is not a riddle.

Earned Her Cat.

[Boston Advertiser:] Director John S. Lyon of the Holyoke Chamber of Commerce tells of a small girl who was very desirous of possessing a beautiful cat she had seen. It so happened that it was necessary for the child to undergo a minor surgical operation, and she was promised that, if she would be very good, she would have the cat. Mr. Lyon says that when the child began to "come to," after the operation, she looked up at the nurse and said: "Gee, this is a bum way to get a cat."

EXPOSITION OF SCHOOL WORK.

Sixty-day Fiesta Opens in a Few Weeks.

Educational Programmes to be Featured.

Youth and its Accomplishments the Specialties.

A juvenile exposition and fiesta showing exhibits from all city schools and featuring many interesting educational programmes will be held at the old Normal School under the direction of the Board of Education and the auspices of the Million Club. It will be opened June 10 and will run for sixty days.

This is the first 1915 exposition put into the field by Los Angeles to compete with the expositions at San Francisco and it will be given over to the children of the city schools. Youth and its accomplishments will be its main feature, according to the clubwomen.

The Executive Committee, appointed by the Board of Education, stated yesterday that this exposition will be one of the most interesting educational events ever staged here.

The Board of Supervisors has voted a sum of money to the Million Club to be used to perfect the exposition and to show the school work off to the best advantage.

PROGRAMMES.

Programmes of music, tableaus, and lectures by educators, will be given during the sixty days.

The exposition will make its first formal bow to Los Angeles tomorrow in the beautiful floral parade of the Fiesta de las Flores. A unique float, carrying the spirit of the exposition, will be entered by the Million Club. It will represent a school room in active work, with desks, blackboards, pupils and teachers. A garden, with children at work, will form the outer border. The float will be decorated in wild mustard. The children of the Alpine-street school will ride on the float.

One of the most interesting features of the exhibit will be a California bungalow, which is to be erected and which will be furnished entirely by things made by school children. Many of the high school girls are at work on curtains, table linens, etc., and the boys will make the furniture. All these things will be in the California mission style.

Unique jewelry, manufactured at Manual Arts High School, will have a prominent place in the exhibition rooms. San Pedro Marine High School will exhibit a steam launch, built and operated by the students. An automobile truck, made by the students of the Polytechnic Evening High School and now in use for school purposes, will be entered. A display of photography will also be shown by this school.

The work of the subnormal schools for defective children, of the deaf schools and of special schools, will be given great attention by the teachers, as these lines are all new in educational work. Nature study, painting, domestic science, music, and gardening will be shown in all the different phases in which they are taught to the children.

The N.E.A., while traveling from San Francisco to San Diego will make its headquarters at the Normal School. The Million Clubwomen yesterday declared that many fair-goers will be drawn to this juvenile exposition.

THE WORKERS.

The Executive Committee comprises F. A. Bouelle, chairman; Miss May Gearhart, Miss Edna Lowd, L. L. Gallup, C. F. Beswick, Miss Irma Hutchinson, Miss Katherine Carr, C. J. Fox and B. F. Sanford. Appointments have also been made to cover all the different departments and lines of work to be shown.

The Board of Commissioners, appointed by the Million Club, includes Mrs. Anna Myers, Mrs. Lulu Westpheling, Mrs. L. L. Roome, Mrs. A. B. Davis Mrs. M. H. Pehr, Mrs. W. C. Tyler and Mrs. C. S. Foltz.

The patrons and patronesses are The Mayor, Mrs. Mary Banning, L. E. Behymer, Mrs. Berthold Baruch, F. W. Blanchard, Mrs. O. P. Clark, Mrs. Herbert Cornish, Harry Chandler, Herbert Cornish, Miss Lucretia del Valle, Miss Mary Foy, William May Garland, Miles Gregory, Mrs. George Goldsmith, Mrs. Chas. Farwell Edson, Mrs. Willetts Hole, Mrs. Fred Hooker Jones, H. H. Mines, Mrs. D. C. McCan, Mr. and Mrs. John S. McGroarty, Mrs. C. A. Rendell, Mrs. George Drake Ruddy and Mrs. W. J. Variel.

No Sympathy for Singer.

[Philadelphia Record:] It is safe enough in Georgia for a pretty woman to sing a song at some one in the audience, but when the singer is a man, and the song tends to ridicule the man, the jury has little sympathy for the songster-actor.

This was proved when Silk Bates was placed on trial on the charge of assault with intent to murder W. N. Stovall. Stovall had recovered sufficiently from his injuries to appear in court and testify against his assailant. It was suggested that the only way to give the jury a fair idea of the cause of attack would be for Stovall to sing the song. Considerable amusement was caused by the lines of the song.

The jury retired and after a few minutes returned with a verdict of not guilty."

At Santa Monica.

DOES COUNCIL EXIST? COURTS WILL DECIDE.

Who is boss of Santa Monica?

Some citizens of the seaside city, including members of the City Council, believe the said Council has something to say about municipal affairs. There are others, however, who doubt the present authority and importance of the Council and a few of the doubters even go so far as to doubt the legal existence of that body. Just how serious these doubts may be none of the doubters is willing to state, but they do admit that in the near future the courts will be asked to settle the matter.

In case the matter does come up for a legal decision, it will be over a measly little improvement contract amounting to about $10,000 which is alleged to have been let by the Santa Monica City Council to the Joy Construction Company of Los Angeles.

C. J. Walper, secretary of the construction company, which has the contract for the improvement of Garfield avenue, refused yesterday to comment on the case, but A. J. Sherer, attorney for the company, admitted a test case was contemplated; this admission coming by way of a statement that he "never discussed pending or contemplated cases out of court."

It is understood that for the sake of argument and, incidentally to settle all doubt as to payment for the work, the Joy company will bring suit contending the ratification by the Legislature of the charter amendments has left Santa Monica entirely without a governing body. In the meantime, other citizens of Santa Monica are also waiting to find out who is boss.

PORT ITEMS.

The steamer Harvard, which returned to port last night for repairs, after having shipped a giant comber off Point Vicente, will resume her schedule Tuesday. The damage to the Harvard will amount to about $5000, mostly on carpets, bedding and furnishings. Two ventilators and the companionway on the forecastle head were swept away and a great hole stove in on the port side of the gallery salon. The water which poured in flooded nearly every compartment, even reaching the dining-room aft on the lower deck.

The steamer Siskiyou, which arrived this morning from Portland, came nearly losing her deckload, which shifted about four feet in the storm. Capt. Hansen reported that the storm was the worst he had ever experienced on this coast.

Steam schooners sailing for northern ports today to reload lumber were the Willamette, George W. Fenwick and Northland for Portland, Fifield for Brooking's Landing, Katherine for Eureka, and Mandalay for Crescent City.

Mixed Nationalities in the War.

[New York Evening Post:] A Prussian infantryman was standing guard over a litle group of prisoners—a motley lotfi including French, English, African, Turcos, Gurkhas, Sikhs and what not. A Uhlan came riding by. "Well, well comrade," cried the Uhlan, pulling up his horse and looking over the collection, "well, well, what the devil sort of mixed company is this you're keeping, anyway?"

SAY OFFICERS KILLED A MAN.

Tucson Deputies Charged with Mexican's Death.

Baca-Float Land Grant is in the Courts Again.

Former Negro Soldier Denies He Fought with Villa.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

TUCSON (Ariz.) April 29.—Frank W. Moore and Robert Fenter, former deputies of the Sheriff's office, charged with the murder of Hilario Leon, have pleaded not guilty and will have a formal hearing May 7. Hilario Leon was one of the three brothers maltreated near Greaterville, where the officers are charged with having used methods of the Inquisition in their desire to secure a confession from the Mexicans, who had been suspected of horse stealing. According to the testimony of his brothers, Hilario was the first victim and was shot down after the trio had protested they knew nothing of the matter on which they had been interrogated. Then a rope was placed around the neck of Francisco Leon and tossed over the limb of a tree, the deputies being charged with pulling him up a foot from the ground as they demanded information, especially concerning a fourth suspect, Encinas, a brother-in-law of Francisco. After three such elevations Francisco was dropped to the ground insensible. Jose Leon claimed to have been treated in about the same manner. Late reports from Greaterville are to the effect that the last named is not expected to survive his injuries.

The Naco-Cananea division of the Southern Pacific again is out of commission, on account of bridges burned by Mexican bandits, though the main line from Nogales to Guaymas is still in operation.

ANOTHER LAND FIGHT.

Still another legal fight has been started against the execution of a decision turning over the Baca-Float grant to its claimants, who are said to have notified the settlers that they will not fulfill an agreement, said to have been made last year, to sell the settlers their holdings at a nominal figure. Some of these settlers have been in actual possession of the ground for twenty-six years and some of the protestants were born on the grant, where they have lived for a half-century, spending thousands of dollars for improvements before they even heard of an adverse claimant. It is charged that the statute of limitations should run in favor of the occupants. The grant is an American one, given in 1864 in lieu of land surrendered in Northern New Mexico.

PIONEERS WANT A STOVE.

The Arizona Pioneers' Historical Society has appealed to the Legislature for an appropriation of $25 for the expenses of the next two years. The society maintains headquarters in Tucson, wherein there is keen necessity for better fittings and even for a stove.

The Miami City Council has called a bond election, to be held June 11, for the purpose of passing on an issue of $30,000 for municipal improvement, including a sewer system, a municipal water plant and a municipal electric plant and for the building of bridges and the betterment of streets.

FLIPPER DENIES IT.

In a letter to the Tucson Citizen, H. O. Flipper, a negro, formerly a lieutenant in the United States army and a graduate of West Point, denies a story that has been given broad circulation to the effect that to him must be accredited the successful plans of Pancho Villa. Flipper, who is an expert on Mexican law and on the Spanish language, states that he has not been in Mexico since March, 1912, and he denies absolutely any connection with Villa or with "the wholesale brigandage now masquerading in Mexico under the name of revolution."

Part of the staff of the Carnegie desert laboratory will spend much of the early summer in California, near Barstow, in the study of the flora of the Mojave desert.

SOME BEAR KILLER.

J. H. T. Cosper, who has a cattle ranch on the Blue River in Northern Greenlee county, tells that, though he never started on a real bear hunt, in the last thirty years he has killed no less than 124 bears, including several huge silvertips, one of which weighed 800 pounds.

One of the latest pleasant pranks at the university was the kidnapping of President Howard of the freshman class, who was taken from his bed, handcuffed and hidden for a day in a mining tunnel.

In San Francisco lately, occurred the death of Millard G. Seeley, a major in the National Guard and an engineer in the employ of the Southern Pacific Company. The funeral was held in Tucson with all military ceremonial. He was a Californian by birth and was a member of the Seventh California Volunteers in the Spanish war. A sister, Mrs. William Woodmansee, was a resident of Los Angeles.

Places for Mirrors.

[Boston Advertiser:] Place a mirror over the fireplace to reflect the room.

Place one between the windows at the end of a long, narrow room to emphasize the light there.

Place one where it will reflect a charming glimpse of the garden through a window opposite it.

Place one in the hall opposite the entrance into the drawing-room or living-room to give a sense of spaciousness.

Place one on a dark wall where it will catch the light.

Place one in a bedroom where it will reflect the mirror of the dressing table.

Remember that flowers in front of a mirror are twice as attractive as flowers placed against a wall.

Enlisting for Wages.

[Boston Advertiser:] The suggestion ironically offered by Dr. David Starr Jordan that men should insist upon union wages if they are going to take chances of being killed would appear to have been in the minds of some of the Canadian volunteers if a well-known Bostonian has been correctly informed. The Bostonian who recently visited Canada found in circulation there a story that not only from the United States and the South, but even from Europe, men who planned to enlist have been going to Canada rather than directly to England because in Canada the troops get $1 a day, while only a few cents would be paid if they enlisted in England.

Weekly Review.

SPECULATIVE TENDENCIES REVIVE IN WALL STREET.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, May 1.—Speculative tendencies in stocks revived during the week, but with less prudence and restraint toward the end of that period. War orders were again the main incitement, but to this influence was added the conclusive evidence of the improved investment condition and the benefits thus promised by supplying capital needs.

The most striking example was the consummation of New York Central's sale of $100,000,000 of debenture bonds, the largest issue of corporate securities ever placed in the United States.

Quick sale of Baltimore and Ohio's $40,000,000 or 4½ per cent. notes proved the abundant resources of the money market.

Announcement of several long-deferred railroad reorganization plans was taken as additional evidence of the increased facilities of The recent course of bank lo so was taken to prove a process absorption of previous underwr of bonds. Bond market revival— April turnover was the largest for month since December of 190 one of the most significant sions of financial confidence yet ma fested. Free offerings from abr of both bonds and stocks were rea taken here. These and further ports of gold made little impre on depressed foreign exchange ra Active negotiations continued for ditional foreign credits in this m ket.

Steel trade reports were ho and confident in the main, alth actual expansion in demand is mittedly moderate. United S Steel's rapidly expanding earnings the successive months of the quarter were made grounds for hopes. The excellent wheat prospect was marred by defic moisture for the East.

Fact and Comment.

his own full share at all times toward keeping the city in a decent condition. Common sense will show him that his prospects for marketing any property he may wish to dispose of will almost certainly be enhanced in proportion to the care he bestows upon it.

A sort of collective common sense appears to be what is most needed in doing away with municipal slovenliness. If every property owner in Los Angeles were suddenly to be filled with that zeal for neatness which so many have already displayed, the fame of Los Angeles as an ideal home city would be spread by this year's visitors to the ends of the world. We will get a volume of advertising hitherto unknown, it is true, but some of the things that will be said about us, alas, are hardly likely to redound to our credit.

Not as Advertised.

It will be a shock to many to come out to this beautiful country of ours only to find that Los Angeles has a multitude of weed-choked and rubbish-littered vacant lots, unkempt and run down improvements and miles upon miles of glaring billboards, just like some of the cities they are leaving. Many of those from the cities where civic progress has been marked will look upon conditions here with real scorn. A universal cleaning-up of all the property that has not as yet received proper attention, even at this eleventh hour, would be a genuine business stroke upon the part of the people of Los Angeles as a whole.

There may be those who will consider these comments somewhat harsh in tone. Others will deplore the idea of calling attention at this particular time to the conditions existing. From the point of view of those who have done their part toward making Los Angeles a City Presentable, the first objection is not without logic. Too much praise cannot be given to those who year in and year out have kept their properties in good condition or who have rallied to the cause in response to the numerous appeals to "clean up." It is when one surveys the city as it is and compares it with the city that might be that cynical thoughts arise.

As to the objection about calling attention to the eyesores of the city, it must be plain to everybody that even yet there is time in which to smooth up every ugly place before the main exposition travel gets here. Now is just the time of times to be stirring the careless and lagging property owners to action. If every public-spirited citizen who knows the owner of an unkempt vacant lot, or rundown building or billboard-defaced site, would appoint himself a committee of one to speak his mind or use his powers of persuasion in relation to one or more particular cases, wonders could be accomplished in a week.

And it is also well to remember another thing: Los Angeles is big enough and important enough to be perfectly honest and frank with itself at all times. The sooner we arrive at this conception of our municipal shortcomings the better off we will be and the more likelihood there will be of our inauguarating permanent reforms.

Remarkable Deep Water Salvage.

[Popular Mechanics:] All the bodies that could possibly be reached, as well as the mail and silver bullion on board the sunken Empress of Ireland, have been recovered, as the result of one of the most remarkable feats of deep water salvage ever attempted. When the ship was sunk near the mouth of the St. Lawrence it settled in the soft mud at the bottom of the river, which is 138 feet deep at low tide, and heeled over at a sharp angle. Because of these conditions the divers were compelled to work at times at the unusual depth of 160 feet. In spite of the extremely dangerous character of the work only one accident occurred, but this, unfortunately, resulted in the death of one of the divers.

To familiarize the divers with the arrangement of the ship and the location of the strong box, pasteboard models were made, and the divers were thoroughly schooled with these before being permitted to undertake the work. As a further precaution the first work that was done by the divers after a hole had been cut in the side of the ship was that of bulkheading all flanking doorways and passageways along the route to be followed inside the ship, so that no diver could go astray or get his hose, life line or telephone connections tangled.

Studebaker is Strongest of the Motor Group, with New High Record on Account of Rumors of Dividend Prospects—Banks Expansion in Loans $30,000,000.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, May 1.—In its main aspects today's short session of the stock exchange was largely a repetition of recent days in the sense that a very considerable part of the turnover was again in so-called war stocks and allied shares. Westinghouse and others in that class constituted the most prominent features. Studebaker was strongest of the motor group, with a new high record on rumors of dividend prospects. United States Steel was the only one of the speculative favorites to show relative steadiness, rising to its best in the final dealings. The bank statement was in line with the expectations, showing a large actual cash gain with an expansion of over $30,000,000 in loans, the latter a natural reflection of the week's activity in the stock market. Total sales of stocks amounted to 508,000 shares. The bond market was even more irregular than the stock list, on a minimum of trading. Total sales (par value) aggregated $2,250,000. United States coupon and registered 2s and Panama 3s declined ¼ per cent. on call during the week.

LOS ANGELES STOCK EXCHANGE.

Interest of Brokers on Fiesta Rather than Trading—Union Oil Shows Falling Off.

There was comparatively light trading on the single session of the Stock Exchange yesterday, the interest of the brokers, like that of everyone else in Los Angeles, being centered on the Fiesta pageant. Union was in some demand, though weaker, opening at 61.00 and closing at 60.25, with sales of sixty-five shares. Five shares of Associated changed at 38.25, this stock showing a strong tone. Los Angeles Investment was slightly firmer, selling at 4 in small amounts. United Oil changed hands at 22¾. The regular morning call of the exchange tomorrow will begin at 10:15 and last until 11 o'clock on account of the Fiesta events.

COMMERCIAL.

A decided decline in the price of poultry, particularly chickens, has been registered through the week. The market on broilers which was from 28 to 30 cents has dropped to 20 to 23 cents as the offering of dealers to producers. For fryers they are paying from 24 to 25 cents and for broilers they are paying from 20 to 23 cents. Stags are only bringing 6 cents, the lowest they have been in months. Hens are selling from 15 to 18 and turkeys from 15 to 20 according to age and quality. Ducks are selling from 15 to 18, the latter price holding on the young ducks. Squabs are worth $2 per dozen.

On the market of fruits and vegetables there were few changes from the day previous. Apples showed firmness and advances are looked for early in the week. Receipts were 1014 boxes. There are less than twenty cars of apples left in storage according to one of the principal handlers and these are going so fast that another three weeks will see the market bare of the fruit, marking the end of a short season despite the heavy crop that was harvested. Cherry receipts this week are expected to bring the market as low as 5 cents a pound. First apricots are also looked for from Imperial and peaches are reported as ripening fast.

Staple articles were unchanged through the list. Egg receipts were 665 cases and sales light, holding the market at 22. Butter arrivals were 46,610 pounds and the demand was firm. Cheese arrivals were 3980 pounds. Trading in cheese has not carried off all the stock of eastern in storage as yet.

Potato receipts were 1087 sacks. There is considerable stock coming in by truck and quotations by the hundredweight will be established on new spuds in the next few days instead of the prevailing box measure. Onion receipts were 530 crates and 336 sacks. No change in the onion situation is reported. Bean arrivals were 16 sacks; sweets 2?? sacks and the market on these is weak, not on account of surplus, but because of poor stock.

MAY WHEAT ADVANCES.

DELIVERIES ON CONTRACTS ARE SOME HEAVIER.

Stocks Promise Falling Off and Close is Nervous—Corn Shows Strength at the Outset—Warehouse Tenders of Oats Amount to Three Million Bushels.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

CHICAGO, May 1.—Although deliveries on May contracts proved to be heavier than looked for the wheat market today scored an advance, helped by the fact that the deliveries went into strong hands and that stocks promised a falling off. The close was nervous at ⅜ to 1¾ above last night. Corn gained ⅛ to ⅜@1 net; oats, ⅜ to 1⅛@1¼, and provisions 5 to 15. Corn displayed strength from the outset. Notwithstanding that warehouse tenders of oats amounted to 3,000,000 bushels as much as for wheat and corn together, pit offerings of oats were quickly absorbed with more wanted. Deliveries of provisions were not as large as expected.

EXPOSITION GROUNDS, SAN FRANCISCO, May 1.—After a three weeks' absence from the Exposition, I find on my return that nothing that I have written has been even remotely adequate to the surpassing and compelling demands of the subject. To watch the Exposition grow and record its growth week by week does not give the glow of enthusiasm that one feels on coming upon it in its maturity and splendor.

Think of the field of yellow pansies in front of the Tower of Jewels, a field so large that the air is filled with their faint odor! They have replaced the yellow jonquils and tulips that were here when I left.

In the Court of Abundance the band of the Garde Republicaine, with Gabriel Pares directing, is playing, and the feeling for the French musicians, so far from their suffering country, is expressed in the applause. San Francisco calls itself "Little Paris," and the musicians are at home here.

As I walked through the court one of the men in his black uniform with the little grenadier cap stopped me saying, "Nous jouerons maintenant, mademoiselle," quite sure that I would retrace my steps, as I did.

The Panama-Pacific International Exposition is in full swing, and is a success beyond all expectations, as is demonstrated by the enormous crowds which still throng the grounds.

In the approximate ten weeks since the Exposition opened there has been an attendance of 3,800,000 persons, and the "rush" season is not yet on. With the closing of the schools will come not only an increased number of visitors, but teachers' conventions from all over the country. There are 822 conventions coming, 125 of which are educational.

Thus far the attendance had been mostly from California and a few near-by States, but the officials of the transcontinental railroads have given unsolicited assurance that westward travel during the remainder of the present year will be the greatest in the history of the railroads.

During my three weeks' absence from the Exposition remarkable changes have taken place. The United States collier Jason came from Europe about two weeks ago with a precious cargo from various European ports. From Italy, France and Greece come rare works of art which are now being installed in the foreign exhibit palaces, and it is only a matter of a few days before the installation will be complete.

THE LIBERTY BELL.

Another big peace of news over which all San Francisco is rejoicing is the coming of Liberty Bell from Independence Hall, in Philadelphia. Over fifty cities have petitioned to have the bell pass through on its way across the continent, but, as it was so difficult to procure, it is probable that it will come directly through on its own special train, accompanied by

Windsor Square

Your future home

When you buy and build in Windsor Square you have established a permanent home and have practically insured your family against the annoyances and disappointments which would come with the depreciation of a tract not properly restricted.

Windsor Square will be as amply protected fifty years hence as it is today. Its homes are built for permanent occupation. Its surroundings are ideal from the standpoint of beauty—of comfort—of home-making qualities.

An investment in Windsor Square is especially attractive at the present time in view of the "Special Prices" we are making to those prepared to begin immediate building.

Why you should build now

The present low cost of building material and abundance of skilled labor makes construction possible under the most favorable conditions. You can build better and at a lower cost right now than will be possible a few months hence.

Strange Tribesmen at San Francisco Exposition—the Somalis.

Harmless Here.

FIERCE SOMALI WARRIORS SEEN AT THE EXPOSITION.

A Vigorous People, Strong, Lithe and Still in the Childhood of Life, They Form One of the Features in the Big Show—Their Thatched Huts and Primitive Mode of Living Adverts to the Beginning of Time.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

SAN FRANCISCO BUREAU OF THE TIMES, April 28.—When you step into the Somali Village at the Amusement Zone at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition you feel that you are back somewhere in the morning of time, before we were bothered with all these "things" that, instead of making life easy, render it difficult and complex for us. A vigorous people, strong, lithe, still in their childhood and playtime, are the Somalis. They laugh and play and live.

Thatched huts form the little village, each hut being devoted to some phase of Somali life, and each one bears a sign plainly lettered in English, so that the wayfaring man, though a fool, cannot fail to discriminate between home and shop and church. Thus there is the trader with his bright beads and corals and handmade ornaments of silver; the shoemaker at work upon the sandals that they wear; a bakery where a man who held a solemn-eyed, black, kinky-headed youngster in her arms, makes a wonderful kind of pastry—a sort of cake curled round upon round something like the "snails" sold at the corner bakery, only much larger. There is a school where a little group of children sing-song the lesson they are learning off of what looks like a wooden page; there is even a mosque—for the Somalis are Mohammedans—and a platform where they give native war dances for the pleasure of their visitors.

OF MIXED ORIGIN.

The Somalis are a people of mixed origin—one look at them tells that. There is a man that shows negro blood, you'd say at a glance. The woolly black hair, the thickened lips, the dark color, the flattened foot betray Hamitic origin. Here is another that might pass for an Arab. The Somalis are not negroid, their manager says, and they themselves repudiate the implication of any negro tincture, claiming to be of mixed Abyssinian and Arabian descent. When I went to look them up in "the books," as Mark Twain would say, I found that authorities disagreed. The Encyclopedia Britannica says that the Somalis are of an eastern Ethiopic, or Hamitic, race, that has been identified with the people of Punt, as their land was called by Egyptians. One or two other encyclopedias of whom I modestly inquired stated with equal assurance that they were of Arabian origin, the Arab coming down the coast as early as the fifteenth century, driving back the original inhabitants, who were Christians.

However this may be, the Somalis are certainly a fighting race. One can imagine the splendid warriors they make. They have the physique and courage—more brains and stategy, too—in all likelihood, than some of the races they have warred with. That they have persisted since the days when Somaliland was called Punt by the Egyptians is eloquent proof of this. Their country—the two divisions of it, British Somaliland and Italian Somaliland—lies on the east coast of Africa, the extreme east coast—the "Horn," as it is sometimes called, because here Africa juts far out into the Indian Ocean. They have been favored by location, possessing the fostering environment which has enabled them to push ahead of interior tribes.

SMOOTH TRADERS.

Their arts are well illustrated at the exposition settlement. At the traders' booth (and they are a famous nation of traders, said to be adept at lying, and well able, while you are watching them with such clumsy Caucasian caution as may be yours, to cheat you out of your eye-teeth) there is an interesting display of their craftsmanship. The articles are nearly all massive and somewhat crude, yet they have sincerity in design and execution and considerable dignity. The huge silver bracelets are roughly carved in effective designs that rise in places to crater-like lumps with little thread-sized lines raying out from them. They are mostly cylindrical and open and close with a curious and most ingenious spiral spring. Some of the rings and bracelets are wrought in a heavy open work that is like a more massive filigree. I saw a hair ornament of dagger form, though not cross-hilted, with little groups of silver bells, spherical and hanging pendant like sleigh bells, and I thought that the lady who wore this would, like her sister in the nursery rhyme, "Make music wherever she goes." There are great round lumps of amber, not cut or polished, looking like a slice off a cylinder—or, to use a more homely figure, an ordinary furniture castor—with a leather throng run through the central hole to suspend it round the neck. These amber pendants are worn by both men and women.

The handsomest thing I saw in the trader's booth was a barabic breast piece, a great shallow crescent-shaped silver thing that would reach well nigh from shoulder to shoulder, of elaborate carven design, and thickly strung with the little silver bells. The thing was rudely royal; one could imagine a princess of this blood stepping proudly to the tinkle of those bells.

ALL COLORS EXCEPT BLUE.

There were mats—round braided ones; rectangular woven ones—of fibers gaily colored. I noticed here, as in nearly all the fabrics, carvings and buildings of these wild peoples on the Zone, that however gay and crude the painting and dyeing might be—red, green, yellow, black, white, orange—there was almost never any blue. Blue is the intellectual color. Blue, the psychic interpreters tell us, was the color of the Greek civilization.

There were chains and rings and other ornaments, all of rudely wrought silver. There was an immense wooden comb for a woman's hair—a thing like a massive salad fork—its top carved and colored. There was a considerable display of native basketry, and pillows worked in beads. Here, too, were the huge shields of elephant hide, great round things that resembled nothing but a sombrero, which had been sat down upon and flattened.

I lingered at the shoemaker's shop to watch the native shoemaker fashioning sandals—just a heavy sole held to the foot with a wide leather strap. As the work progressed I was fascinated by his treatment of his strap; he was weaving into it strips of glossy, gay-colored paper exactly as the kindergarten children weave it into mats—I stared at him until he had completed the one in hand and added it to a row of finished footgear; then I could hold in no longer; I spoke, and most untactfully no doubt.

"Won't that paper wear out very soon?" I asked, pointing to the gay checkering, betrayed into making signs indicative of its being rubbed by use.

"Huh?" the shoemaker grunted, staring straight at me with heavy eyes. "You want? Very pity."

"No," I vociferated, raising my voice, as we always do to make a foreigner understand. "Won't it—wear out easy—the paper?"

ALL HAVE BIG FEET.

An interested crowd now surrounded us; it had produced itself from nowhere, it included representatives from every political ward in the Somali Village. It was impartial, pleased. I held no brief for me—none for the shoemaker. We stood equal before it, as parties liable to offer fortuitous entertainment. Glancing down at his footwear, I saw my contention proved. The paper did wear out—and it was never renewed.

"You want buy?" persisted the shoemaker. He had exactly the air of a salesman in any of the best shops. He surveyed my foot with a glance of proprietorship. I felt it beginning to belong to him. I should not have been surprised to have him tell me how well arched the instep, how aristocratically narrow the lines. Or, no—in Somaliland the canons of beauty call for a pedal extremity built on the rectangular model of a shingle, the ankle coming down a little abaft of midway, the heel protruding to give one, I am sure, a good balance on mother earth. The sandals with their gay paper were all number 10 or 15, so far as I could see. They looked as though ambitious to develop into good-sized leather boots.

"No, thank you," I said with such decision as I could muster. "I don't want to buy any"—and I hurried on to the school.

The children welcomed me—almost anything is better than lessons, and as I came up I had heard them droning away like the institution I used to know in my childhood in the southern mountains as a "hollerin' school," where every pupil "hollered" his lesson as loud as he could, to prove that he was studying, and that one who dropped to a mumble got cuffed by the teacher.

STUDY THE KORAN.

Silence greeted my entry into the academy of Somaliland. The youngsters stared at me. I picked up one of their books and looked at it, finding it a copy of the Koran printed in Arabic—the only proper learning for good little Mohammedans. They had small wooden slates, too, upon which they used some chalklike substance. On the walls of their schoolhouse hung bright colored posters printed like the books, in Arabic, with texts from the Koran. I suppose they were equivalent to our primary school charts, but they looked very romantic and fascinating; one of them could adorn a den or studio.

I wished the pupils to go on with their study, but they were resolutely silent, hands behind them, nudging each other, exactly like children in any other school. I put the book back in the hand of the child from whom I had taken it and remarked encouragingly, "You study now?" but he only grinned and shook his shaven head. As I stood perplexed a party of visitors who had followed me into the village arrived, in their progress, at the school. The man in charge of them understood how to arouse a thirst for knowledge. He gave the leader of the reluctant students a buffalo nickel—and the words of the Koran hummed out through the silence like the rasp of a saw in a sawmill.

The hut which announced itself a bakery had two women sitting on the ground before it at their bread making. This was primitive indeed; a smoldering bit of fire between two flat stones, a pan set above, and a great, snail-like cake being formed by coiling a rope of dough into its circle.

"You like to cook?" I asked of them idly. The older woman nodded vigorously, showing that she understood my meaning if not my exact words; but the younger shook her head till all its little tails of braids flew out; she protruded a sullen underlip and glanced toward the platform where the men were later to dance. I saw that the feminine unrest had penetrated even to Somaliland.

A LAUGHING PEOPLE.

But they are generally a laughing people; as I wandered among them between the thatched huts and across their sandy court, my pencil and paper had their amused attention. They drifted carelessly toward me, as children drift with pretended unconcern toward what puzzles and attracts them. "What for?" they would ask with joyous grins. I explained that I was going to write about them for a newspaper, and they seemed to understand. "Paper," the word was repeated, and passed from lip to lip. "Newspaper," and the grin went all round, and one and another would draw himself or herself up proudly.

The native dress is like the Arabs, a simple long strip of white cotton, like a sheet, draped about the body. They tell me that ten yards is used by the men and twelve by the women; and a more beautiful and picturesque garb it would be hard to imagine. Alas that our gingham and calicos are beginning to attract the women, and that some of them come forth in "skirts and shirtwaists" though made in fearful and wonderful design. The married women cover the head, but do not veil the face. The unmarried girls wear their hair in marvelous fashion. All the way around the head from brow to nape—from bang to pigtail—it is braided in scores of little braids, carried out four to seven inches, from that point the curly ends are left to fly free. The effect is undeniably gay; it would not be too much to call it a bit dizzy. The children's heads are shaved—one suspects this of being a frankly sanitary measure. The men allow their hair to grow long. Some of them have tight curling locks; a rather more common type was that of extremely bushy hair, parted in the middle and flung free to the breeze. It stood straight out as though crisped with an iron; and it would have been the despair of a star football player or a spectacular musician.

WEIRD DANCE MUSIC.

When I first went into the village I noticed, lying to one side, the Somali drum—an iron cylinder about two feet long and one foot across the ends, over which was stretched a natural skin still covered with hair, save toward the center, where the drumsticks had worn it away. While I was taking interested observations on Somali hairdressing for ladies and gentlemen, the air suddenly began to throb with a drum beat, muffled, as though laboring under intense but suppressed excitement; there was a marvelous "getting across" in that drum beating, of excitement, not yet unleashed, as it throbbed out on the quietude of the little sandy court. The shrill notes of a bamboo fife almost immediately slashed in athwart it, like a sharp, thirsty blade. It was a weird, strange march—a crude air of small variations and monotonous repetitions, but it called to primitive deeps even within one's twentieth century Aryan soul—something that lies latent there until the music, or the gesture or the tone primitive and audacious enough, awakens it.

I whirled and looked where the long, cylindrical drum had lain; it was gone. Out toward the center of the court there moved a procession of Somali warriors, following two leaders, one of whom made the drum

WESTERN LAND OF RESOURCES.

States of the Rockies Show Wonderful Products.

Richness of Mines and Crops Astound Visitors.

San Diego Exposition Holds Diversified Exhibits.

BY MARY S. GULLIVER.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

SAN DIEGO, May 1.—The resources of the States of the Far West, the wonders worked by irrigation, the great mining and farming resources of certain sections are all forcibly and attractively brought out in the exhibits of the various State buildings at the Panama-California Exposition.

Most of these buildings, with the exception of the California State Building and the Nevada Building, are located on the lower plateau, which affords a wonderful view of the bay on one side and the palm canyon on the other.

The imposing California Building is the only State building which is not devoted to a display of the State's resources. Instead there are the interesting Maya monuments and other prehistoric works of art in this building.

The large building erected by Utah is one of the most interesting of these State structures. A unique but most effective method of acquainting visitors with the magnitude of the resources of Utah has been arranged. A great relief map of the State, 16x30 feet and weighing four and a half tons, occupies one of the rooms off the main room. The map was made by students of the Utah Agricultural School and is colored to give an idea of the fertility of the soil. Red designates the arid land, green the fertile soil and white the land covered with alkali and salt deposits.

TOO BIG TO GRASP.

If one listens for a few minutes to the description of the map and the country given by Gilbert W. Williams, who is in charge of the building, one's brain grows dizzy trying to grasp the magnitude of the facts told about Utah's riches. Utah deals only in superlatives. The coal fields are pointed out on the map, in which are buried 19,000,000,000 tons of coal, or enough coal to supply the entire world 120 years.

The Utah copper mine at Bingham, the world's greatest copper producer, with an output of 24,000 tons of low-grade ore a day, is pointed out. The richest carnotite deposit in the world, the heavy radium-bearing ore, is found here; and also 19,000,000,000 of hydrocarbons. Beet fields are pointed out and we learn that 236,000,000 pounds of beet sugar were produced last year, or enough sugar to build a sidewalk from Chicago to San Francisco six inches deep and six feet wide.

The potash deposits, developed since the European war because of Germany's inability to export potash now, and the great dairy sections, are pointed out. The wonderful boulevard at Solduro, formed by a salt deposit, where Teddy Tetzlaff broke the world's record; the Lucin cut-off, where the Southern Pacific crosses Great Salt Lake; the natural bridges and strange geological formations in the southwestern part of the State, all are shown on the map. Utah's Dixieland in Washington county, where a sudden drop of 7500 feet from the surrounding mountains, gives a climate similar to that of Southern California, is described. Here figs, dates, almonds, cotton and other semi-tropical products are successfully raised.

The New Castle irrigation project is shown in miniature in another room. Here have been reproduced the houses, hotels, the running water, the irrigation ditches and the railroad, the Salt Lake Route running between Los Angeles and Salt Lake City.

FRUIT EXHIBITS.

There are extensive exhibits of fruits, grains and other products of the State shown. On the mezzanine floor are hung many beautiful pictures of the scenery of Utah and in the reception and reading-rooms the handsome furniture becomes of greater interest when one learns that it was all made by incorrigibles of the State Reform School. The exhibit is one to be proud of and Utah people are not lacking in this pride. To date 1336

Hospital Corner-stone to be Laid Tomorrow.

New Methodist Institution Notable Structure.

Will Have Capacity of Over Hundred Beds.

Tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock the corner-stone of the modern reinforced-concrete Methodist Hospital, at Twenty-eighth and Hope streets, will be laid. The event will mark the climax of a strenuous and earnest campaign by the Methodists of Southern California to establish a great hospital that will be a credit to their denomination in this part of the world.

The hospital, when completed and equipped, will have a capacity of 117 beds. One major and two minor operating-rooms are provided for. A roof garden, with hammocks, rocking chairs and swings, set amid palms, flowers and vines, will be one of the features.

The building is located on the site of the old Hazard homestead. It is away from the noise and dust of the busy downtown streets, but at the same time is easy of access from thickly-populated districts. It has 234 feet frontage on Hope street and is 265 feet deep. The structure contains six floors and a basement.

The hospital will not be strictly a charitable institution, for in cases where patients are able, they are to be charged a moderate rate. All of the profit derived from pay patients, however, is to be used for the care of worthy charity cases. In this way the church expects to render a genuine service in the community.

The laying of the corner-stone will be made an auspicious occasion. Announcements and invitations have gone out to thousands of Southern California Methodists and their friends and the replies that have already been received indicate that the grounds will be filled to overflowing. The Methodist preachers' weekly meeting, which meets every Monday at 10 o'clock, will be adjourned for the event.

Rev. W. C. Tilroe, president of the Ministers' Association, will preside, and among the speakers will be Mayor Rose, Dr. Charles Edward Locke, Dr. Matt S. Hughes and Rev. Byron H. Wilson. The ceremony of the corner-stone laying will be in the hands of the district superintendents of the Southern California Conference.

The old Hazard homestead will be used in connection with the hospital work until the completion of the new building, when it will be turned into a nurses' home, where fifty nurses will always be in training. Rapid progress has been made in the construction of the first unit of the new and modern Methodist institution. W. S. Grant is the architect.

RAPID PROGRESS ON BIG STORE.

ROBINSON'S NOW UNDER ROOF. CONSTRUCTION PROCEEDING RAPIDLY.

Bids are being received by the J. W. Robinson Company for the dome and other fixture lighting to be used in its beautiful new department store at Seventh, Hope and Grand. The powerful nitrogen light, which is the nearest approach to daylight that modern science has achieved, will be used entirely throughout the new store. This light, it is said, makes it possible to match cloth of varying colors under artificial illumination.

Contracts for the marble work of the big store were let during the week to the firm of B. V. Collins, the order including a large amount of white Alaskan marble for the lobby. Marble will also play a prominent part in the decoration of the "cubicles" or "beauty rooms" which are to be a feature of the store.

The store will comprise about nine acres of floor space and the carpets which have been ordered for this big area are now in course of manufacture. Shades of soft gray will be used for most of the floors. The dining-room, which will have a soft moss gray hue for its flooring, will require 1243 yards of carpet, and the other floors even larger amounts.

The roof of the new building has been in place for more than a week and the progress upon the outer construction has been rapid. The entire building will be enclosed within a few days.

WILL IMPROVE RANCH.

Purchaser of Three Hundred and Twenty-acre Tract at Vista Plans Extensive Development Operations.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

HIGHLAND, May 1.—E. H. Harding of this city, J. A. Harding of Vista, and J. C. Boyd of Rialto, have sold all but a small interest in 320 acres of land at Vista near Oceanside to A. H. The property is said to be valued at $24,000 and was bought by the men who just sold it when the Vista lemon lands were put on the market by Harley & Martin of Redlands.

Mr. Jacobs has transferred to the syndicate a ten-acre grove of Valencias and bloods in Redlands, ten acres of land on Highland avenue west of here, and a house and lot in Pomona. The three properties are reported to have brought $21,000. Mr. Jacobs has announced that his son will develop the property at Vista as a stock ranch.

Land of Resources.

have visited the building from the home State, which is a large per cent. when one remembers that the State contains but 415,000 people.

Close by the Utah building is the Montana State Building, which was made possible by a donation from Senator W. A. Clark, who gave the building. The State put in the exhibit and maintains it. Here, as one looks at the beautifully decorated walls, decorated with sheaves of grain in various designs and a frieze of oats artistically arranged, one realizes that Montana's resources are not restricted to mining alone. There is a fine display of Montana's ores and near by at a desk is Granville Stuart, the aged pioneer, who first discovered gold in Montana.

"It was in 1858, May 2," says Mr. Stuart, "for I dug the hole myself at Gold Creek."

"Montana has everything good to eat for man and beast," according to the old pioneer, who says he knows because he lived there seven years before it was Montana.

Montana deals in big figures as well as Utah, for Mr. Stuart will tell you that 3,000,000 pounds of copper are taken out of Butte every year and that Butte has a pay roll of $18,000,000 a year for the copper workers. J. Alfred Pyle, secretary of the Montana commission, who gives a lecture on the beauties of the Glacier National Park, "See America First," assists the venerable superintendent of the exhibit, as does Mrs. Kathryn Smith, hostess of the building. A rare collection of Indian pictures and scenes of Montana loaned to the exhibit by James J. Hill is a feature.

WASHINGTON BUILDING.

Across the street from the Montana Building is the attractive structure erected by the State of Washington. The rear of the building overlooks the Palm Canyon and beyond to the Puenta Cabrillo and the view presented is like a great panorama. The builders appreciated this and built a long balcony which is provided with seats for the visitors. As one enters the building one thinks of the great forests of Washington, for there is a woodsy smell from the fir and cedar branches that decorate the ceiling and walls, typical of the Evergreen State. Elk and deer and birds of the northern State are among the trees in one end of the room, while everything that is produced in the country is displayed artistically.

At one end is a miniature town with surrounding country which shows the industries of the State—the wheat fields, apple orchards, the homes, manufactories, power plants and the canneries and fishing industry of the Sound. There are wonderful displays of the beautiful apples, huge bunches of grapes and the many other fruits raised in Washington; a grain display and a display of the Washington potatoes; and a dairy exhibit. In a miniature mine are shown the different ores found there, silver, gold, copper and coal. After the lumber display comes an interesting exhibit of the various fish of Washington. Last year there were $15,000,000 worth of canned salmon put up in this State, which means quite a few cans, while just to show that that is not the only industry they proudly tell you that 11,000 carloads of apples were shipped from Washington, which does not include the amount used in cider, vinegar and by-products.

A camping scene showing the many wild animals and birds that inhabit the forests and a display of stuffed birds and smaller animals occupies the center of the room. Here also is a block house, a replica of the forts built by Washington pioneers. This is soon to be replaced, however, with a forest scene to give one an actual reproduction of a forest of the big trees of Washington. Harry N. Cockrell of the Washington commission, an old resident of that State, is the host.

DISPLAY OF GRAIN.

On the opposite side of the street again is the Kansas Building, where a display of the corn, wheat and other grains of the Sunflower State is attractively presented. The place is a great rendezvous for Kansans, who have visited the building in large numbers.

Up on the Alameda, apart from the other State buildings, but in an appropriate location because near the tractor field, where the implements used in Nevada in farming are shown, is the Nevada State Building recently dedicated. The Nevadans appropriated $40,000 for their building and have erected a substantial structure in which is a splendid display of the minerals, grain and fruits of the State. In the balcony is an exhibit of the handiwork of children of the public schools and at one end a large dance hall which the Nevadans enjoy thoroughly. Pretty reception-rooms, one for men and one for women, are on the first floor.

The New Mexico Building, which is in the group of buildings on the lower plateau, completes the State exhibits of the exposition. The building, which is the most picturesque of all of the State buildings and very distinctive of New Mexico, is a replica of the old mission built on the Rock of Acoma in New Mexico by the early Indians. The building will be formally dedicated tomorrow with appropriate ceremonies. Gov. W. C. McDonald, Col. R. E. Twitchell, chairman of the New Mexican Exposition managers, Commissioners Col. A. E. Koehler, Jr., J. J. Shuler, Sam T. Clark, Dennis Chaves, Hon. M. L. Fox, and Hon. Nestor Montoya, all prominent New Mexicans, will take part in the ceremony.

DEDICATION.

The dedication services will be held in the chapel auditorium of the building, an exact replica of the chapel of the old mission. The uniform rank of the Order of Panama will act as a guard of honor to Gov. McDonald. These men will wear the picturesque costume and shining armor of the Spanish Conquistadores. Julian Martinez and Juan Gonzales, the Governor and ex-Governor of the Indian Pueblo of San Ildefonso, representing the Indian tribes of the State and wearing their native ceremonial regalia, will be among the guests of honor.

The dedication proper will be held tomorrow morning and in the evening a large reception will be held in the newly-dedicated building. Miss Claude Albright, an opera singer whose home is in Albuquerque, will sing in Spanish and will wear a Spanish costume while the Conquistadores of the Order of Panama will wear their Spanish costumes again in the evening.

Tuesday evening the Order of Panama will hold an extraordinary session and initiate and confer degrees of the order upon Gov. McDonald, Hon. M. L. Fox and Hon. Nestor Montoya. A banquet at the Cristobal will follow the ceremony.

AMERICAN NAVAL OFFICER SHOT.

ON ERRAND OF MERCY, HIT BY FIRE OF A MEXICAN.

Eyewitness Tells for First Time of Episode During Battle at La Paz When Bullets Strike Destroyer Sent to Help Wounded—Contempt for "Gringos" Increases.

How an American officer, a lieutenant attached to the personal staff of Admiral Thomas B. Howard, was wounded by the direct fire of a Mexican revolutionist at La Paz, July 17, 1914, was told for the first time yesterday by an eyewitness of the affair. Two other officers were bruised by splinters of bullets and another lieutenant had his coat torn across the chest during the fusillade upon the U.S.S. destroyer Lawrence, when she steamed in close to land on an errand of mercy. The story of an eyewitness to the entire affair is as follows:

Constitutionalist forces, under command of Gen. Miguel Cornejo, successfully attacked La Paz early in the morning of July 17. The battle lasted until 2 p.m., when the remaining Federals escaped into the mountains.

At the time of the fight, the cruiser California, flagship of Admiral Howard, the supply ship Iris, and four destroyers were stationed at Pichilingue, the American coaling station just outside of La Paz harbor.

Knowing the wounded would require instant and expert attention, Admiral Howard ordered the destroyer Lawrence, commanded by Lieut. Pond, to steam towards La Paz. On board the Lawrence he sent Lieuts. Kimmel and Kidd of his personal staff, Surgeon Rossiter, Surgeon Evans and Dr. Cole of the California, and a supply of liniment, anesthetics and bandages.

The object of the trip was to offer services to Gen. Cornejo in caring for the wounded Constitutionalists. There were no wounded Federals.

Passing the steamship Bonita, on board of which Gen. Cornejo and his men had arrived, the Lawrence proceeded to a position just off the pier. The firing had ceased an hour before. Along the beach the victorious rebels were celebrating. The Americans on board the destroyer lined the rail to better see the activities.

Suddenly a rifle shot spat into the air, and a bullet plopped just in front of the destroyer. The officers looked around. Then they laughed and blamed the matter to some stray shot. Another shot rang out and a bullet splashed the water just in front of the Lawrence. Three more shots followed, each one coming closer, until the last one struck the side of the anchored destroyer.

A sixth shot hit a stanchion and splintered it. Two fragments struck Lieut. Kimmel, one in the left arm and another in the right thigh. Crying out, "Boys, I'm shot," he staggered back into the arms of Surgeon Rossiter. Before the other officers could realize what had occurred, a seventh bullet struck a gun and glancing, ripped Lieut. Pond's coat across the chest. Passing on, it shattered against a steel air shaft, splinters of the spent bullet striking Ensign Hodgson and Surgeon Evans, bruising their skin. There was a general break for cover.

The enlisted men on board the Lawrence, seeing the blood spurt from the wounded lieutenant and the ragged rip across their commander's chest, were roused to anger. Lieut. Pond saw red for an instant, and ordered the guns cleared for action. Sober thought caused him to pause and send a radiogram to Admiral Howard on board the California, asking for orders.

"We are being fired upon. May we shoot back?" was flashed.

In an instant came back the flash, "No. Return here immediately."

Gen. Cornejo and his secretary, Orestes Peragalla, worked industriously the following week, endeavoring to show the firing had been done by a Federal sympathizer. Yet, previous to that, a dozen or so Federal sympathizers had been summarily thrown into jail or shot. No other Federals could be found, or they surely would have received a like fate.

The matter was reported to the State Department through the regular channels.

Lieut. Kimmel recovered a few days later, but the effect on the Mexican population at La Paz was wonderful. "Those gringos will take anything," was the general comment heard in the streets.

It is not a speculation; because the finest pear orchards in California are in this district NOW and are producing magnificent incomes for their owners.

A producing pear orchard in this section will cost you today at least $1000 per acre.

You can buy a Palmdale Pear Orchard leveled, planted and fenced, LESS THAN A MILE FROM PALMDALE—right on the main valley line of the Southern Pacific, 37 miles directly north of Los Angeles, and WITH GRAVITY WATER PIPED TO IT for $300 an acre, 20% down, balance over five years.

While it is coming into bearing the space between the trees will earn you a living, and BEFORE IT IS PAID FOR THE TREES WILL BE BEARING.

The usual pear crop in this district runs from four to six tons per acre, and the price per ton runs from $60 to $90.

Can you find any proposition in California to beat it—or equal it?

A delightful place to live, and independence from hard times or financial stringencies.

And remember—Palmdale Pear Orchards are NOW supplied with gravity water in superabundance. It is ON THE PROPERTY NOW.

There is no finer pear land anywhere and it is RIGHT AT PALMDALE—Not 5 or 10 miles away.

Unplanted pear lands in the same district and with gravity water $225 per acre, 10% down, balance over 7 years.

Let us tell you about our special proposition to take care of your orchard for you.

The Genesel Copper Company has resumed work at its mines with a small crew, and the Walker Copper Company, controlled by Salt Lake people, is preparing for more extensive operations. Most of the mines in this field were closed at the outbreak of the European war, but the rapid recovery of the copper market is stimulating copper mining throughout the country.

The famous old Cerro Gordo mine, near Keeler, is producing high-grade zinc ore, in addition to its usual yield of silver, lead, gold and copper. Reconstruction of the aerial tramway is proceeding, the two sections of the system embracing a length of about five miles. The recent advance in the price of zinc, copper and lead promises to increase greatly the profitable output of the Cerro Gordo, which recorded an excellent season in 1914.

RARE MINERALS, METALLURGY AND CHEMISTRY

INQUIRIES FROM AND ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

You are politely requested to submit samples carefully wrapped and tagged, with letter accompanying stating what tests are desired. Make samples of small size. There is no necessity for big chunks. Correspondents offering matter for analyses with card, or scrap of paper, intended to show that the stuff is from Jim Jones, for instance, with no marks of identification on samples, will, hereafter, receive no attention whatever.

Not Alunite.

HILLSIDE (Ariz.) April 14.—Q.: Am forwarding five samples from near an alunite deposit to the west from here. The now known alunite deposit was identified as alunite by you earlier in the year, I understand. In places the rock has a saline taste, many cavities and vug holes are encountered, and upon percussion a smell like hydrochloric acid is noticed. Do any of the samples carry potash in a commercially available form, and if so, what per cent.? Assuring you of the interest that we boys in the hills have for your department, and asking, further, if the black sample put with the others is menaccanite of any value.

"PROSPECTO."

A.: Glad to hear from you. We have never observed alunite (alumstone) from the locality you refer to; otherwise with halotrichite (iron alum.)

The black sample, while carrying titanium, is not strictly menaccanite, hematite (variety micaceous iron,) is present.

Sample No. 1 is an impure aluminum silicate, ilmenite, trace of selenium and low per cent. potash. No. 2 is aluminum silicate, traces of iron alum, potash value low. No. 3, aluminum silicate, trace halotrichite, traces microscopical garnet and trace of limonite, potash present. No. 4 on order of No. 1, but ilmenite absent. No. 5, altered lava, low per cent. potash; iron alum trace.

All of the samples are of but slight commercial value; nevertheless, it would be well to try the material with sulphuric acid, to the end that sulphates of value might be had therefrom.

Gilbertite.

LOS ANGELES, April 14.—Q.: I am offering a sample for test, etc. It is from that locality known as the Parker mining district, in Arizona. I have not tested it for iron and alumina and will be obliged if you will do so. Has the sample a name in mineralogy? Thanking you for many favors in the past, and awaiting your published reply.

K.

A.: The sample is named mineralogically at the subheading. It is a hydrous muscovite, and a variety of margarodite. Hardness and sp. gr., 2.7 each. Alumina present, 40.11 per cent.; iron protoxide, 2.43 per cent.

That Gold Test.

LOS ANGELES, April 15.—Q.: I read with interest your references on silver and tests therefor, and as I am going to Alaska I cut out the article for future use. The silver test is certainly a good one. I would like you to once more publish your aqua regia test for gold. I have a claim on which large quantities of serpentine rock-asbestos is found, and it is generally believed by miners that this ore is the mother lode of platinum. Do you know of a method of treatment for platinum on such ore?

H.

A.: Glad to hear from you. All depends on the inference to be drawn from the words "cut out," but we understand.

A test for platinum goes on any old matter carrying platinum, but it is not such that every one can go through with. Analyzing for platinum, on ounce or two samples of ore, is unsatisfactory. Mill 100 pounds of the ore; concentrate, and then go for platinum, is the only practical method. Of course, where platinum occurs in grains large enough to be observed with the naked eye, the picking-out process is all that is required.

It is to be regretted that space will not permit us to give the entire paper headed "Testing for Gold," as published in The Times January 24, 1915. The one test you ask for follows:

"We have succeeded at times in isolating gold in certain pyrites by pulverizing the sulphide, placing it in aqua regia (a mixture of four or five parts of hydrochloric acid with three parts of nitric acid,) in a test tube; slowly boiling the mixture for a few moments; setting the tube and contents aside in the light and heat of the (desert) sun for an hour. Next pour the solution into a porcelain saucer; evaporate the excess of fluid; pour some alcohol (95 per cent. alcohol) over the residue; light the mixture with a match, and if gold is present the saucer will be more or less gilded, according to the quantity of gold present in th eore. Then add nitric acid (a few drops) to the gilded mass; it will turn the gilded mass dark; drive off the nitric acid with heat, and the residue will be brighter and more golden in color than ever.

Take no stock in criticisms. Try it out!

Impure Diatomaceous Earth.

COACHELLA, April 15.—Q.: Am inclosing under separate cover sample of mineral, and will you please tell me what it contains and if it has any commercial value? It comes from the mountains east of Coachella.

S.

A.: The silica sample (infusorial earth,) is very slightly contaminated with trace of microscopical pyrite, and magnesia. It has a low commercial value, but there is so much better grade in California that you might have difficulty in disposing of the grade mineral as represented by the sample.

Fossil Limestone.

SANTA BARBARA, April 15.—Q.: I am sending by today's mail a piece of stone which I got on my place near here. Will you kindly tell me if it has any value? Is it lime rock or what?

S.

A.: The locality from which you took the specimen should be somewhat exploited for higher-grade material. Lime is present to the percentage of 55. Aluminum silicate in the mass. Phosphoric acid 4.20 per cent.

"Calico Rock."

DESERT, April 16.—Q.: I am sending in a package a few pieces of rock from a large ledge. The pieces marked No. 1 are the general character of the ledge, and the two copper-stained samples are from stringers running from half an inch to six inches thick. Are there any values present? Would you advise my work on it?

B.

A.: No. 1 (two samples,) in part serpentine. Iron, lime, soda, manganese present. No. 2 (two samples,) chiefly quartz. Iron, manganese, copper trace, lead and silver traces.

Rock and mineral represented by the samples are of somewhat doubtful value, especially so if from "stringers."

Quite a Mixture.

SUNLAND, April 16.—Q.: I am mailing you under separate cover a specimen of ore; would you please tell me what minerals it contains and oblige.

M.

A.: Trace of bitumen in the mass, with titanic iron, ferrous and ferric oxides; epidotic matter; manganese, quartz, baryte, and bindheimite traces.

Bindheimite "is probably a mechanical mixture of lead and antimony ochres." The percentage of the last referred to substance is low.

Potash 3.20 Per Cent.

MECCA, April 16.—Q.: Please advise if the sample inclosed contains any potash.

G.

Manganese Iron.

CRESCENT (Nev.) April 16.—Q.: I am sending you today under separate cover two samples of ore from the Crescent mining district, on which I would like your opinion as to their manganese content especially.

M.

A.: The samples are too low in percentage to come up to mangenese dioxide of commerce.

No. 1 is a manganese-iron froth, as it were, carrying manganese 19.50 per cent. Lead, zinc, antimony and copper, all sparingly present. No. 2 is chiefly hematite (variety micaceous iron;) titanium present.

Mica Schist.

ORANGE, April 18.—Q.: Will you be kind enough to name the inclosed mineral sample for me?

B.

Sample of Interest.

SANTA BARBARA, April 18.—Q.: Kindly analyze the rocks I am sending you in separate package, and give results in your "In the Earth" column. I found these rocks in Southwestern Nevada.

I.

A.: Some rock, that! One sample is mica schist, and the other seven are quartzitic.

Ilmenite, arsenicum, lead, zinc and antimony, all present in greater or less percentages. Free gold absent. It would not be surprising if platinum was present near the original nesting place of the samples referred to.

Uranium Absent.

KINGMAN (Ariz.) April 18.—Q.: I am sending you three samples of mineral for tests, etc. Is uranium present in sample No. 1? How about vanadium in No. 2? No. 3 comes with ledge carrying molybdenite and wulfenite. I would like to know what No. 3 really is? These samples all from the Aubrey mining district.

S.

A.: Glad to get a line from you. Uranium is not present in any sample. No. 1 is chiefly quartz; ferrous and ferric oxides present, with lead traces, zinc a trace, and vanadium a trace. No. 2 is quartzitic; lead, vanadium, zinc, all sparingly present. No. 3 carries trace only of molybdenite; it is 85 per cent. graphite, with iron oxides, copper sulphide, and "black copper" sparingly present.

Good Abrasive Material.

MECCA, April 18.—Q.: I am mailing you under separate cover samples of rock taken from a cropping of a ledge in Carisso Creek, Imperial county, California. I think the rock might carry vanadium, so I wish you would analyze it and inform me through your "In the Earth" of The Times if it contains anything of commercial value. Thanking you for past favors.

C.

A.: The samples are two varieties of spessartite garnet. One of them is massive with iron-alumina garnet (almandine) present. The other is a "collection" of microscopical spessartite with almandite. The samples represent material of abrasive quality, and of commercial value. Vanadium absent.

Tourmaline and Siderite.

TUCSON (Ariz.) April 19.—Q.: Under separate cover, by mail herewith I am submitting to your "In the Earth" department two samples of mineral, all from a locality forty miles south-southwest from Tucson. From the radiated manner in which No. 1 specimen appears I cannot locate it exactly, and I have found no one who could enlighten me. No. 2 is supposed to be the mineral ankerite, but I have my doubts about it. Thanking you for past favors.

L.

A.: Glad to hear from you. No. 1 is a variety of tourmaline. No. 2 is not ankerite; it is siderite (iron carbonate,) and of high grade at that.

Biotite and Yellow Mica Present.

ELSINORE, April 19.—Q.: I am sending to you under separate cover a piece of rock which is dug out of a vein. Will you please let me know if it contains any metal of commercial value.

P.

A.: The sample looks very much like gneiss (soft granite of the mining boys.) It is now, in large percentages, lime and magnesia.

We are on record as favoring material like sample for the active exploitation of the salts of potash.

Impure Lapis Lazuli.

SAN BERNARDINO, April 19.—Q.: I am sending you a sample of rock that is supposed to be lapis lazuli. This mineral has been mined for such purposes as buttons, brooches, etc., but now all operations are at a standstill. Is the sample of quality commercially valuable, and if it is not of such value will you kindly tell me what it consists of? It occurs in San Bernardino county, but the work on property is now abandoned.

M.

A.: We have tested this mineral heretofore and reported upon it in this column as an "impure silicate of soda, lime and alumina, with a sulphide probably of iron and sodium."

The sample is specifically lapis lazuli, but it contains deleterious substances (too much sulphur) with coloring matter, that unfits the mineral for the commercial usage, chiefly, of the natural pigment ultramarine. We believe, however, that this objection can be overcome by separation of a certain per cent. of the sulphur content; wet methods. The sample, however, shows but slightly, the crystallization of dodecahedron which usually accompanies true lapis lazuli.

New Era of Prosperity for Copper Mining.

Important Experiments with Low Grade Ore.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

BISBEE (Ariz.) April 30.—It would appear that Arizona copper mining has entered upon a new period of highest prosperity, for copper not only has recovered its market, but is quoted at over 18 cents, per pound, compared with a production cost in the larger southwestern properties of from 8 to 11 cents.

As a result additional miners are being employed, additional furnaces are being blown in, copper mines again are being sought for purchase, and development of copper ledges again is in progress in all the districts. Copper mine stocks are on the up-grade all along the line.

It is predicted that every furnace in Arizona will be working to full capacity inside of ninety days and that the profits of the corporations will be in keeping with the increased output.

Of tremendous importance are experiments that have been made during the past year at Cornelia on the leaching of oxide and carbonate ores. Practically all of the low-grade so-called porphyry mines, such as the Ray, Inspiration and Miami have a deep overburden of this class of ore which, though about as rich as the underlying sulphide, heretofore could not be profitably treated by ordinary methods.

There are many million tons of this kind of ore within Arizona, which can be dug out with steam shovels with the greatest of facility. Yet this ore is now not only worthless, but an obstacle to the economical extraction of the sulphides below.

It is said that at Ajo the New Cornelia Company has perfected a process and proposes to put in a production plant capable of handling 4000 tons of oxides a day. The company as well has developed an enormous tonnage of sulphides of good milling grade.

From the reports of last year's operations, it is shown that the Phelps-Dodge and Calume & Arizona Companies secured the best prices for their product of any of the copper mines of the United States, an average of 13.72 cents per pound, compared with 13.57 cents for the Utah Consolidated, 13.41 for the Ray and 13.16, the best price of the Lake district.

This comparison is interesting through the fact that the Lake copper is generally considered of better quality than the local electrolytic. A still higher price average was struck by the Shattuck-Arizona of the Bisbee section, which received nearly 14.13 cents. But this high average was due to the fact that the Shattuck shut down during the low-price period.

With higher prices for copper, a higher wage schedule is impending in about all the larger copper mines of Arizona. The first announcement of an advance has been made in Globe by Manager P. G. Beckett of the Old Dominion Copper Company. Employees who received $3.50 a shift with copper at 15 cents will be given $3.75 with copper at 17 cents, $3.90 at 18 cents and $4.00 at 19 cents and over. The 17-cent raise will undoubtedly be generally effective at the beginning of next month.

SAYS DRY PLACERS ARE RICH IN GOLD.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

PRESCOTT (Ariz.) April 30.—According to Charles F. Willis, director of the State Bureau of Mines, great wealth is available for development in the many thousands of acres of dry placers known within Arizona, particularly in the Weaver district in Yavapai county; the Santa Domingo Wash the northern Maricopa county; Plomosa and La Paz districts, in Yuma county, and the Old Hat, Quijotoa and Greaterville districts of Pima county.

In most of these Mexican placers have been worked for many years, making meager wages by various dry washing processes, in some cases packing the auriferous gravel down to water or waiting for the filling of tanks by rains. Something better than the present process must be available if success is to attend the working of these beds, which in places sample several dollars in gold to the yard.

Not far from Quartzsite in northern Yuma county is a bed of "cement," of conglomerate horizontal formation, a few feet below the surface soil, carrying uniformly good values in gold, but in such shape that milling on a large scale, with an abundant supply of water, would have to be resorted to if profit is to be secured. It happens that the district is singularly dry, with not a running stream nearer than the Colorado, about thirty miles away.

A big hydraulic dredge has been re-erected on lower Lynx Creek, where placer beds of known richness are to be attacked not later than June. The locality is one that was profitably washed by the pioneers of 1864 and has known no activity for about twenty years.

The old arastra method for recovering free gold is still used in one locality of Northern Arizona, in Crook Canyon, where two of the crude reduction mills are being operated by J. H. Cross and James Shaers. The men are getting enough gold in return to pay their expenses and the cost of development work on their mines.

Within sixty days the Gray Eagle Company's custom reduction plant near Mayer will be started with large contracts ahead for the milling of ores of near-by gold and silver mines.

Though the Mayer-Big Bug section has been the graveyard of a number of patented processes that promised much, it is told that this newest plant has a collateral reduction system in which leaching and electricity alike are used in novel manner and with good results.

many celebrities, among whom it is expected will be Maj.-Gen. Nelson A. Miles.

The Pennsylvania Building in the exposition grounds is an exact copy of the old State House in Philadelphia where Liberty Bell hung and was rung on that famous night in 1776. The bell will be open to inspection during the day under a heavy guard, and at night will be placed in a steel vault, which has been made for the special purpose of housing it during its stay.

When San Francisco asked for the bell there was commotion in the Quaker city. The Daughters of the American Revolution and practically every club in the city rebelled, but the Council was in favor of sending it, and the Mayor signed the agreement.

There will be about 200 warships in the harbor to salute Liberty Bell as soon as they can come through the Panama Canal after the formal opening on the Fourth of July, the date on which the bell is to arrive.

WONDERFUL CHANGES.

It is impossible to grasp in a day or two all the changes that have taken place in three weeks, but the noticeable and outstanding facts are that the exposition is a great success and that no one goes away disappointed. Distinguished visitors from all over the United States have been unanimous in declaring that the exposition far surpasses the most enthusiastic advance notices.

There is dancing in the California Building every afternoon and almost every evening to which all San Francisco comes, and there are gay dinner parties at the Old Faithful Inn in the Zone. There is music everywhere, dance music, popular music and classical, and in two weeks the great musical event of the year takes place, the engagement of the Boston Symphony, to which everyone is looking forward.

Now is the time to see the fair. The weather is propitious and everything is in readiness. San Francisco is full of vigor and interest just now and fuller than usual of interesting people and excellent dinners. There is nothing left to be desired.

"Now is the time."

EXTENSIVE PLANTING.

Reports from the Pahvant Valley in Southwestern Utah are said to indicate that a large acreage in that region will be planted to sugar beets this season. It is reported that 2500 acres of land around Delta will be seeded within the next two weeks, 500 acres being planted by one farmer. Every beet grower in the district is said to be adding to his planted acreage. It is also reported that negotiations are under way for the erection of a large beet sugar factory at Delta.

TO FIFTH AND SPRING.

The Elliott & Horne Company, dealing in California street improvement bonds, has removed from its former location at No. 325 West Third street to the new Citizens' National Bank Building at Fifth and Spring streets. The firm was organized twelve years ago by L. L. Elliott and Clifford R. Horne. The former is president and the latter secretary at the present time.

SCOTLAND IS CHANGED.

The Historical Castles of Stirling and Edinburgh now Swarm with Khaki-clad Soldiers.

[Leslie's:] Yesterday Stirling and Edinburgh castles were reminders of the days of Scott's ballads and novels. This morning they have changed character—are swarming barracks. Regiments in khaki stream in and out of the portals through which knights in armor used to gallop. Long lines of drab-uniformed men wriggle up, snakelike, from the basements of railway stations. Armed giants in kilts pour down from the hills, up from the valleys.

The first army to respond appeared and disappeared so quickly that the spectator was led to wonder if the troops had been stored in castle cellars or in the railway luggage rooms. And when these were gone another army, larger than the first, began to mobilize from shops and farms and factories. In trains and motor cars, on foot and on horseback, they appeared by squads and by regiments. You heard the thud of their heavy shoes and the skirling of pipes as you ate your breakfast; and the rumble of gun carriages and the clatter of hoofs awoke you at night.

Yesterday you visited old Holyrood and its ruined chapel, trying to picture to yourself the days when battle was life's chief business and the castle yards were thronged with men at arms. This morning you pass there again to discover that battle once more is life's chief business, that war has claimed its own. A city of military tents covers half of the yard behind the castle. A battery dashes across the green, unlimbers its field pieces, whirls away again. Cavalrymen are herding the sheep in King's Park this morning instead of the park shepherds. A column of infantry swings into the winding road at the foot of Arthur's Seat, and, as you retreat up hill before it, sentries silhouetted against the morning light on the hillside bar your way. When you evade them and maneuver to the other side of the hill you see in Duddingston village, at the foot of the slope, another camp more extensive even than the city of tents beside Holyrood.

A Zouave's Heroic Struggle.

[Boston Herald:] A rare and stirring incident of personal heroism is that recorded in a semi-official notice given out in Paris on the afternoon of November 23.

"The other day in Belgium, a German column was advancing to attack a position in the forest of Brie, defended by a detachment of Zouaves. Our men noticed that before them the Germans forced a Zouave prisoner, and at the same time they heard cries of 'Stop firing!' For an instant our riflemen and the men in charge of our machine guns hesitated. Then from the German ranks they heard the voice of the Zouave prisoner, who called to them, 'Shoot, comrades!'

"There then flashed out from the ranks of the Zouaves a general discharge of rifles and machine guns. The fire laid low the assailants of the Zouaves, and with them fell the heroic soldier whose devotion made it possible for his countrymen to checkmate the ruse of the enemy.

"If the name of this brave man is unknown to the world, at least his regiment will retain forever the remembrance of his sacrifice, which is equal to any of the most famous instances of personal heroism recorded in our glorious history."

Soldiers Hard to Kill.

[Indianapolis News:] Reports indicate it sometimes takes a lot to kill a modern soldier. Sergt. Fougere of France received eight bullet wounds, a broken arm and other injuries, and, although shot in the calf, thigh and ankle, escaped being captured by Germans, and limped ten miles to his regiment. Another French soldier received six bullet and three bayonet wounds, and is recovering. The French War Office estimates only two men are killed out of every 100 hit. The penetration is so clean one soldier did not know he had been hit for three hours, and another bullet went through two soldiers and lodged in a cavalryman's saddle.

How to Dress

If every woman tried to dress like the models shown in the average fashion magazine, she would look like a Futurist or a Cubist painting.

The attempts of a few are responsible for the queerly-dressed creatures which we occasionally see on prominent thoroughfares.

The intelligent woman who cares about her appearance wants to be fashionably yet tastefully and exclusively gowned.

Fortunately, there is a publication which will aid her—The Woman's Home Companion.

The fashion models in this magazine are not fantastic. They do not look like creatures which belong in a zoo or a museum.

They look like real human beings, real flesh and blood women—women who are really pleasing to the eye.

Every woman would be attractive in appearance if she made her gowns according to the designs and patterns furnished by the Companion.

The American Magazine

The American Magazine is the kind of magazine that nobody ever hides in a drawer. It is edited by responsible people, who have children of their own to bring up—edited by people who know that the best and even the most exciting reading matter in all the world is pure—edited by people of brains and character, who realize that nastiness is only a poor substitute for stupidity.

The American Magazine, with all its humor, its facts, its new ideas, its stories and its wonderful pictures, is one of the rarest and most significant products of present day American life. It is, in fact, THE American Magazine.

THE TIMES

By exclusive arrangement with the publishers, The Times is enabled to offer its readers, old or new, the following exceptionally liberal subscription proposition. Any subscriber, old or new, can get The Times, the Woman's Home Companion and the American Magazine, by signing a twelve months' subscription contract for the Daily and Sunday Times and paying therefor only 80 cents per month.

No other newspaper attempts to cover the home field—Los Angeles, Southern California, the Pacific Coast and the Great Southwest—as thoroughly and completely as does The Times, which is the only paper in the Pacific Southwest that daily prints a full and complete Associated Press report.

These comprehensive and authentic reports are of special importance at this time because of the great European war. The Associated Press is the world's greatest news-gathering organization; and its daily cable reports from Europe, which are trustworthy and impartial, show the real facts concerning the activities of the various armies.

In addition to the service of the Associated Press, THE TIMES has special correspondents of its own in the principal centers of population of America and Europe, and it daily prints every happening of importance on the civilized globe, including news of the political, religious, social and business life of the people of all foreign lands.

Fierce Warriors.

roll, and roar, and throb, the other prevailed upon the fife to screech, uttering the very spirit of primeval conflict. Each man carried a great elephant-like shield and a long spear, wooden-shafted, steel-tipped. A belt had been added above the white native costume, and in each belt was a short, thick knife. The music of the fife and drum kept up, the fluctant, roaring throb was like the intolerable beating of blood in the ears and in the temples in times of desperate excitement and confusion—something terrible that our drums never get. Suddenly this ceased, the suppression relaxed, and the drum called out clear and strong, the fife rose piercingly, the warriors moved chanting up to their platform, and the war dance was on.

In and out through the strange mazes and figures, now advancing, now retreating, chanting weird measures and words—abrupt, confident, prolonged, wary, tentative—now threatening, now on the defense, they moved. Sometimes, as the music broke in sharp staccato strokes, they hurled the spears at an imaginary foe, they sent them hard against the circular target at the back of the court. They laughed at times a high, harsh laugh of triumph, that rang along the listener's nerves like nothing you may find within the bounds of civilization. They cried out in queer, native, animal-like sounds. Even there where no reality lay back of it, there was thrill to that dance. It was easy to imagine what its effect would be when these lithe, fine-muscled warriors were in reality dancing to induce the war fever: when they were genuinely whetting their knives and their souls for the savage conflict.

Latent Life in the Dust.

[London Answers:] The potentialities of life that lie in a few ounces of soil, as illustrated by a writer in Answers, may prove a matter of interest to gardeners and other botanical experts. "One year, in the month of February," says the writer alluded to, "Mr. Darwin removed from three different parts of a small pond three tablespoonfuls of mud that weighed in all six and three-quarter ounces. He placed it in a breakfast cup and kept it covered in his study for six months. At the end of that time he had removed from it 537 distinct plants.

"Another interesting experiment was carried out by a Scotch gentleman a few years ago. In a patch of soil taken from a hedge, about twenty-eight inches long by eleven inches wide and twenty-eight deep, he planted a dozen acorns, and took note of the number of plants that grew from seed naturally contained in the soil.

"At the end of a year he had taken out, as they came up, fifty-five plants; the following year, fifty-six more plants were removed, and in the two succeeding years, 311."

Work of the Submarine.

The submarine inventor, Simon Lake, says in the March number of the Century Magazine that this formidable weapon of naval warfare can by means of charts work its way on the bottom through the cables of mines or under nets or booms until its reaches the vicinity of the enemy's anchorage. Moreover, "if the enemy has its torpedo nets out, the submarine can creep up near the vessel, send a diver out, and attach a bottom mine under her, to be electrically exploded after the submarine has moved a safe distance away. If desired, a mine can be attached to the bottom of the surface vessel and exploded hours later by clockwork mechanism. In this manner mines can be placed under several ships, and all can be blown up simultaneously at a given hour, when the submarine may be miles away."

GAY LIFE IN SWEDEN.

Swedes Care Little About the War in Europe.

Eat, Drink and be Merry, the National Motto.

But Just the Same the Army Keeps Eye on Russia.

BY EGBERT PAYNE.

[SPECIAL FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

STOCKHOLM, April 20.—Sweden is [illegible] Europe's softest haven [illegible]. It's neutral. Neutral countries are calm, soothing, idyllic. All [illegible] peoples are psychically [illegible]. They think, dream, [illegible] only of war. Visitors must live [illegible] with them. To every tale of [illegible] iniquity you must go one [illegible], and if you don't swear (according to country) that Joffre, Grand Duke Nicholas or Hindenburg is [illegible] than Caesar, you are suspected [illegible] and secretly counted a spy. [illegible] strains your nerves. In sleepy, [illegible], unbloody Sweden you find [illegible] joy. Everything is so [illegible]. There are stolid newspapers [illegible] not scream; white bread without potatoes, and whiter, blue-eyed [illegible] who gush: "We love Americans." "Why do you love them?" [illegible], expecting the answer: "You are so good-looking." "Because [illegible] not in the war," they say. "[illegible] hate these fighters. They'll get [illegible] so they're no use as husbands. [illegible] Americans! Amerikansk [illegible] Ja!"

GERMAN LEANING.

Of course even Sweden lazily follows the war. Newspapers mention [illegible] and you see sig headlines: "Fram[illegible]" (Advance;) "Tillbaka" (Re[illegible]) "Seger!" (Victory.) But [illegible] chiefly regards the war as a [illegible] with complaints against both [illegible]. Sweden is rather pro-German. [illegible] city lives in Berlin's shadow. It gets Berlin newspapers a day [illegible] issue; London newspapers a [illegible] after issue, and no French newspapers at all. It takes Berlin books, [illegible] clothes. It's only British thing [illegible] "Long Way to Tipperary!" I [illegible] a ball at Hasselbacken's, where [illegible] played "A Long Way" six [illegible]. All the dancers joined in, [illegible] the English words. A Swede [illegible] no English is as rare as a [illegible] who starts supper without [illegible] (punch.)

BRITAIN ALSO HAS FRIENDS.

[illegible] is correctly neutral, but, [illegible] Foreign Minister Wallenberg, [illegible] millionaire of the Enskilda [illegible], is pro-British. His main [illegible] that the war should end. [illegible] buttonhole you and say: "[illegible] Tillbaka! Did you hear [illegible] Minister Wallenberg is ne[illegible] peace?" Sweden's pro-Ger[illegible] judiciously qualified by pro[illegible]. When Swedish exigencies [illegible] Sweden is not pro-German [illegible] started pro-German. Then [illegible] Wilhelm's mines sank three [illegible] off Finnish Mantyluoto [illegible] three days Sweden was pro-British. When Herr Ballin (inspired by Kaiser Wilhelm) collected $50,000 for the drowned sailors' wives, Sweden grew pro-German again. That is nice in the Swedes. They are an equipoised, [illegible] indifferent people who cut their sympathies according to their interests, have enough intellectual dexterity and psychical plasticity to change their sympathies once a week.

FRIVOLOUS DOGS.

Swedes are frivolous dogs. That is their greatest virtue. When Europe is mournful; when horrors abound; when every day you hear that Smith—or Smith's son—has been cut off in the prime of life, levity is pleasant. Swedes parade their levity. The one complaint that comes from their universally smiling lips is that stupid foreigners don't realize how frivolous Sweden is. The stupid foreigners [illegible] solid, bourgeois, dull, respectable Denmark and stolid Norway, and imagine that Sweden is the same. They err. Sweden is an airy, fluffy, aristocratic land, smacking more of French rococo eighteenth century [illegible] of tedious, leaden twentieth century Europe.

That is your first impression of Stockholm. Stockholm is full of good-looking, well-dressed men and pretty women. The women in type are North-German, but they are slimmer, [illegible] more distinguished—so distinguished that they look distinguished even in their very undistinguished clothes. Stockholm marriages are gay and bright—all Stockholm ladies [illegible] divorced, about to be divorced, or [illegible] they're not divorced. Stockholm [illegible] have no time for marriage, as [illegible] hours a day go in dressing, polishing, adorning their wonderful hair. [illegible] street has three houses marked "Damfrisering," which means "Ladies' Hairdresser." No women in the world [illegible] such lustrous hair; in theaters [illegible] rows of polished golden heads [illegible] like Prussian illumination rockets during a night attack.

ALL FOR SHOW.

Everything in Stockholm is frivolous, airy, graceful aristocratic. Take [illegible] stores! There are no shoe stores, [illegible] stores, because all the ground [illegible] are occupied by flower stores, [illegible] stores, stores of Swedish cut [illegible], of British silver, of fans, furs [illegible] diamond rings. Stockholm's funerals are stately enough to "make you [illegible] in love with easeful death." [illegible] are aristocratically standoffish. [illegible] don't ask you to dinner till [illegible] known you forty weeks. When [illegible] ask you, you find their apartments full of old portraits, silhouettes, [illegible] brass mirrors with amourettes, [illegible] old rococo chairs, marquetry [illegible] and Buhl. You see at once [illegible] Sweden is not a tiresome, bourgeois, up-to-date state like Prussia, [illegible] ancient, graceful, French-mar[illegible] land. Swedes are great spenders. After Moscow, Stockholm is Europe's dearest capital. Apartment [illegible] are twice Paris and Berlin rates. [illegible] live in debt, gamble on the Stock Exchange and live merrily, with [illegible], pleasantly, in true grand [illegible] style.

GIRLS ALL MAKE EYES.

Stockholm town is sunny, dry, clean (except after rain) and umbrageous. [illegible] lunch is over, all its pretty girls [illegible] the Strandvaegen; envy one [illegible] glistening heads, and make [illegible] at legation attaches. It is correct and even fashionable to make [illegible]. On Sunday the pretty girls [illegible] for Saltsjobaden by the sea, sail [illegible] across perilous ice, and [illegible] ski tours and eyes. Stockholm [illegible] theaters, bad moving-picture [illegible], one cabaret, and a fourth-rate [illegible] hall. It has a royal opera [illegible] by a syndicate subsidized by [illegible] state to the tune of $50,000, and managed by a courtier, Count Stedingk. The operahouse is plain outside and gorgeous within. It has the best purely native opera of any small state, played on a small stage, with first-class scenario and costumes. The bright particular stars are the baritone, John Forsell, and the soprano, Fanny Larsen. The best seats cost 87½ cents. Stockholm has a fine new dramatic theater, also subsidized by the state. It counts as Europe's best decorated theater. When it was building Sweden's cleverest artists did gratis work.

ROYALTY IS DEMOCRATIC.

Sweden's royal family is Stockholm's only democratic thing. That is, because it is plain Bernadotte descended from Napoleon's marshal, and still has in Southern France cousins who sell vegetables, flour and rice. King Gustav V looks like a Frenchman, also like a professor. Swedes respect him. He has character, they say; they back him in his brave stand for a bigger army, and they admire his skill at bridge. Crown Prince Gustav Adolph is married to Princess Margaret of Connaught. Princess Margaret is chiefly noted for the way she stands armed with a hockey stick on the ice in the stadium, and lets the other side's players hit the ball. King Gustav has trouble in keeping balance between the high-flying military courtiers who remember that Sweden was once a great power and might be again, and his modest bourgeois ministers who lunch every day in the cheap Rosenbad restaurant. There are military gentlemen (by title mostly counts) who despise the neutralist, bourgeois Cabinet, and would like Sweden to enter the glorious fray.

ARMY IS READY.

Sweden is mobilized. When the war began the reserves were called up; also the Landsturm. Stockholm, Goteborg and Malmo are fortified and mined. Sweden has got 400,000 trained soldiers, but she has not enough material for a war. What material she has is good. So are her men. They look smart in gray uniforms and three-cornered Frederician hats. Nominally, Sweden's war preparations are directed equally against all the belligerents, any one of whom might violate Swedish neutrality. In practice, they are directed against Russia, the only power which Sweden suspects.

Sweden's feeling against Russia is strong. It has three causes, old and new. Swedes never forget that it was Russia which dealt the first blow to their country's position as a great power, and that Russia a hundred years ago dealt the last blow by taking Finland. Then there is the modern question of Finland. The Swedes are Finnophiles. The Finns that count are of Swedish race. Every second Stockholmer has Finnish cousins. In peace time when the Finns want recreation they come to Stockholm. The Swedes resented the Bobrikoff despotism in Finland; and today they resent the aggravated despotism of Seyn. They would like to see Kaiser Wilhelm's hosts in Helsingfors. These are old grievances.

SUSPECT RUSSIA.

Most immediate of grievances is the suspicion that Russia wants to grab Swedish territory. The Swedes suspected Savinsky, a former Russian Minister resident, of espionage; there was a Russian military attache scandal, and when Russia's Grand Duchess, Maria Pavlovna, ran away from her Swedish husband, people accused her, too, of espionage. That was untrue. The war made acute the old Swedish belief that Russia wants an ice-free port on the Atlantic. Russia cannot export her grain by the Dardanelles. Vladivostok is too far; and the White Sea is closed for half the year. Russia has possible ice-free ports on the Murman coast, but these are undeveloped, no railroad runs near them, and skeptics doubt whether they are really ice-free. The Swedes suspect that Russia wants to cut across Swedish Lapland to Norway's port, Narwik; and while on the way to take possession of Sweden's phosphoric iron mines, the best that Europe has. Swedes pray that Russia may get the Dardanelles, so that she may keep quiet in the north. Suspicions have been strengthened since Russia started to build a railroad obliquely from Petrograd to the Swedish frontier. This would shorten by a third the railroad journey of an invading army. The Swedes retorted by fortifying Boden, near their northern frontier. Boden is now held by a strong garrison. Blackest of all are the suspicions spread by Explorer Sven Hedin, whose alarmist pamphlets got him expelled from the Russian Academy of Science. Hedin is now running a strong pro-German propaganda. He has frightened the judicious Swedes. They fear that his too-zealous championing may get their land in trouble.

FULL OF SPIES.

Sweden's lot is made harder by the position of Stockholm as the nearest neutral city to Russia and Germany. Stockholm is full of mysterious agents from both states. Germans come to buy Russian grain; and Russians come to buy German field glasses. Devious personages abound. You hear tales of vast smuggle deals; of phantom ships; of mysterious trainloads; of clerks in shipping offices who supply the enemy's consuls with copies of steamer manifests; of mine boats which lay mines in the paths of doubtful ships; of German financiers who speculate in Russian paper money; of Russian financiers who speculate in German paper money. Nominally, the smuggling business has been dealt a blow by Sweden prohibiting the export of grain. This makes it hard for Germany to buy Russian grain. Sweden has now a rule against letting contraband of war go through to Russia. But contraband goes both ways.

Sweden has a privileged position. She is Russia's only window toward Europe, and without her Russia, at least in winter, when the White Sea is closed, would be altogether cut off. Even now there is difficulty. There is no continuous railroad connection, and there is an intermittent steamer service which stops for months at a time. When war began, Abo and Hango, Finland's chief ports, were closed; and Russia's only communication with Europe was via the little Finnish port, Raumo, whence steamers want to Stockholm. German cruisers sank a Finnish steamer, and seized all enemy subjects on the Swedish steamers. After that, Russians and subjects of other anti-German powers had to travel around the Gulf of Bothnia, close to the Arctic Circle. That meant a sledge ride across two rivers and over a thirty-mile gap between the Swedish and Finnish railroads. Fifty thousand Russians, caught by the war in West Europe, traveled this path of tears. Next German mines blew up Swedish steamers and sea communication ceased. Now the steamers have started again from Stockholm to Abo, but the journey is risky and few take it. The others still go, as Stockholmers say, "by the North Pole."

MAY JOIN RAILROADS.

Sweden and Russia now want to link up their railroads. The Russians have taken the first step. They have built a branch track from Torneo, on the Gulf of Bothnia, to Finnish Karungi, which is on the River Tornea Elf, only two miles from Sweden's railroad terminus. If a bridge were built the two lines could be joined. For ten years Sweden has been agitated by bridge plans. She feared a bridge would facilitate the Russian invasion. Now the Swedish Parliament has approved of the bridge, but nothing will be done until after the war. Sweden is still a bit in a fright.

In spite of this war dread Sweden is a placid, pleasant place; and Stockholm is a pleasant town. It grows more and more indifferent to the war. Newspapers print less and less war news, and next to tedious bits on "Joffre's offensive" and "Hindenburg's new coup," you see notes on municipal loans, jokes on the masked ball at Hasselbacken, and full-length portraits of actresses with slim ankles. The true Swedish levity. Pleasant it is to find a land which is not full of the war; which has time, spirit, money and frivolity to think of nobler things.

BELGIAN LEADER CHIDES ENGLISH.

DECLARES FELLOW SOCIALISTS EXTREMELY LETHARGIC AS TO THE WAR.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONDON, April 15.—"We Belgians and French, who are now suffering most cruelly from German aggression, are grieved and astonished to find that in the eyes of a large part of the trade unionists of Great Britain the war now raging does not seem much more important than a Colonial expedition. In many places, indeed, the workingmen act exactly as if England were not engaged, as we are, in a struggle for life or death."

In these words M. Emile Vandervelde, the Belgian Minister of State and leader of the Socialist party in his own country, sums up his case against British Socialists in an open letter to the Daily Citizen. Hyndman, the leader of the social democratic party in England, had assured M. Georges Clemenceau, the French Socialist, that the vast majority of British workmen and Socialists strongly believed in the war. Vandervelde denies Hyndman's statement, adding:

"I have even been told that in certain factories of arms and ammunition where there are Belgians and English, the English advise the Belgians not to exert their full strength so as to avoid intensive exploitation of their powers of labor. Such action is legitimate in time of peace. If persisted in now it is obviously because the workers of England do not sufficiently realize the gravity of the situation.

"But we may ask if there is not another cause—if there is not in certain quarters some bad feeling, and if the propaganda of peace at any rate is not in part responsible for a crisis which Earl Kitchener deplores and Lloyd George strongly denounces."

Vandervelde points to the resolution adopted by the international labor party at London, declaring victory for German imperialism would be the downfall of liberty and democracy in Europe, and asks Keir Hardie and the labor party leaders what is being done to carry out this resolution. It is the duty of these leaders, Vandervelde urges, to enforce the seriousness of the war upon the laboring men of Great Britain.

NEW CONGO RAILROAD.

Belgians Complete the Line from Stanley Falls to Lake Tanganyika and the Lualaba River District.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

HAVRE, April 10.—The Belgian Minister of the Colonies has received news from the Belgian Congo of the completion of the railway linking the Lualaba River with Lake Tanganyika. This is a notable addition to railway communications in Africa. It will now be possible to travel from the Stanley Falls to Lake Tanganyika in seven days. The railway is also important strategically.

There has been some fighting recently in Belgian Congo. A fresh attack by the Germans north of Lake Kivu has been repulsed by the Belgian colonial forces, and the raiders have been chased back into their own territory.

Cottonseed Meal a Good Food.

[Dallas News:] Cottonseed meal as a human food is being urged by Dr. G. S. Fraps, State chemist and chemist to the experiment station at the agricultural and mechanical college. Cottonseed meal is urged as a substitute, not for flour, but for meat, providing the same elements necessary for the proper support and development of the human system as does meat.

"Cottonseed meal flour is now being used extensively in Texas, and in view of the high price of meat and the general financial condition of the people of the State, this flour should come into a much wider use," says Dr. Fraps. "It is palatable, and if eaten in the proper ration, makes an excellent substitute for meat."

FOR HOLLYWOOD SITE.

Large Residence of Attractive Exterior and Interior Finish to be Started at Once on Taft Avenue.

One of the largest residences now being planned for Hollywood locations is that to be built by P. T. Durfy at No. 1941 Taft avenue. The house, which will contain ten rooms and two baths, will occupy a sightly lot 65x135 feet in size and will face east. Work on the place is to be begun at once.

The dwelling will have plastered exterior walls and a red tile cornice. The finish downstairs will be in oak and cedar, while that of the second floor will be in white enamel. Especial attention has been paid to the requirements of light and air. Loy Lester Smith is the architect.

CALL THEM LANGLEYS.

The Government Airships Should be Named After the Late Smithsonian Professor and Inventor.

[Washington Star:] The reading world has become familiar with the word "Taube," and understands that it stands for a German aeroplane. Men read every day of flying machines that are called a "Wright," a "Curtis," a "Bleriot," and a "Farman," a "Bristol," a "Morane-Saulnier," and other names fastened to a 'plane by a builder or an aviator who has succeeded in fashioning a model differing from some other model.

No flying machine is called a "Langley," in commemoration of the creative and original service to aviation rendered by the late Prof. Samuel Pierrepont Langley of Washington. Two citizens of the capital have joined in the suggestion—perhaps it might even be called a movement—to have the generic name "Langley" applied to flying machines that are heavier than air.

The suggestion seems to have been brought forward first by Col. Archibald Hopkins of Washington, and Frank Warren Hackett has seconded the motion, suggesting that perhaps the commander-in-chief of the army and navy, upon this subject being brought to his attention, might favor Col. Hopkins's proposal and give directions that henceforth the government airships shall be called "Langleys." Mr. Hackett has written that "the unselfish devotion of the late Samuel Pierrepont Langley to the solution of the problem of aerial flight—to the discovery of the principle—has been admitted and admired by all well-informed Americans and that our country ought to enjoy the honor that would attach to the coming into use of this term."

THE VALUE OF HOPE

Is the Source of the Purest and Holiest Passions and Sustains Man in Adversity.

[Collier's:] Without hope this voyaging sphere on which man lives would be but a derelict, and our lives empty and all but unendurable. For hope is the great rudder to all humanity. Hope wakens in the child even before the sense of reason; it fills youth with golden-hued visions; it lures maturity on to the indomitable endeavor, which is greater than mere accomplishment. Nor does it even forsake old age. Like the lamp light streaming through the window pane which brought you safely home when a boy, hope lights the path. Even unattained, it burns quenchlessly. It is more intangible than faith, for faith is trust in what is, but hope is confidence in what is to be. Even to write of it without dropping into vague figures is like trying to express the nature of music by means of algebraic symbols. Hope is sometimes the parent of selfish ambition, but it is also the source of all the purest and holiest passions. It fills the heart of the father when he looks at the baby in his arms. And when this child has become a man the same fire burns within as he gazes down upon his son. From generation to generation it passes—inextinguishable. It makes all life like the laboratory of the alchemist, in which what is dross seems just on the point of being transmitted to gold. But, unlike the alchemist's toil, hope is never wasted, for—though the phrase is hackneyed—it is what makes life worth living.

CHOLERA AND SUPERSTITION.

In Russia Peasants Distrusted the Doctors, Whom They Actually Accused of Causing the Disease.

[London Chronicle:] Cholera has usually found a useful ally in superstition. In the old days the disease was believed to lie bottled up in volcanoes and to be released by eruptions. The most effectual way to avoid it was to sleep in bed with your head due south. In Russia during the terrible epidemic six years ago the peasants would not trust the doctors, whom they actually accused of causing the disease, but drank a fearful mixture of tar, rosin and petroleous as preventives, and fired guns from the doors and windows to scare the cholera away. What spreads the disease along the caravan routes of Asia is the habit of washing dirty clothes in the drinking wells.

Rooks were the birds whose conduct in connection with the cholera was observed in Ireland in 1832. According to the contemporary Dublin Morning Register, immediately the cholera came all the birds vanished from the rookery in the Marquis of Sligo's demesne, one of the largest in Ireland. "For three weeks, during which the disease raged violently, these noisy tenants of the trees completely deserted their lofty habitations. In the meantime the revenue police found immense numbers of them lying dead upon the shore near Erris, about ten miles distant. Upon the decline of the malady several of the old birds again appeared in the neighborhood of the rookery, but some of them seemed unable, through exhaustion, to reach their nests."

Mortality.

RUSSIA HALVES ITS DEATH RATE.

Suppression of Vodka Sale Believed the Cause.

Great Market in the Empire is Open for America.

Germany's Trade Domination May not be Regained.

BY CURTIS BROWN.

[SPECIAL FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONDON, April 17.—The suppression of the sale of vodka in Russia apparently has cut in half the death rate of that country. This statement was made recently to an American acquaintance of mine by F. N. Corse, the manager of the New York Life Insurance Company in Petrograd. My friend was not sure that Mr. Corse would wish his words to be published, but I am giving readers of this correspondence the benefit of the doubt.

What the American insurance magnate said was, in effect, this: "Judging by our records from all parts of Russia, since the beginning of the present year, the death rate throughout the country is just about half of the normal. This is keeping the deaths due to the war out of the calculation, of course, and the only conclusion we can draw is that the stopping of the sale of vodka, the known cause of so many crimes and suicides, is responsible for this seeming miracle."

The acquaintance who reported this announcement, the significance of which can hardly be exaggerated at a time when the drink question is the all-absorbing one of the hour in this country, and, to a lesser degree, in France, is an American graduate of Oxford who is now here on his way from Petrograd to the United States with a large sum of money to his credit, all of which he is empowered to spend in buying supplies of various kinds that are urgently needed in Russia.

AGENT OF INTERESTS.

He isn't representing the Russian government officially, but is the agent of big interests which are closely in touch with official circles—so it is much the same thing—and on behalf of the latter he will make heavy purchases of food, clothing, machinery and certain chemical products, if the latter can be had, which appears somewhat doubtful at present.

These supplies, by the way, are destined for the civilian population, and not for the Russian army, whose equipment, this buyer declared, is now substantially complete. It would have been considerably simpler to have made the purchases in Great Britain, had this been practicable, which it wasn't, for the simple reason that every ounce, inch and drop of the supplies wanted was bought up months ago.

One wishes it were possible to disclose the identity of this American traveler, who sails for New York next week, but I had to promise to keep him anonymous, since he does not yearn, as he puts it, to be spied upon from the moment he lands in the United States until he leaves it, nor does he court the risk of being "done in" by some enemy of Russia. It may be stated, however, that he is a Nebraskan who graduated from Oxford some eight or nine years ago, who since then has been engaged in business both here and on the continent, and who is married to the daughter of a distinguished foreign diplomatist at the Czar's court.

RUSSIA VAST MARKET.

"I doubt if it is generally realized either in the United States or Great Britain," he said, "what a vast market for foreign products exists in Russia, and this for the reason that, up to now, practically the whole of it has been in German hands. Russia is practically dependent on the outside world for manufactured articles, and the war has provided the trade rivals of the Fatherland with a literally golden opportunity. In connection with Germany's trade domination in Russia the German banks have for years had a highly-organized system of giving credit to Russians, and it is partly in the hope of laying the foundations of a similar arrangement with bankers in the United States that I am now on the way there."

"How is the public in Russia taking the war? Why, quietly, but with confidence, I should say. There is no talk of beating Germany inside such or such a time, but just a firm belief in ultimate victory. As for the Russian soldiers, they seem to feel no animus against the Germans whatever. They are just out to do a big job that has got to be done and are doing it, on the whole, good-temperedly."

SLAVS LIKE BAYONET.

This young American and his wife have both been working in the American hospital at Petrograd, and he has many curious things to tell of the Russian wounded. The Russian soldier, he says, simply loves to fight with the bayonet, which, by the way, is always "fixed" ready for business. One day my acquaintance asked a big, good-humored Slav warrior how many men he had killed since the war began?

"Three!" was the answer.

"What," gasped the questioner, why you've been shooting away for nearly six months!"

"Oh, shooting!" repeated the other with contempt. "I don't count shooting. I mean that I've bayoneted three!"

"Sometimes," added this wounded warrior, gravely, "when we surprise the Germans in the trenches, they've not time to fix their bayonets, which they wear by their sides, you know. In that case, why, we do not kill them!"

"There is no need for any 'Back to the Land' movement in Russia," said my American friend, "because it is the one desire of any one who has started 'on the land' to get back there. Men from the country will go to the towns, start business and, after being there three or four years, be on the point of getting really well-to-do, but then, all of a sudden, the craving for 'the land' will become too strong to be resisted any longer, and back he will go, letting everything slide. The wounded soldiers in hospital, too, talk about almost nothing but farming.

"'If the war were over, and I were at home,' one of them will say, 'I should be sowing now, out of a basket.'"

"'What!' another will exclaim, 'do you sow out of a basket? Why I always sow out of a sack.' And then for the rest of the afternoon the whole ward will be arguing as to whether it is better to sow out of a basket or out of a sack!"

SEVEN MILLION HUNGRY POLES.

Two Million of Them Jews in Dire Need of Food.

Warsaw Citizens' Committee Sends Relief Appeal.

Want Americans to Rally to Prevent Suffering.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

LONDON, April 22.—Seven million Poles, of whom 2,000,000 are Jews, are in dire need of food. This statement was made today by Hermann Laundau, a Jewish philanthropist associated with various Jewish charities in London.

"Of these sufferers, 5,500,000 are east of the Vistula River and 1,500,000 west of the river," Mr. Laundau said. "The Jews are even poorer than the Gentiles, because of the boycott against the Jews in part of Poland before the beginning of the war, which impoverished thousands who otherwise would have been able to provide for their families.

"Political and religious prejudice against the Jews also renders their condition worse. In parts of Poland evacuated by the Germans, many Jews are living on potato peels and garbage left by the army.

"The Citizens' Committee at Warsaw is the only large agency for affording relief for refugees. Although the membership of this committee consists of four Jews and six Gentiles, it has been impossible to employ workers who would deal fairly with the Jews. Consequently, another committee has been organized under the chairmanship of Baron Gunzzurg to administer relief without regard to religious faith.

"Several hundred refugees from Poland, who are well to do, made their way to London by way of Petrograd, Finland, Sweden and Norway. They brought terrible stories of the sufferings of the Poles in the ruined cities and devastated country.

"The Russian government has been considerate in its treatment of Jews in the portions of Poland occupied by Russian troops, but the Jews are suffering greatly from persecution in the portion of Galicia which Austria still holds, as Austria suspects all Poles of disloyalty.

"I hear that Americans are rallying to aid the Poles and I know that their needs will be supplied, when the world realizes how terrible is their plight. Communication with Poland and Galicia is so difficult that it is impossible for the world to learn immediately of the awful suffering there."

The Sweat of the Farmer's Brow.

[Philadelphia Ledger:] When it comes to reserving grand stand seats in the sun, the Kaiser cannot have a monopoly. The American farmer is entitled to a place in the front row.

At the present moment our farmers are feeding 100,000,000 foreigners. They have all other aiders backed off the emergency map by the immensity of their work. It takes about 1,500,000 bushels of wheat to supply wasteful Americans wtih their own daily bread. In some recent weeks we have exported just about that much more to frugal Europeans.

An easy sum in arithmetic shows that by the sweat of our farmer's brows last summer 100,000,000 hungry folks beyond the Atlantic are now eating their daily bread. I should say that nearly breaks a record for foreign mission work.

Evading a Prohibitory Law.

[Bellaire (Ohio) Cor. New York Sun:] A novel method employed in shipment of beer into West Virginia has caused interest on the part of residents of this town and Benwood, across the river in West Virginia. A brewing company hired men to drag kegs of beer, tied together with a rope and attached to the ferry.

As the ferry was crossing the river the kegs were floated across by the men and upon reaching the West Virginia side they were dragged up the bank and along the streets. The brewing company people say that this method is one of many ways of overcoming the common-carrier feature of the prohibition law which prohibits the shipment of liquor by train, street cars, wagons and other vehicles. It is said that hundreds of kegs have been taken into West Virginia territory by this method.

NATURAL FORTIFICATIONS.

Under Former Conditions the Sea Surpassed the Alps as a Protective Barrier from the Enemy.

[New York Press:] A great British statesman once made the phrase, "a scientific frontier," familiar to newspaper readers, but the country which can boast not a scientific frontier merely, but a natural one, has a huge advantage in time of war.

That is why the little isle of Britain, "set in the silver sea," as the national poet says, is so secure from foreign invasion.

Why can Italy at this moment maintain her neutrality in spite of the pressure which Germany and Austria must undoubtedly exert to bring her into the fight? One word suffices to explain the possibility of this attitude. It is the Alps. That mighty barrier, built by nature, those snow-capped peaks and wild passes make Northern Italy almost impregnable. For the rest, Italy is a peninsula—the leg of Europe—and she knows that as long as she keeps out of the melee her coasts are as good as if protected by the presence of the British and French fleets.

Almost all the countries which have good natural frontiers have at one time or another been foremost among the world's powers.

Although today Spain has fallen from her high estate, yet it may still be taken as a truism that there is not another country on the continent—except, perhaps, Italy—which is more naturally adapted for attack or defense.

The British race could hold Spain against the world.

The true boundary of Germany on the west is the Rhine, that mighty river which has been crossed oftener by armies than any other river in the world. Germany really forsook her ancient frontier when she annexed Alsace and Lorraine in 1871. The river of romance and beauty is the natural frontier of that empire, and if no foe may cross it the Fatherland is really safe. The sea takes the first place in the category of natural boundaries, a big mountain range comes second and a big river third.

An object lesson in the value of all three is presented in India. Why is India the jewel of Asia? Because it is contained in a casket the base of which is the ocean, the lid of which is the biggest range of mountains in the world, and the key of which is the River Indus.

Is it an accident that Japan is the first Asiatic country to emulate the western world? Certainly not. She owes it certainly to her clever people; but the thing that made it possible was the fact that her frontier is of the first rank of effectiveness, the sea.

It is the most remarkable fact in the whole world of mankind that betwixt the vast Dominion of Canada and the United States there is not a fort or redoubt or gun or military station along all that 4000 miles of frontier.

THE LEAN YEARS.

The Good-Souled Man Who Likes to Go Back Among the Joints and Encourage Those Beginning Life.

[New York Sun:] The man who was doing the talking has an income of 50,000 or 60,000 a year—dollars, not cents—the result of some thirty-odd years of successful business in New York. He came to this town when he was about 18 years, and during the first few years he was not in the same class which he honors today. Indeed, there were moments when he was perilously close to the bread line, but he stood by and won out in the end.

"When I first came to New York," he was saying, "prospects were not rosy and there were times when I was tempted to give it up and go back to the farm, but I'd get a full meal by-and-by and put temptation behind me.

"During the first five years I was associated with half a dozen or so of young fellows about my own age and of equal financial standing. At the end of the first year I had a steady job with a future to it and times were easier, but we did not live in a fashionable neighborhood and we knew all the table d'hotes and other Bohemian hangouts in town, and our society doings were confined to those localities. Well, as the years went by and we began to find our places in the sun, we drifted apart, some of us dying or disappearing and the others, including myself, getting into the money class.

"Now and then I see one of them, or hear from another, and every one of them says he got all he wanted of that kind of life and never wants to come near it again. But I am not that way at all. I like to talk about the lean times and very frequently I go back among the joints, and nothing pleases me more than to get a bunch around me of the beginners and the has beens and the never will bes and pay for their dinners and their drinks and cigars and loan them a dollar or two if they need it, and they most all do.

"I remember how I would have liked that sort of man around when I was making my start, and I know that to all intents and purposes they are the same now as they were in my early days. It does me good to be reminded of the lean years, and I know it does the lean chaps good for me to mix with them and give them a small look in on my luck.

"And by the same token I don't have as high regard for my old companions as I would if they came down from their high places and went among the low again. I'm giving a dinner to ten regulars tonight at a 50-cent table d'hote place and I invited two of the fellows who used to be glad to eat that kind of dinner, but they declined my invitation.

"Will I have a good time? Well, you can bet I'll have a better time than if I put on my glad rags and went up town to dine with my high-toned pals of other days."

PREVENT WASTE AT THE FRONT.

Many Articles Thrown Away by Wanton Soldiers.

Spirit of Recklessness is Pervading All Ranks.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONDON, April 10.—An efficiency expert who has been assigned to special duty at the front studying possible economies in equipment and supplies reports that there are endless opportunities for preventing waste. He says these opportunities would be just as profitable to the sum total of production as a 10 or 20 per cent. speeding up of the overworked factory hands in Manchester or Liverpool.

"To most laymen and many soldiers war is synonymous with waste," writes the expert, "and the question of preventing it hardly enters into the calculation of the average man.

"When war comes a complete metamorphosis takes place. Necessity is mistress of the situation. All the checks and penalties of peace time are inoperative. What is wanted must be forthcoming, and of these wants the executive officer is the sole judge. There is no time for inquiries; no opportunity for penalties. Is it human that the average man, up to now bound hand and foot by regulations, will have any coscientious regard for the virtues of economy?

"This spirit of recklessness permeating all ranks is largely accountable for the preventible waste which every thinking soldier knows exists in the army today. A visit to the advance ordnance depot is instructive to the man of business or the student of economy. In walks a quartermaster or his deputy, intent on getting what he can. He probably has requisitions signed by his commanding officer for what he wants; in addition he has one or two blank forms signed, which he will complete if he sees anything in the depot that he thinks he would like. His characteristic attitude is not 'What do I really want with a due regard for economy?' In fact, he wants all he can get without regard to the wants of others. It is not surprising therefore, that equipment so easily procured will be carelessly expended.

"The writer has seen good soiled clothing burning on a heap of refuse because it was easier to draw new than to wash the old. He has seen articles exchanged for food with civilians or given away as souvenirs; he has seen articles left in the mud in vacated camps; ammunition trampled under foot in the trenches or scattered along the road. Some of this is inevitable in war; but not to the extent that at present exists.

"There is hardly a Belgian in the area occupied by our army that is not wearing some article of our clothing. This same disregard of economy is extended to the expenditure of ammunition, which within limits, can be saved just as well as clothing, food or other munitions of war.

"It is easy to prove the case, but more difficult to propound a remedy. The hardened official will contend that waste, if excessive, is entirely due to defective discipline, and that it is only required to tighten the discipline to stop the leakage. But while punishment of offenders may be good, prevention of the offense is better, and the remedy is to be found, not in adding to the terrors of discipline, but in embodying the cult of economy in the fabric of army training. Supervision and accountancy must also help.

"The reform could be effected after this manner: All hard and fast rules for the replacement and renewal of equipment should be abolished. The responsible officer should be allowed to draw what he wants at his discretion. Each unit should be charged up with the book value of what it consumes; it should be closely inspected at uncertain intervals to see that everything is up to standard and serviceable. Finally, due credit should be given to the unit and commanding officer who produces the same or better results at a lower book cost. By this means score within wise limits would be given for the exercise of administrative skill and closer individual attention on the part of all ranks would result.

"A method such as this, although outlined for peace, should also be maintained during war, to the extent that the wastage of each unit should be tabulated in the base offices and an average for similar units arrived at. Inquiry could then be made into the case of such units as unduly exceeded the average, due allowance being made for special work done by the unit."

COMMON ERRORS CORRECTED.

Many Mistakes That are Often Made in Writing and Finally Become Part of Common Language.

[The Writer:] In speaking of transcontinental travel now that the big fairs in California are open, care should be taken in using the phrase "transcontinental roads." There are no transcontinental railways in the United States—that is, no railway systems that run completely across the continent—though there is one in Canada.

Lloyd George writes his name without the hyphen that American papers generally use.

Criticism need not be unfavorable, even if it generally is. To criticise is to examine with reference to an established standard, so that the word can be used in connection with a favorable judgment, as in the sentence, "The dramatic editor, having had supper with the star the night before, wrote a favorable criticism of the play."

The proper title of William II. is "the German Emperor," not "the Emperor of Germany."

It is better to say "He is ill," than to say "He is sick." but instead of saying "He is an ill man," it is better to say "He is a sick man."

"English" is properly applied to an inhabitant of England. "British" is the word that should be used in speaking of one belonging to Great Britain. The British army, for instance, is made up of English, Irish, Welsh and Scottish troops, together with the men from Canada and India.

"Prior to this time" is a long-winded way of saying "Before this time," or "Up to now."

When a reporter speaks of the "demise" of a prominent citizen the assumption is that he means his death.

A PRICELESS COIN.

A Norwegians Gratitude to Sir Frederick Treves for a Successful Surgical Operation.

[Pearson's:] Thanks to Sir Frederick Treves, the famous surgeon, the British War Office has given its approval to a scheme whereby in future every British soldier at the front will carry in his kit his own supply of iodine for use in case he is wounded.

Sir Frederick is greatly beloved among the poor, and he has told a touching story of the devotion of one of his poor patients. Some years ago he operated successfully on a Norwegian in a London hospital and cured him completely of an illness which had been pronounced incurable.

Some weeks later the man visited Sir Frederick at his private house and offered him a small coin. The great surgeon at first declined to take it, but the man persisted.

"It is now three years since I left my native land," he said, "and before I came away my wife gave me this coin and told me never to part with it unless I was starving. It is not worth anything to you, but its value to me I cannot express. When I was in hospital I made up my mind that you should have it. Since you cured me I have been starving, but I would not part with the coin because I wanted you to have it as a small return for saving my life."

"What magnificent piece of jewelry," asks Sir Frederick, "could equal the value of that coin?"

SAVING VENUS OF MILO.

Art Treasures of the Louvre were Carefully Hidden from the Germans during the last War.

[Youth's Companion:] When, during the war of 1870, the German army drew near the French capital, one of the first measures the Parisians took was to place the art treasures of the Louvre in safety. The paintings of Raphael, Titian, Paolo, Veronese, Rembrandt and Rubens were carefully packed and shipped to Brest. There they could, if necessary, be put on shipboard and taken from the country.

It was not so easy to save the pieces of marble statuary, for their weight and fragility made them difficult to handle; but the French determined that the famous Venus of Milo, at least, should not fall into the hands of the Prussians.

So they took her down from her pedestal, and laid her in a casket carefully padded and wrapped. At night the casket was taken out through a secret door, and hid secretly in the cellar of the police prefecture, at the end of a certain secret passage way.

They walled in the casket and cleverly gave the wall an appearance of great age and dilapidation. In front of this wall they laid a number of valuable public documents, so that if they should happen to be found, their importance would lead the discoverers to think there was nothing else hidden there. In front of the papers they built another wall. Here the Venus of Milo remained, much to the distress of those patriotic Parisians who did not know where she was, and supposed that she had been stolen, through the siege of the city by the Germans and through the disorders of the Commune.

One day the prefecture caught fire, and was pretty completely destroyed. The distress of those who knew that the Venus was concealed there can be imagined. As soon as the fire was extinguished, they hastened to the sinking ruins, and after some digging found the casket, buried in heaps of dirt and stones, but uninjured.

It is understood that the Venus has gone into hiding again this year, not to reappear until peace is restored and Paris is free from danger of the invader.

TREES ARE GIGANTIC PUMPS.

One Elm Found to Raise Two Hundred and Sixty Barrels of Water a Day.

[Fruit Grower:] Prof. Pierce tells of a Washington elm which possesses 7,000,000 leaves exposed, a foliage surface of five acres, which gives off to the air over 6000 quarts of water each day, or 260 barrels of water every summer's day, and that this tree is located near paved streets and cement sidewalks.

The question arises, where does this vast amount of water come from? It is assumed that many city trees perish from lack of water owing to water-tight pavement and water-tight sidewalks.

In answering this question it must not be forgotten that the roots of any tree, especially the elm tree, extend a long distance, thus encroaching upon the lawn soils adjacent the sidewalks and the streets.

It must also be remembered that there are many subterranean springs existing in cities and towns as well as on farms.

Notwithstanding these explanations we wonder at the capacity of this big tree to gather moisture to its roots, partly roofed over by city pavements. It illustrates the fact that there is much yet to be learned about root growth and tree growth generally.

After being told that one tree throws into the air 260 barrels of water every summer's day we may get some idea of the reason for the coolness of the air in the forest or beneath shade trees growing in the field or upon our lawns. Shade trees are indeed more productive of coolness on a summer's day than would be a gigantic fan.

THE MACHINE GUN.

Cartridges are Fed from a Metal Strip and Can be Fired at Rate of Seven Hundred a Minute.

[Youth's Companion:] The machine gun, which pours forth a direct hail of small-caliber bullets, is one of the deadliest weapons of modern warfare. From the clumsy Gatling gun has come the modern "automatic," mounted on a light tripod, and weighing less than forty pounds. All the armies use these guns, which, although they vary somewhat in type, are essentially alike in their mechanism and in their effectiveness.

In the Benet-Mercie automatic machine gun of the French army a metal feed strip, or clip, that contains thirty ordinary army rifle cartridges is inserted in a slot on the right side of the gun. As the trigger is pulled the bolt mechanism is released, and, guided by the main firing spring, pushes a cartridge into the rifle chamber. The instant the cartridge is in place the breech mechanism locks and the charge is exploded. On its way through the rifle barrel, a little of the gas from the exploded powder is diverted through a hole in the side of the barrel, and so acts on a piston as to force the bolt mechanism back and to compress the main spring. In returning, the bolt mechanism pulls the empty shell from the chamber and throws it out below, so that it does not interfere with the new cartridge that is now forced in from above. The mechanism is so perfect that the operation described takes place in a small fraction of a second and the bullets issue from the mouth of this deadly weapon at the rate of 700 a minute.

STRESS OF WAR LIGHTLY FELT.

Austrian Bankers Say They Have Plenty of Money.

Recent Loan is Paid Entirely Out of the Reserves.

Interest Easily Met from the Ordinary Taxes.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

VIENNA, April 10.—The official Fremdenblatt publishes an article by the director of the Allgemeine Verkehrsbank on the financial defensive power of Austria-Hungary, in which he asserts that the economic system of the dual monarchy has proven and will prove equal to the great tasks imposed upon it by the war.

To the most intensive exploitation of the available working forces, to the willing submission of the people to national regulation of nourishment and to the sound basis of the industrial and economic life, he said, is due the fact that "nowhere a trace of a crisis shows itself."

Pointing to the success of the Austro-Hungarian war loan he says that the decrease in bank deposits as a result of this loan amounted to only 3 per cent., or 600,000,000 crowns ($150,000,000) "which in view of deposits of 20,000,000,000 crowns justifies the assertion that the war loan for the greater part was paid from out of our economic reserves so that the deposit accounts in Austro-Hungarian banks remain intact.

"As a matter of fact," he continues, "the deposits in the larger Vienna private banks, not considering the Postal Savings Banks, increased during the first two months of 1915 by 110,000,000 crowns, i. e., 7.1 per cent. The ratio was undoubtedly higher in the provinces.

"A further war loan is at the moment not a matter of actual occurrence, but it is certain if a new appeal to the people should be necessary, the next war loan would be floated on terms even more favorable than the first. For the present provision has been made for immediate needs by the issuance of 3,500,000,000.

"In case a longer duration of the war has to be reckoned with, and the costs are estimated at 12,000,000,000 crowns, the country would have to raise additional taxes of about [illegible] 000,000.

"The Austro-Hungarian debt at the end of 1913 amounted to 18,000,000,000 crowns, of which 10,000,000,000 comprise railroad investments, so that more than half of the national debt consists of productive expenditure. The budget receipts of the two countries since 1900 increased nearly 3,000,000,000. In Austria the annual taxable income of the people was estimated last was nearly 7,000,000,000. The wealth of the people of Austria is estimated at 100,000,000,000 crowns. The normal value of the agricultural production has risen to nearly 5,000,000,000 yearly. The elasticity of the State budgets of both monarchies therefore permits the covering of the interest requirements of the war costs without any burden whatever to the economic life of the country."

The article controverts the assertion that Austria-Hungary is seeking its money requirements in connection with the war by drawing on the Austro-Hungarian Bank, and points out that the financial department had received money neither from the bank nor from the Postal Savings Bank, but that in issuing the war loan it had relied upon an Austrian bank syndicate which together with a Hungarian syndicate of equal rank was sufficient for the credit requirements of the entire country and would show itself equal to any further tasks.

"The injuries done to the economic life of Austria-Hungary by this terrible war," he says, "are infinitesimal compared with those wrought in other countries, because the economic life of this country is based chiefly on its own home resources, and because our part in the affected international traffic is only modest."

The article concludes as follows: "That the monarchy heretofore had to adapt herself to conditions and build up its economic system from its own resources proves of great advantage now. She can draw the powerful means for the conduct of the war from her own national resources and will also be strong enough to meet the great tasks of the ensuing peace."

Mosquitoes at North Pole.

[Chicago Journal:] The presence of mosquitoes in myriads within the bare uninhabited Arctic circle is largely in some degree a mystery. The mosquito is a bloodsucker, but in the unvisited plains he is for the most part and of strict necessity a vegetarian. A few birds excepted (and the birds are furnished with impervious feathers) there is no local life whatever. The Lapp in summer drives his reindeers to the sea, and no native crosses the field if he can help it. Yet in this region, "seemingly the most unsuitable for its effective working," the mosquito flourishes, "a primeval and enduring curse, inexplicably developed to the utmost."

The Princess Islands.

[London Chronicle:] The Princes Islands, in the Sea of Marmora, are said to have been fortified, as the last defense of Constantinople. They have been a place of exile in all ages. In Byzantine times the savage Empress [illegible] was shut up in a nunnery upon Prinkipo, the chief island. At the time of the Young Turk revolution the worst officials of the Yildiz gang were interned here, though they were politely termed "guests of the isle." Afterward the Marmora Islands became the dumping ground of the wretched dogs of Constantinople, which the reformers did not dare directly to put to death, though they had no scruples about leaving them to starve and perish of hunger, tempered by cannibalism.

The Speed of Animals.

[St. Louis Globe Democrat:] It is believed that no animal has ever exceeded the speed which can be attained by the horse. Instantaneous photographs of one famous racer showed the full length of a complete stride to be about twenty-[illegible]. The hare has not, in reality, the speed of the dog. The dog, on the other hand, does not attain the speed of the horse. The giraffe is said to run at the rate of fifteen yards per second under the most favorable conditions. The elephant, going at the rate of [illegible] yards a second, carries a weight approximating to that carried by horses.

Compensation.

BRITISH WAGES RAISED BY WAR.

Increased Cost of Living is More than Overcome.

Half a Million Workers Have Reaped Big Benefit.

London's Pauper Population is Greatly Lowered.

[BY A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONDON, April 15.—War as a wage payer has brought to a considerable portion of the laboring classes in England some compensation for the increased cost of living. Social workers estimate that the increased cost of living average is at least 10 per cent, while the average increase in wages is not over 5 per cent. The ample supply of overtime work available in most trades makes it easy for most workmen to more than even matters.

The upward tendency of the English workingman's wages was very marked in March. According to the official Board of Trade reports, the increases granted during the month reached a total of nearly $365,000. The number of work people who shared the increase was 440,000.

WAGE INCREASE.

Increased wages in some of the leading branches of industry are summed up briefly as follows:

Railway men—All-round increase of cents a week.

Longshoremen—Increases varying from 25 cents to $2 a week.

Riflemen—War bonus of 75 cents and upwards.

Carpenters—War bonus of $1 to a week.

General laborers—Increases of 75 cents to $1.50 a week.

Miners—Employers generally offer per cent. advance in pay; miners demand 20 per cent.

Postal employees, including telephone and telegraph workers—Increase of $1 a week has been demanded.

workers—Increases averaging a week.

Tailors—Increase of $1.25 a week asked, but employers' offer of 75 cents accepted pending negotiations.

Textile workers—Bonus for overtime work in factories doing work on army clothing.

Boot and shoe workers—War bonus of per cent. to 10 per cent. granted in places.

smiths—Average wage before, $9; now, $12.50.

—Some increases; 180,000 assistants have asked readjustment of wages; similar movements in other branches.

ring and building trades some sections have secured increases.

THE UNEMPLOYED.

The number of unemployed in Great Britain shows a large falling off in last February and March as compared with the corresponding months of last year. The Board of Trade labor gazette prints statistics from the government's 403 labor exchanges, according to which there were names on the register last month against 100,616 for February and for March of last year. The number of vacancies in employment reported to the exchanges also show an increase over the late winter of 1915, having a daily average of 5746, a hundred more than the average for February and 1600 more than the average for March of last year.

London passed through the winter with fewer cases of destitution demanding relief from the poor funds than any winter within the memory of the present poor law officials. The war, in fact, has enabled many thousands of people belonging to the classes which usually must be helped, to dispense with this kind of relief, and has even put them in possession of funds more than sufficient to meet their needs.

London's pauper population has decreased steadily during the past three months.

PAUPERS DECREASE.

The London Guardians, at the beginning of 1915, were providing for 000 paupers. This was a decrease of 2500 from the corresponding date a year before. April 1 showed the total decreased by a further 3000.

It is evident, however, that these decreases are in part at least deceptive, being accounted for, not by improved conditions, but by the fact that a great deal of relief is being administered by new agencies, such as the special war relief funds and the old age pensions.

CHICAGO'S LABOR CONTEST.

Sixteen Thousand Carpenters and Four Thousand Buildings Affected by the Unionites' Demands.

[New York Journal of Commerce:] One would think it would be obvious to a very moderate degree of intelligence that this is not a favorable time for striking for higher wages in the building trades. In Cook county, which contains the city of Chicago, a strike of carpenters at the refusal of an increase of 5 cents an hour has been met by retaliation in the form of a lockout of all the members of the organization responsible for this. This affects all the building trades and more or less all occupations employed in furnishing materials or supplies for new building. The lockout is to be directed at 16,000 carpenters engaged upon construction work throughout Cook county and employed on 4000 buildings, which are being erected by 1200 contractors. The contractors have agreed to maintain their lockout until every union in the structural trades comes to terms. This would throw out of work, it is said, of 60,000 union workmen in the various branches of building trades, and as many more men and women whose employment is in one way and another subsidiary to new building.

What the result is likely to be is not apparent, but it is a bad time for this kind of contest. It is hardly conceivable that the effort of the workmen to raise wages at this time in the building trades can succeed. The employers would not resort to a lockout which must mean heavy loss to them if the demand for an advance could be reasonably made. Employers can wait in most cities at better than workmen can for employment, and if it is a test of endurance there can be only

WAGES GAINS WITHOUT STRIKES.

[EDITORIAL]

WHILE it is true that the wage-earners of the State of New York lost $10,000,000 wages money by strikes in 1912 with but poor results, it is also true that many thousands of workers in the same State in the same year, secured wage increases without strikes, according to Bulletin 64 of the Department of Labor of the State. Among these wages gains without strikes are the following:

Only those groups of 100 or more workers are included or the list would have been twice as long. As matter of fact the total number of workers in the State of New York whose wages were increased without strikes in the year ended September 30, 1912 (latest figures published,) was 59,095.

FROGS AND FUN.

The Batrachians Have the Laugh on the Boy Who Thinks He Can Hurt Them with a Club.

[American Boy:] Did you ever creep up cautiously, quietly and politely behing a big frog so as not to disturb his meditations—with a club in your hand? And then did you ever lift that club and bring it down with all your might on the spot where the frog—used to be? Of course you have. Now how do you account for the frog's moving on just when you want him to linger? It's provoking after you've got your feet sopping and your clothes muddy; but the most provoking thing about it is the calmness of the frog. He sits there on his lily pad and pretends there isn't a boy within a mile. And he keeps right on pretending till your club is an inch from his nose—when he goes away from there. It is all a put-up job. That's the way frogs amuse themselves. You think you're having fun hunting frogs, but, as a matter of fact, the frogs are having fun fooling boys. Probably you went out in the morning with your mind all made up to come home with a nice mess of frogs' legs and surprise the folks. All day you wallow in the mud and bang away with your club at frogs that are laughing at you till they nearly split their sides. By the time it begins to grow dark you have in your bag a couple of immature froggies whose inexperience allowed them to laugh a second too long. Two frogs for a days work! Anyhow, you figure, there'll be enough for mother to have for breakfast. That consolation lasts till you take them into the kitchen. Mother looks at them and edges away. "Take those nasty toads right out of the house immediately!" she says. And then, like as not, the frogs back in the pond have another laugh.

FOUR MILES UP.

At That Point the Aviator Can See Two Hundred Miles of the Earth In Every Direction.

[American Magazine:] Augustus Post writes of the "Experiences of an Airman." He has been up four miles and tells how the earth looks from that altitude.

"For every mile's ascent," he writes, "94 miles of view open out, so that at the highest point I have reached, more than 4 miles, one could see 200 miles on the earth's surface in every direction, unless low-hanging clouds lie between the aeronaut and the rest of humanity. Sometimes like fields of polar ice, sometimes opal and rose and gold—it is a wonderful thing to see the upper side of a sunset—the floor of the clouds, ever shifting, ever taking on more varied shapes, moves beneath you, or you rise through a high-floating one, in a brief white solitude.

"One side of the cloud floor may be red above the last rays of the sun, while waves of orange, purple and sulphurous yellow stretch across to the cold blues of the east and the silver splendor of the moon, for it is at full moon that long distance balloon races are always arranged to take place. Here and there fountainlike forms rise from the mass stretching beneath you and curl back like giant flowers; they are currents of hot air breaking through the cloudbank from below.

"Your pulse rate rises, your respiration grows faster, perhaps your hands and feet are a trifle numb, as the barograph needle rises—indeed, by this time it has risen above the card entirely, for the instruments commonly in use record only to 16,000 feet, and is making its mark in the metal cylinder; in time it will leave the cylinder altogether.

"If you open a bottle of water the air that has been confined at a lower level pops out as if you were opening a bottle of charged water. Going higher still—for men have reached an altitude of seven miles—the air is so thin that one must take along oxygen to breathe, the pressure at sea level being fifteen pounds. Up here you are subjected to only half the pressure; you feel lighter than cork; the nerves are drawn taut.

"If you poke a pencil or your finger into your skin the indentation will remain just like making a hole in a piece of putty. Doctors call this 'pitting,' and on the surface of the earth they take it as a proof that life is extinct. There is less 'mountain sickness' than one would think, judging from the nausea felt on the high peaks of the earth, but then in mountain climbing there is great physical exertion, exhaustion even, and here there is absolute calm—nothing to do till tomorrow, and that seems a long way ahead with no breeze, no sound, no motion save as some movement of your own jars the basket a trifle.

ADAM'S BIRTHPLACE.

Basra, Taken by the British, Said to be the Place Where the First Man was Created.

[Washington Post:] In capturing Basra, just below the mouths of the Tigris and the Euphrates, the British now have the satisfaction of controlling the spot where Adam is popularly supposed to have been created. Basra also is the place from which the ship of Sinbad the Sailor carried him on his amazing adventures. From a political point of view, Basra is important because the Germans intended to end their Bagdad railroad there. It is the center of the world's date trade.

Basra is on the Shatt-el-Arab, an estuary formed of the combined waters of the Tigris, Euphrates and Karun rivers. The "Shat" empties into the Persian Gulf.

The British already controlled Fao, a cable station on the gulf. From here the expedition proceeded up the western or Turkish bank of the Shatt. The beautiful date palms line the waterway. The bank on the eastern side forms one edge of Adagan Island, traditionally the site of the Garden of Eden, but now boasting principally the refineries of the Anglo-Persian Oil Company. The oil runs down 150 miles from the Bakhtiari Mountains of Persia, where crude petroleum gushes from the ground in abundance.

Another site on the way to Basra is the home of the powerful Sheikh of Mohammera. The British steamers always fire a salute when passing because the sheikh once came to the rescue of a British boat attacked by pirates near his home.

Boer "Seer" Began Revolt.

[New York Herald:] The official report on the South African rebellion is now issued. It traces the trouble back to one Van Rensburg, a notorious "seer," who announced that he saw a vision of seven bulls fighting, and a gray bull victorious. The gray bull Van Rensburg recognized at once as Germany.

Van Rensburg is a Boer farmer, who gained a reputation as a prophet in the last war. He made his luckiest hit by prophesying that Gen. Delarey would defeat Lord Methuen, and, as the prophecy "came off," he has ever since been regarded as a man with miraculous powers. His adhesion to the revolt of Kemp and Beyers had a great influence over the more ignorant Boers.

An Ultimatum.

HATTERS' UNION INDIFFERENT.

DANBURY MEMBERS WILL HAVE HOMES SOLD.

The Hat Firm Which Fought Union Oppression for Ten Years is Tired of Waiting for Settlement of the Damages Awarded by the United States Supreme Court.

[New York Commercial:] If the Hatters' Union does not decide by the middle of May to pay the $252,130 damages awarded to D. E. Loewe & Co., in the famous Danbury hatters' case, the homes of nearly 200 members of the union who were defendants in the suit will be taken from them to satisfy the judgment. This ultimatum was issued yesterday (April 22) by Loewe & Co., the hat firm which fought a union boycott for ten years, finally securing the award recently upheld by the United States Supreme Court.

In a letter to the defendants made public yesterday the Loewe company emphasizes its reluctance to ask for foreclosure proceedings, but says it has been driven to its final stand by the apparent indifference of the union to the predicament in which its defendant members find themselves. The union assumed responsibility for the payment of any damages when it undertook the conduct of the defense soon after the suit was brought, and Loewe & Co. says the performance of this agreement would be more to its liking.

Martin Lawler, secretary of the United Hatters of America, and one of the defendants, said yesterday that he did not know what action the union would decide to take at its annual convention on May 20. What the sentiment is in the union toward assuming the obligations he professed not to know. Mr. Lawler, Samuel Gompers of the American Federation of Labor, which also supported the hatters in their fight, and Judge Alton B. Parker asked the United States government in February of this year to pay the damages, on the ground that the Sherman anti-trust law, under which the suit was brought, was not intended to apply to labor unions. The application was refused.

Loewe & Co. says that, although the Federation of Labor could easily pay the fine by a small assessment, the way in which the federation raised $280,000 to defend the dynamiters in 1912, it denies the authority to relieve its members from their crushing obligation.

"Our desire is, and has been, by delay, to give the United Hatters of North America ample opportunity to avoid proceedings against individual homes if it so desires," the letter says, "but unless that organization at its approaching convention in May of this year makes provision to fulfill its written covenant to hold you harmless by payment of judgment, we must reluctantly allow our attorneys to proceed. If the union will yet advise us that it intends to observe its agreement with you, we will gladly co-operate in any way reasonable to avoid disturbing your real estate.

"The assessment of attached real estate has shown a value of between $225,000 and $250,000, which with the $60,000 of attached bank accounts and $30,000 interest on them is ample to cover judgment and interest, estimated now at $300,000. The union bought the bank accounts at the beginning of the suit by paying the amounts to defendants. The latter goes on to say:

"At the outset the United Hatters in effect substituted itself as the real defendant by written agreement between it and the record defendants whereby it assumed entire responsibility for the conduct of the suit and the payment of any judgment. Although this agreement has been observed and acted upon for over ten years, nevertheless no preparations have been made by that union for the protection of the defendants, and we have not even been requested to defer proceedings against their homes in order that the organization might have opportunity to fulfill its pledge.

"We naturally expected that the United Hatters would approach us with some plan or request for the protection of the defendants, to whom it is morally and legally bound. The professed spirit of unionism as well as the written pledges of protection and support and the early purchase by the union of your attached bank accounts, would seem to justify such expectation.

"To our amazement, although your homes are open to seizure by legal process and three months have elapsed since the affirmance of judgment by the United States Supreme Court, the Hatters have taken no steps to avert such hardship. On the contrary, the United Hatters would seem to be involving you in deeper difficulties by attempting to withdraw from application to the judgment some $30,000 accumulated interest on the attached savings bank accounts, which it owns subject to our claim as attaching creditors. If this move of your organization succeeds, it will increase your obligation by $30,000 instead of holding you harmless as agreed, and while we think the attempt must fail of legal support it does not encourage belief that the union is desirous of co-operating with us to avoid hardship to you."

Loewe & Co., also express the belief that the Federation of Labor is morally bound to support the defendants in their difficulties growing out of the fight which the Federation conducted for them.

"The attack on our business," the company says, "was a result of the teachings and practices of the Federation for over a decade and was carried out by the official organizers of the Federation through elaborate machinery and subdivisions organized and operated for such purposes. The Federation pledged financial support to you. Since the summer of 1910 it has conducted the entire defense, according to its own judgment, at its own expense and with attorneys of its own choosing, but now denies authority to relieve from the judgment it produced.

"Realizing how easily the Hatters' Union could fulfill its contract to you, how light the burden would be upon the Federation to meet this judgment, and realizing too our obligations to our creditors, which necessitates action because we are in the hands of a creditor's committee we herewith serve notice that unless arrangements are made at the Hatter's Convention in May of this year for a reasonably prompt adjustment of this matter we must reluctantly proceed."

ETHICS OF EMPLOYMENT.

United States Steel Corporation Maintains Wages of Men to the Disadvantage of Stockholders.

[New York Commercial:] Chairman Gary of the United States Steel Corporation at its annual meeting vigorously defended the policy of the board of directors in maintaining the scale of wages though it became necessary to suspend the payment of dividends on the common stock in order to do so. When the executive head of the biggest industrial corporation in the world says that ethics must be preferred to profits there seems to be nothing more that labor can ask of capital. Shareholders have rights and labor should not forget that these rights have been waived in the hour of need. If labor is to receive an undiminished share when there is not enough to go round, it cannot complain if dividends are resumed without increasing wages when earnings improve.

It is good policy for a manufacturer to keep intact his operating forces. Men who know shop routine and processes are more valuable than new hands because they do not have to be taught, which saves waste and overhead charges. There is a natural community of interest between employers and employees from which both derive substantial benefits. When an employer recognizes this community of interest in the way the Steel Corporation did last winter and still does, labor should reciprocate heartily and let the employer replenish his depleted treasury when business improves.

The strike in the building trades in Chicago is ill-timed and short-sighted because it may check the tendency toward improvement. Labor alone can bring to a halt the general revival of business now setting in. If men will not work for fair wages and give their employers a chance to get on their feet the prosperity of the whole country will be affected. A strike in the building trades reduces employment and production in steel mills, brick yards, quarries, cement mills, lumber camps, etc., and this automatically reduces consumption and indirectly affects textile mills, flour mills, shoe factories, etc. Labor produces and consumes. When men do not work they consume less and others suffer, and this is the surest way to produce hard times.

SAN FRANCISCO'S HOLD-UP.

Trouble Makers Endeavoring to Tie up the United Railroads, Though Most of the Men are Satisfied.

[San Francisco News Letter:] Certain malcontents among the platform men of the United Railroads Company are striving hard to stir up trouble among their fellows and prevail upon them to call a strike in the hope of tying up local street car traffic, the object being to organize another union to take the place of the one wiped out by Patrick Calhoun. Every San Franciscan realizes what such a strike would mean to the community under the prevailing business conditions throughout the world. This group of trouble makers do not care a tinker's damn for San Francisco's business conditions so long as they see an opportunity to hold up the community and extort their demands. Time and experience have demonstrated that their demands are limitless, and have no relation whatever to the common laws governing the division of the profits of industrial enterprise. For years San Francisco has been blackmarked on the commercial map as a labor-ridden city, and the effects have been only too conspicuous in retrograding it into a weak position as a manufacturing city, despite its natural and unquestioned advantages along such lines. A glance around the other bay cities, with their increasing factory facilities, indicates our long and humiliating position; San Francisco is paying the piper monthly through the wages of laborers being disbursed among the shops of these smaller towns, money which, under fairer labor conditions, would now be flowing into the retail shops of this city.

When Jesse Lilienthal assumed the duties of president of the United Railroads Company he entered into an open and frank understanding with the platform men, and specially introduced a number of generous forms designed especially to help them in their work, advancement and earnings protection. Clubs and gymnasiums were provided for them, and a system of insurance to protect them and their families. According to President Lilienthal, most of the platform men are satisfied with the present wages, hours and conditions.

BEAT UP INNOCENT MEN.

Strike Sluggers in Chicago Make a Vicious Attack on a Man Repairing His Own House.

[Chicago Tribune:] A black automobile filled with sluggers entered the breach between the 16,000 striking carpenters and the contractors April 20. Two workmen fell victims to the passengers in the machine with the license number covered with a black cloth.

The sluggers started their operations while the Arbitration Committee of the Carpenter Contractors' Association was drafting a reply to the request of the State Board of Arbitration to meet the carpenters in an effort to arrange for arbitrating the differences.

The black automobile, with its sluggers, pulled up in front of a residence at No. 7828 Stewart avenue, where Edward Anderson, owner of the building, and Gustave Wollen, a roomer, were doing repair work on the building.

"Have you fellows got union cards?" the ringleader of the carpenters' slugging gang demanded.

"We're not carpenters," Anderson answered. "We're just fixing up a little on our own house."

With blackjacks the automobile gang then attacked the two men. Mrs. Anderson notified the police of the Englewood Station.

The Pickford Theater was wrecked on the interior by union vandals during Monday night. R. I. Jacobs, manager, said that union decorators had threatened him. George Mansell, a lathing contractor, reported that one of his workmen was attacked by striking lathers during the day.

At a meeting of the union lathers requests for an assessment to put out a slugging gang were made last week.

Joseph Harnet, a millwright, thrown out of work by the carpenters' strike, committed suicide, leaving a note: "To my wife—Out of work and ending it all."

Outlived the Doctor.

[St. Joseph News Press:] Senator Burleigh of Maine applied to a recruiting office one morning back in Civil War days and expressed a desire to be a soldier. The examining physician rejected him on the ground that he had a tricky heart.

"I wish you'd let me in," coaxed Burleigh. "My heart may act funny, but I'll bet you I live a great many years yet."

Nearly half a century later, Burleigh, true to his word, was still living, and as a member of Congress got a pension of $50 a month for that same doctor.

National.

COAST LABOR CONFERENCE TO BE HELD IN AUGUST.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, May 1.—A national conference to consider the work of the Federal Employment Bureau and problems of labor distribution and exchanges in the United States was called Tuesday night by Secretary of Labor Wilson to meet in San Francisco August 2.

Letters to the Governor of each State, the heads of State labor bureaus, labor statistics and immigration officials throughout the country and to Mayors of cities having municipal employment offices were mailed by Secretary Wilson, inviting them to attend the conference in person or to designate representatives.

The most important object of the conference, Mr. Wilson said, will be to effect some system of co-operation between the Department of Labor and the State and municipal authorities to prevent duplication in the work and to provide for the establishment of efficient administration and uniformity of methods.

Prosperity.

COPPER PRICES GO UP, SO DO WAGES OF MEN.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

DOUGLAS (Ariz.) April 29.—Increased price of copper will raise the wages next month of 6000 men employed in the smelters here and the mines at Bisbee, according to the new wage schedules posted today. The average increase will amount to 8 per cent., and is due to a sliding scale, involving the system of profit sharing. Other mines and smelters in the State are expected to follow suit.

The increases announced for May will bring the standard of wages up to the point maintained before the European war began. The notices contain a proviso that they will be still further increased if copper prices move up.

In Modern Use.

DREADNAUGHT AN OLD NAME.

WAS GIVEN TO WARSHIP BY QUEEN ELIZABETH.

The First of the Name Only Measured Eighty Feet in Length, but it was an Effective Warship of its Period, Carrying Forty-four Guns and Two Hundred Men.

[St. Louis Globe Democrat:] The term dreadnaught now generally used as a class name to designate the most powerful battleships has an interesting history and glorious record in English naval annals. It originated in a momentous crisis of English history and was selected by no less illustrious person than England's virgin Queen.

The massacre of St. Bartholomew, August 24, 1572, stirred England to her depths and roused both authorities and people to immediate action. The militia was mustered and marched to the coast. John Hawkins, with a fleet of twenty warships, was sent to cruise off the Azores. The rest of the fleet was mobilized and concentrated in the Downs. A subsidy was sent to the Protestants in Holland. A rush of volunteers followed those from England already in the field. Huguenot refugees in England were permitted to fit out ships to help their co-religionists at La Rochelle.

Four men-of-war for the royal navy were ordered built forthwith at Deptford. Two of these were to be of the first-class—line-of-battle ships, as they later came to be called. The others were smaller vessels, or frigates. To expedite construction, the work was divided between the two foremost shipwrights of the kingdom, Matthew Baker and Peter Pett. Each built two ships, one of each class. Pett launched his ships on October 11, 1573, and Baker his on November 10, following. But Baker's line-of-battle ship was somewhat larger than Pett's, 400 tons to 395.

GAVE SHIPS "TELLING" NAMES.

"The names of the new ships were announced in due course, and represented Her Majesty's mood on the occasion. She, herself, selected and appointed them with intention. It was Queen Elizabeth's way to give her ships telling names. The choice of energetic names for the ships of her royal navy, it has been said, was one of the means employed by the heroic and politic Elizabeth to infuse her own dauntless spirit into the hearts of her subjects, and to show Europe at large how little she dreaded the mightiest armaments of her enemies.

More than that needs to be said. As a rule, in the cases of her bigger ships, the Queen chose names that carried in addition and underlying meaning that bore direct allusion to some national event of the hour. It was of set purpose that Queen Elizabeth, in the year of the massacre of St. Bartholomew, chose the name Dreadnaughte (as she spelled it) for one of her ships. The intentions of the Catholic League were an open secret in every council chamber of Europe. The papal bull excommunicating and deposing Elizabeth had been nailed on the doors of Lambeth Palace. It was at such a moment that the name Dreadnaughte was first appointed to an English man-of-war, and the Queen's choice, under the circumstances, partakes of the nature almost of an act of state specially designed to express the temper of the nation."

So the larger vessel, built by Baker, was named Dreadnaughte, and her sister ship, built by Pett, was named Swiftsuer, as Her Majesty spelled it, meaning swift pursuer. Both names have been handed down the centuries, but the former has won more distinction. The first dreadnaught measured eighty feet from rudder post to forefoot. She cost £6000 sterling, equivalent to £30,000 in the currency of today, carried 200 men and forty-four guns, sixteen 24-pounders, "and eighteen breechloaders, for firing at close quarters and rapid firing." It will, no doubt, surprise many to learn there were breech-loading guns in those days.

DREADNAUGHT'S FIRST FIGHT.

The Dreadnaughte's first action was at Cadiz about a year after her launching, when under Capt. Thomas Fenner, one of Drake's most trusted lieutenants, she assisted the great admiral in "singeing the Spanish King's whiskers." Drake, it will be recalled, entered the harbor of Cadiz, destroyed the flagship of the Marquis de Santa Cruz, commander-in-chief of the Spanish navy; "eighteen of the finest Spanish galleons;" and carried off six more." It was believed that exploit so shocked and grieved the Spanish admiral as to hasten his death, thus preventing his command of the famous armada. Under Capt. George Beeston, "of an ancient Surrey family," one of the gallant officers whom High Admiral Lord Charles Howard knighted upon the deck of his flagship, Ark Royal, she bore a conspicuous part in the defeat of the Spanish armada. She continued in active service down to the time of Cromwell and made her last cruise in the year of Marston Moor.

The second dreadnaught, built in the days of the commonwealth, and first named Torrington in commemoration of one of Cromwell's victories, was renamed Dreadnaught by order of Charles II. A much later dreadnaught, a sixty-gun ship, was commanded for a time by Admiral Boscawen, about the middle of the eighteenth century. One night, cruising in the English channel, the officers of the deck woke him with the information that two large ships, apparently Frenchmen, were bearing down on him, and asked him what he would do. "Do? Why, dwamn 'em, fight 'em!" exclaimed the admiral, and then he hurried on deck in his night shirt.

Later that same Dreadnaught was under the command of Capt. Maurice Suckling, the uncle of Nelson, who secured the youngster his appointment to the navy. Suckling was cruising in West Indian waters with the Edinburgh, Capt. Langdon, and the Augusta, Capt. Forrest, when on October 21, 1757, they encountered and defeated a French squadron of seven ships, most of them larger than the Englishmen. From that action Nelson always claimed that October 21 was the lucky day of his family, and it was on that day he achieved the crowning accomplishment of his career, Trafalgar.

A DREADNAUGHT AT TRAFALGAR.

Another Dreadnaught, launched in 1801, after being thirteen years on the stocks, was Admiral Collingwood's flagship up to within ten days of Trafalgar, when he transferred his flag to the Royal Sovereign. The Dreadnaught was commanded in the battle by Capt. Conn. Owing to the light wind which prevailed, she did not come into action until late in the afternoon, but she made the San Juan strike her colors in fifteen minutes, and failed of capturing the Spanish flagship, Principe de Asturias, only from want of wind. But a shot from one of her broadsides killed the Spanish Admiral Gravina. This was the ship referred to by Dickens as "the wooden wopper of the Thames" and which gave name to the Dreadnaught Seamen's Hospital at Greenwich.

Altogether there have been eight ships in the English navy named Dreadnaught. The first ironclad so named was a ship of 10,820 tons, launched in 1875. After many years of service she was laid up as antiquated in the Kyles of Bute. The last of the name, a 17,700-ton battleship, launched in 1906, was the most powerful ship afloat at that time, but she has been greatly outbuilt since. She carries 770 men and thirty-nine guns, including ten 12-inch, with an extreme range of twenty-five miles, an effective, or armor-piercing, range of six miles. She was the second ship of the royal navy to be commissioned by an English King. King Edward VII officiated at her launching. The other English King was Henry VIII, who commissioned the Great Henry.

Saving the Half Cent.

[New York Times:] In these hard times, when every little that can be saved on the living expenses of the poor counts, I would suggest that the United States government coin a half cent, which would be of great benefit to those who must count every cent of expenses.

For instance, if one wished to buy a half pound of coffee, at 25 cents a pound, one would be obliged to pay 13 cents; with a half-cent piece in use there would be a saving of half a cent. There are many other things, too numerous to mention, that could be bought by poor people, especially fruit. One often sees apples and bananas sold two for 1 cent. If a poor person had a half cent he could buy one, when he did not need two.

Hymns and Longevity.

[London Chronicle:] The practice of hymn writing appears to be conducive of longevity. Charlotte Elliott, who wrote "Just As I Am," was 82 at the time of her death; Bishop Bickersteth, who wrote, "Peace, Perfect Peace," was 81, as also was Charles Wesley. Bishop Walsham How, author of some of the most popular of the hymns, ancient and modern; John Keble and Bishop Kerr, the writer of the famous "Evening Hymn," were all 74. And in compiling such a list as this, one ought not to forget the name of W. E. Gladstone, who narrowly escape becoming a nonagenarian. One of Mr. Gladstone's hymns—"O Lead My Blindness by the Hand"—is to be found in the English Hymnal.

Chinese Canned Eggs.

[Cincinnati Enquirer:] "The eggs my great-grand-daddy ate 100 years ago," might easily be the refrain of a popular song written about the testimony of Dr. Ernest L. Smith, a food expert, who formerly occupied the chair of biological chemistry at Fordham University Medical School, in a pure-food case in New York.

Dr. Smith declared a can full of preserved Chinese hen eggs will keep 100 years without a sign of decay.

He also persuaded several of the jurors to taste cake made with eggs ten years old, and got them to admit it "tasted right good."

Oil.

MATTER STILL IN STATU QUO.

Plan of Petroleum Reorganization in the Air.

General Company's Report Sketches Situation.

Reveals Good Progress in Development.

The plan of reorganizing the General Petroleum, for the present at least, it appears, will remain in statu quo. The annual report of the company gives a detailed account of the proceedings in this direction during the past few months, but these have had little or no final effect. The results secured by the company from its own operations within the past year have been very encouraging, considering the unsettled oil situation.

Following is the statement issued by Capt. Barneson, in part:

"During the year 1914 the General Petroleum Company sold 5,680,238 barrels of fuel oil and distillates for a gross sum of $3,453,911. This was an increase of $1,314,287 over the business done during the preceding year. The total cost of doing the business, not including production expense, interest on bonds or sinking funds, was $324,840.94, or a decrease of $87,713.22 from the cost of doing a smaller business in 1913. The net operating profit of the business was $655,180.78, an increase of $368,614.17 over 1913.

"During the past year the total oil handled from all sources was 9,931,542 barrels, or 3,010,770 barrels in excess of 1913.

"The company's oil in storage was increased in 1914 by 1,456,808 barrels, being at December 31, 2,294,105 barrels, valued at cost, $962,692.71.

"The company's own production shows an increase over that of 1913 of 774,846 barrels, and the cost of production, as compared with that of 1913, is lower by 3 cents per barrel.

"The profit made for the year, before providing for the fixed charges and depreciation, was $655,180.78. The fixed charges, including the guaranteed income to the General Pipe Line Company, less the company's proportion as stockholders in the Pipe Line Company, totaled $1,030,569.75, leaving the net result for year as a loss of $375,388.97.

"During the year there has been added to the capital assets of the business the following:

Stocks of controlled companies	$ 505.00
Oil lands	12,788.85
Oil wells	550,461.06
Field equipment	83,182.04
Additions to refineries	40,465.01
Marine equipment	117,141.10
Seattle station	36,726.82
Tank cars (23 cars)	26,475.00
Miscellaneous	27,647.54
Total	$900,392.43

"I am sure that you will find these results encouraging, in view of the enormous overproduction of oil in California during last year and the serious curtailment of consumption which prevailed. It certainly demonstrates beyond cavil the inherent values of your properties and the possibilities of a sound and continuing commercial success of the enterprise.

SERIOUS PROBELMS.

"Unfortunately, however, I must call your attention to several matters which materially affect the welfare of the company, and unless radically remedied may lead to most unfortunate results.

"As you know, since May, 1914, the company has been in default on its interest coupons. Assuming that the current business of the company could from this time forward carry the current interest and sinking fund charges, it must be obvious that the past accumulations form a handicap seriously preventing the normal development of the enterprise. This is, however, a matter which thoughtful co-operation of our security holders could easily remedy to their mutual benefit, and is therefore not a serious menace to the company's future.

"A real danger, however, lies in the complex entanglements resulting from our dealings with the Western Ocean Syndicate. Toward the end of 1913 an arrangement was made through the co-operation of a large number of our bond and stockholders, whereby a permanent advance of $1,500,000 was to be provided from English sources.

"The real needs of the company were for $3,000,000, and that amount was tentatively arranged for, but the failure of certain bondholders to comply with the conditions outlined made it possible to get but $1,500,000. The amount, however, I expected to be in the nature of a permanent addition to the company's capital. This arrangement has never been consummated.

"Instead of a permanent addition the money was obtained by sixty and ninety-day drafts drawn by the company, accepted by Messrs. Andrew Weir & Co., and discounted in London. As these drafts matured new ones were drawn to replace them, so that there are at this moment outstanding drafts aggregating £428,000, which are a constant menace to the safety of the company. The excess of these drafts, over $1,500,000, is due partly to interest and rediscount charges and partly to additional amounts over the agreed $1,500,000 for which Messrs. Weir & Co. permitted us to draw.

"All hope must be abandoned of solving this problem along the lines of the original agreement with the Western Ocean Syndicate, and negotiations to adjust it otherwise were twice carried to what was thought to be a mutually satisfactory arrangement, but neither plan was consummated. Shortly after the arrangement with the Western Ocean Syndicate was concluded the General Petroleum Company disposed of its option on certain stock of the Union Oil Company to Andrew Weir for $933,333, of which $466,666 fell due in October, 1914, and the balance in April, 1915.

"At the time of the making of this agreement it was orally arranged that sufficient money should be advanced to pay the May (1914) bond coupons. It was believed until the very day the interest fell due that the money was available, but on that day it was offered subject to conditions that the directors felt the interest of the stockholders would not permit them to accept.

"Our conclusions are that, while the property has been demonstrated to be of great value and capable of the most successful commercial operation, it is highly necessary that a reorganization be carried out which will:

"First — Materially reduce, if not eliminate, its fixed charges.

"Second — A readjustment of arrangement with the Pipe Line Company.

"Third—The retirement of the drafts, partly by offset and partly by issuance of securities.

"Fourth—Adjustment of the ships' accounts.

"During the year 1914, and after the embarrassments of the Western Ocean Syndicate had made it impossible for them to go forward with the agreement made in London, negotiations were constantly pending to the end of funding the drafts and readjusting the internal affairs of this company.

"Two separate plans were perfected in October and December of 1914 which accomplished all this and would have put the company on a dividend basis on its present business.

"The October plan, however, while tentatively agreed to in principle by all interests, while Andrew Weir was in New York, where it was arranged, subsequently failed to meet with his final approval and fell through.

"The later and better of these plans worked out in New York in December, 1914, on Mr. Weir's second visit there was agreed to by him, all of the New York interests and our own representative, subject only to your approval. Mr. Weir left New York for California, and on arrival here proposed several radical changes which neither our New York security holders nor ourselves felt it possible to accept. For the time being, therefore, the whole matter is in statu quo, though the New York interests and ourselves have not given up hope of carrying through the plan proposed, and it may be presented for your consideration in the near future."

SOUTHERN FIELD SHOWS ACTIVITY.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

FULLERTON, April 29.—Wells are being drilled on nearly all of the leases in the Fullerton oil fields, including La Habra Valley, Yorba Linda, Brea, North Placentia and other sections.

The Standard Oil Company is still employing about 400 men in the local fields and has a pay roll of nearly $40,000 a month. This company is finishing a well soon on the Piepenbrink lease.

Lawrence Kuhn, who has been drilling in the Fullerton fields for several years, will leave this week to act as foreman for an oil company in India. He has accepted a three-year position in the foreign field at $250 a month and all expenses.

There seems to be no decrease in pressure of gas in the great "gasser" on the Murphy lease. The local gas company expects to get from 3,000,000 to 4,000,000 cubic feet of gas from this well daily to supply new contracts recently made in this county.

In the Brea district a number of new wells are being drilled by the Union and other companies. Rigs have been completed for five new wells. The Birch Company has eight producing wells; the Brea Canyon Oil Company, twenty-five; the Columbia Oil Company, three; Fullerton Oil Company, nine; the General Petroleum Company, seven.

TOUCHES HIGHEST POINT SINCE WAR.

UNION ADVANCE DURING PAST WEEK ATTRACTS MUCH INTEREST.

The sharp advance in Union Oil during the past week attracted no little interest on the local Stock Exchange, as well as in oil circles. The stock touched the highest point it has reached since the outbreak of the war.

Thursday sales were made at 63.50, a gain of nearly ten points in a week's time. Following this there was a reaction to a closing price of 62.50 Friday, with the bid 62.12½ at 62.50 in the final round-up.

Not only did Union Oil stock make a pronounced advance, but the bonds as well revealed marked strength. One sale of Union Oil fives at 87 was recorded. The bonds of subsidiary companies also manifested an improved tone, as did Producers' Transportation stock, which sold as high as 67.50. Some recent sales in this issue were recorded at as low as 60.00.

There is no particular reason for the upward movement. The increasing financial strength of Union Oil and the passing of the Weir option have been used as bullish arguments. These had especial force on account of the technical situation as regards Union stock.

The market had been pretty well cleaned up in the past few months at low prices, and a few buying orders sufficed to show the scarcity of offerings, it is said. Quite a short interest has probably accumulated on the recent rise.

Property Changes Hands.

The Case Mineral of Petroleum Company has taken over the Lady Washington property, section 6, 11-23, Maricopa—forty acres and a well which produced oil from a depth of 2100 feet until the rig burned down two years since. The case company's other holdings are the old Sunset Rex and the Norris Midway, also on the Maricopa flat.

The Case company was organized by Alfred E. Case, an attorney of Chicago, whose settling here and interest in oil grew out of the troubles of the Buick Oil Company. He was originally sent here to probe the condition of the company's affairs and to seek from the Federal courts the appointment of a receiver to handle the property. So impressed was he with oil prospects that he organized his own company. A number of Buick stockholders have become interested with him.

TRACT ACTIVITIES.

The Janss Investment Company reports sales in Belvedere Heights to the following: J. M. Gibbon, five-room bungalow, $2250; J. Sanderson, house, $1500; R. E. Quick, house, $2650; E. Kuster, lot, $650; L. Anderson, lot, $650; W. B. Sheek, four-room house, $1650, and J. C. Hull, house, $1850. Sales by the same firm at Sierra Park are announced as follows: H. C. Wagner, lot, $1000; Minnie A. Samuels, lot, $700; M. Streicher, lot, $1000; G. I. Jacoby, lot, $1000; Henry Jacoby, lot, $1000; Lydia Jacoby, lot, $1000; M. Mathews, lot, $650; Frank A. Stephens, lot, $650, and Lucy A. Miller, two lots, $1700.

ADDS TO GROUNDS.

Mrs. Wilhelmina Anderson, who recently completed and occupied a house in Brentwood Park, in the San Vicente-Santa Monica district, has purchased from the Braly-Janss Company two additional and adjoining lots at a given price of $5800. These lots, it is stated, were bought to enlarge the original scope of Mrs. Anderson's ground plans. Howard & Smith, florists and landscapists, have been engaged to lay out the property. It is the owner's intention to have an extensive formal garden.

UNION LEAVES MIDWAY LEASE.

Parties Fail to Agree on a Renewal Plan.

State Consolidated Tests Deep Strata.

Various Happenings in the Valley Fields.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

TAFT, May 1.—The Union Oil Company is moving its personal property from the land it has leased from the Midway Oil Company for the past five years. The lease expired last Sunday.

The Union made the Midway Oil Company a proposition to renew, but it was declined. The Midway company would lease the land only under conditions that would compel the leasing company to develop new wells continuously, and it may prove difficult to do this when oil is at its present price.

The old lease did not require development when the market price of oil was 40 cents or less, and the Union has done no development for several years. Great dissatisfaction has resulted on both sides—on the part of the land owners because of the nondevelopment, on the part of the Union because of the litigation the company became involved in on account of the lease being a former holding of parties who were concerned in the Kern Valley Bank failure.

A representative of the Midway company took possession of the land Monday. Gen. Supt. F. F. Hill of the Union was here to turn it over and to remove the Union's personal property.

State Consolidated.

The State Consolidated is going to find out for certainty whether or not the water encountered in the deep wells drilled by two of its neighbors was bottom water or not. It wants to know from its own experience; therefore, it has decided to drill through this water stratum and see what is below. Its No. 12 is being deepened for that purpose.

This well was originally finished as a 150-barrel producer at 800 feet; then it was deepened to 1600 and found a lighter oil, the first having been an 18-gravity and under. The well is on 36, 31-22, and was the pioneer producer of the section.

Eagle Creek.

The Eagle Creek No. 10, finished at 2299 feet, and located on section 31, 31-22, just outside the town of Fellows, is flowing under control into the sump. The well came in with a spurt, going for a few minutes over the derrick and maintaining for a while a 500-barrel rate while flowing by heads.

Belridge's New Well.

Since bringing in its pioneer 500-barrel, 35-gravity well, No. 4, section 35, 27-20, the Belridge Oil Company has started the drill in its No. 6, and is building a rig for No. 7. No. 5 has reached a depth of 3000 feet. Nos. 1 and 2 are producing about one hundred barrels each daily. All the above wells are on section 35. At the company's main camp, twelve miles northwest of McKittrick, three strings of tools are at work.

The Belridge Company has bought the property of the bankrupt Mannell-Minor Oil Company, also on section 35, comprising 160 acres, and three wells, each about 2800 feet deep and finished in an upper sand producing an oil of 28 gravity, and an aggregate of about 200 barrels daily. The Belridge Company now owns the entire section.

Midway Premier Well.

From a depth of 1400 feet the Midway Premier's wildcat well is pumping 70 to 100 barrels, according to the reports of the company's management. The well is on the McKittrick front, eight miles northwest of the town of McKittrick. The oil is to be used as fuel for drilling a second well before long.

Oil in Madagascar.

That French capital is about to seek oil in the interior of the far away Madagascar, off the east coast of Africa, is revealed by a letter from George Robinson, a former Midway driller, who has gone there to put down the well. The letter to an acquaintance in Midway says that he had just landed when he wrote on March 1 and would go 200 miles inland to work.

Hits Turkey Scheme.

War has put a stop for the present to the intended prospecting in Turkey by the Standard Oil interests. Most of the employees designed for Turkish service—many of them lived at Taft—who were en route to their posts when hostilities broke out, have been ordered to China. The news came in a letter from one of the men, formerly employed in Midway, who started for Turkey under a contract with the Standard, but who only reached Cairo when hostilities broke out. He was held there to await orders and was eventually sent to China by the Standard. With the exception of two men, who were recalled to New York, all the employees who started for Turkey are now in China.

New Company.

The Royal Petroleum Company, a new Los Angeles company, has taken over the August property, section 6, 11-23, Maricopa, with two completed wells, neither of which has been producing for some time. They will be cleaned and put on the beam at once.

The new company is capitalized at only $25,000. The directors are L. Ashmun, A. N. Wheelock, D. G. McDonald, A. R. Allen and M. B. Houston, all of Los Angeles.

Easterners Start Work.

Six new wells are to be drilled at once by the Potter Oil Company, section 15, 31-22, which will make a total of sixteen on the property where there are locations for thirty-two. The first will be started at once. The rotary will be used. The company is owned by Pittsburgh capitalists interested also in the Potter Gas Company of that city.

Splendid Scholastic Structure Now Being Constructed in San Joaquin Valley City will be a Model of Kind—Los Angeles Firm has the Contract.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

FRESNO, May 1.—The people of Fresno and its vicinity are greatly interested just now in the progress that is being made in the construction of the magnificent new State Normal School at this place. The institution, costing well above $350,000 with its furnishings and grounds, is being erected by the Winget Construction Company of Los Angeles. This firm secured the contract from one of the largest fields of bidders that has ever competed on public work in California. The plans were drawn by State Architect McDougal.

The design and arrangement of the new Fresno Normal marks a departure from all similar buildings. The shape of the building may best be described by calling it a capital "H" with the ends enclosed." The structure is two stories high and has ex

REDLANDS TO HOLD BEGINNERS' PLAY.

EVERY GOLFER WITH LESS THAN FIFTEEN HANDICAP TO BE BARRED.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

REDLANDS, May 1.—The golfers of the Redlands Country Club who labor under handicaps below fifteen strokes are out of luck. They will be the caddies at a big tournament to be held Monday afternoon at the club. All those who have handicaps of fifteen or over are eligible to enter in the tournament, and indications are that there will be a large entry for the eighteen holes of medal play.

Gregory Palmer will handle, with care, the tournament. He will be assisted by Jamie Rindell. Morris Phillips and Raymond Hornby, the sharks of the club, will be the judges. It is said that the betting is odds of 2 to 1 on E. Stauffen, Jr., to win the tournament, with C. F. Smith a close second. There will be three prizes, which will be presented at a supper to be served at 7 o'clock at the clubhouse.

AUSTRALIAN TO ENTER RACES HERE

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, May 1.—Aubrey F. Taylor, the Australian cyclist, who recently completed a successful season of competition by winning several Antipodean titles, is en route for this country. Taylor left Sydney about the middle of April and will tour the United States during the coming summer and autumn. He has shown excellent racing form this year, winning the five-mile and ten-mile championships from a high-class field in March in addition to several other minor title events.

SOUTH COAST YACHT CLUB HAS AUSPICIOUS OPENING.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SAN PEDRO, May 1.—despite several showers yesterday afternoon, the formal opening of the South Coast Yacht Club season was very auspicious. Mayor Rose made a speech to the members of the club and their friends just after the official opening. The Mayor assured the yachtsmen that he was a greater lover of the game and gave some of his early experiences with small boats.

Vice-Commodore Weston fired the opening gun in front of the clubhouse. The club burgee was broken out from the top of the flag pole. The club ensign was hoisted to one end of the yard arm, and the Union Jack was broken off the other. The international yachting code was also displayed.

Commodore Solland spoke on the exceedingly bright prospects of a busy yachting season and of the increased interest in the sport on the southern coast.

John J. Goldworthy, chairman of the Regatta Committee, and Lester Best, former secretary of the club, made an official inspection of the yachts, and at the banquet they awarded prizes to the following owners:

Yachts in best condition—

First prize—Rear-Commodore B. A. Goodrich, yacht Minerva, ship's clock.

Second prize—Dr. J. K. Suckow, yacht Otelia X, brass light.

Third prize—Ex-Commodore Bradley, yacht Idler, brass ventilator.

Honorable mention — Commodore Solland, flag ship Viking 3; Dr. Dougall, yacht Descalso; Ellis W. Taylor, yacht Trojan.

The weather conditions have kept many from getting their yachts in ship-shape. Most of them, however, were in very fair condition and were gaily decked out with club flags and the international yacht code.

The banquet was served for 110 members and guests. Directly following the banquet was the opening ball.

Commodore Solland will lead the squadron of yachts on a cruise between San Pedro and Long Beach today. The first race will be pulled off next Sunday.

Ford Carpenter went down as an honored guest and also as a guarantee of good weather. He kept the skies in fair condition until the Mayor began to speak and then it clouded up and started raining. Neither Mr. Carpenter nor Mayor Rose is blamed for the rain, however.

MEUSEL GOES TO ELMIRA.

Emil Meusel, utility outfielder of the Angels, yesterday accepted terms with the Elmira club in the Tri-State League. Meusel says that the Los Angeles club no longer has any strings on him and he does not expect to return to the Coast. He has big league ambitions. He will leave for the East as soon as his transportation arrives.

CARDS TO ABANDON AUSTRALIAN TRIP.

BASEBALL TOUR WOULD PROVE FINANCIAL FAILURE DURING WAR.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, May 1.—The proposed tour of Australasia by the Leland Stanford University baseball team is likely to be abandoned for the coming year at least. Advices from Sydney state that owing to the war such a trip would prove a financial failure. The California collegians outlined a schedule providing for a stay of some thirty-odd days in Australia with the possibility of a side trip to New Zealand. The New South Wales Baseball Association did not, however, feel that conditions warranted the encouragement of the tour. In normal times such a series of games between Stanford and the Australasian university nines would undoubtedly pay all expenses of the trip, but the unsettled affairs of the commonwealths prove a stumbling block in the present negotiations.

GOLFERS LAND IN THE FINALS.

George Cline and D. Jacobs are to meet in the finals for the San Gabriel Country Club golf title. In the semifinals, played yesterday, Jacobs defeated Dr. McGee, 2 up, and Cline won from J. C. Boyle, 3 and 2.

FRESNO WINS IN CENTRAL TENNIS.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

FRESNO (Cal.) May 1.—Fresno won the championship of Central California in the doubles this afternoon by defeating Stockton, taking two sets, 6-4, 6-4.

The players were Cornell and Alexander for Fresno and Hunter and Hodgkins for Stockton.

The singles title was won by [illegible] from Porterville in the finals.

All the cities in the San Joaquin Valley sent teams to the Raisin Day tournament, which was postponed by rain Thursday and halted by darkness yesterday. It was concluded today.

OAKLAND WINS IN THE TENTH.

Things Break Badly for the Tigers at Finish.

Ellis Johnson Looks Good in His First Start.

Carlisle Stabs Pill in Spectacular Manner.

BY HARRY A. WILLIAMS.

The day was dark and dreary, and the Tigers, who are fond of sunshine and merry laughter, lost to the Oaklets, 3 to 2.

It required ten innings to decide the combat, which was entirely too long considering the raw and ragged condition of the atmosphere. There is sure a jinx attached to our inimitable climate. If it can be found out who the jinx is the public-spirited men and women of Los Angeles should ride him out of town on a rail.

Not only does the present condition of the weather cut down the gate receipts, but it tends to promote charley horse and chilblains on the part of the athletes. All the ladies and gents who attended were heavily wrapped up, which is very unusual on May Day. There was a total absence of shadow gowns and translucent petticoats. This weather must be pretty tough on Margaret Edwards, the naked-truth girl. With the wind whistling the way it does most people would rather be less truthful and wear more clothes.

JOHNSON'S DEBUT.

Ellis Johnson, late of Chicago and other cities farther East, selected the game as an occasion for making his first appearance in a Venice uniform. Not only did the uniform seem to fit him perfectly, but he looked to be right handy with the pill. Johnson can throw curves to beat the band, and seems able to govern the pill in its journey to the plate. He held the Oaklets to one earned run in seven frames. He then retired to let Johnny Kane sit in long enough to aid in scoring a run.

Cack Henley, the well-known brick-layer, then took hold. Cack got along in fine shape until the tenth, when he butted into a batch of hard luck and Oakland scored the one run needful to clinch the combat. The Oaklets had a peculiar habit of scoring all their runs with two down.

On the other hand, the Tigers generally hit freely in the first part of each inning, only to peter out with men on bases.

PROUGH EFFECTIVE.

Clint Prough, who uses a [illegible] over-hand method in winning ball games, was very effective in the pinches. He successfully met crisis

SIGN-POSTING WORK GOING.

AUTO CLUB TRUCK BUSY WITH ROAD SIGNS.

Expect Completion of Entire Road to the East by June—Will Come Direct to this City by Way of the National Old Trails Route—Will Tap All Routes Here from East.

Work has been resumed on the sign-posting of a transcontinental highway into Los Angeles by the Automobile Club of Southern California.

San Diego, Santa Barbara and all points in Southern California will benefit by the work of the Auto Club in this matter, as motorists reaching the Pacific Coast over the first sign-posted road crossing the United States will come directly to this part of the State via the National Old Trails roads.

At the present time, the Auto Club's big truck, with Douglas C. Mitchell in charge, is moving over the Colorado feeder from the Lincoln Highway, erecting the signs and posts as rapidly as possible.

These signs and posts were dispatched to the distributing points during the winter while weather conditions held the Auto Club crew off the highways, and no time will now be lost in placing them, according to Secretary Mitchell.

The National Old Trails feeder will tap the Lincoln Highway at Big Springs, Nebraska, giving a direct route southward toward the trail road and Southern California. Testimonials from motorists who have followed the club's signs from Pueblo west, at which point the work was delayed during the winter, all agree that never in the history of automobile club work has any system been so complete.

When the project is finally completed, motorists may follow a completely sign-posted route to the Pacific Coast, which will be the only one in existence. It is planned to complete the work some time in June. Toward its success, 8700 motorists of Southern California, members of the Auto Club, have given their support in behalf of 60,000 others who are watchfully waiting, using the signs, and contributing nothing at all.

HIGH-PRICED AUTOS SELL.

William E. Bush, Pierce-Arrow distributor for Southern California, has received word from the factory at Buffalo that 1000 more men are being employed at the Pierce factory than ever before, in an attempt to catch up with the 500 back orders now on file. The Pierce factory is running to full capacity and is turning out pleasure cars at the rate of twelve a day. Even at this output figure, it will be six weeks before the orders already in are filled.

The general tone of business in the East indicates that when the fiscal year of the Pierce factory closes on July 1, the factory will have exceeded every former record for output of high-grade pleasure cars. Every one in the Pierce organization in the East predicts that the biggest two months of selling in the history of the firm awaits them in May and June.

Facts.

TIRES SET A TRUCK RECORD.

LONG MILEAGE SECURED OVER BAD ROADS.

Big Truck Engaged in Building the San Marcos Pass Road Ran Over Ties and All Kinds of Rotten Roads and Yet Succeeded in Setting Fine Record.

What is declared by all acquainted with the facts to be a striking example of tire efficiency is related by M. McGregor of McGregor & Sons, dealers in Firestone products in Santa Barbara county. J. A. Clarey of Santa Barbara, the contractor who constructed the famous road through San Marcos Pass, north of the city, supplied Mr. McGregor with the information.

According to Clarey building the San Marcos road was one of the most difficult pieces of modern construction that has been attempted in Santa Barbara county. The pass penetrates the Santa Ynes Mountains and is the most direct route to San Francisco.

Occupying a place of particular importance was a three-ton truck which was driven by "Jim" Compton, who had acquired considerable renown for his work in local races. Compton handled the truck so as to get the most out of it, Clarey says, and the results were due largely to his efficient work at the wheel.

As the contractor relates the facts, this one truck removed approximately one-half the material excavated and hauled all of the supplies that entered into the construction work. The work required an extra year and was completed only last March.

The total mileage covered was 8960.4, and the aggregate tonnage figured 8000 tons for excavation and 8908.8 for building material, making a total of 16,908.8 tons.

The tire equipment of the truck was exclusively Firestone. Four single tires were used during the first three months, when dual treads were put on the rear wheels. In all eight tires were used in the work, including two extra duals and two spares. Clarey asserts that at the completion of the work all of the tires were capable of continued service, and he used them indefinitely.

"It should be borne in mind," says Clarey, "that this truck was fitted with tires built for a three-ton capacity load. But the truck was overloaded approximately 68 per cent. on the average, and ran at a speed in excess of that for which the manufacturers had intended it.

"Then, too, the truck was driven over the ties of the S.P. Railroad daily for distances up to half a mile. This was necessary, as Compton had to 'spot' the cars containing the material he wanted, and the only way to get to them was to drive over the ties and rails. I never heard of such service being rendered by a set of tires engaged in such severe work. It so impressed me that ever since then the trucks I have used always have been shod with Firestone tires."

Going Some.

EIGHTS SELLING TOO FAST FOR THE MANUFACTURERS.

JAMES BAYLESS, Cadillac factory representative for the West and Pacific Coast, after a careful survey of the business conditions west of Denver, yesterday announced that there undoubtedly would be a shortage of Cadillac "eights" in this territory, and that many orders would remain unfilled.

Every large distributor has been calling for more cars than they have been alloted and there can only be one answer, a shortage of cars, declares Bayless. The factory production is at its highest point right now and even under peak load is unable to keep pace with the orders.

The word coming from every distributor in the country indicates that the only limit on the number of cars that will be sold is the number the factory can build.

The Cadillac factory is turning out cars at the rate of 125 a day, but the fact that the eastern season is just opening and that every dealer in the East is demanding cars as rapidly as they can be shipped, has brought about an unparalleled condition in the high-grade car market, that of absolute inability to meet the demands for cars, even with this enormous production.

The overwhelming demand for cars is due largely to the fact that the Cadillac "eight" has now been in use for more than six months, and the motoring public has had a thorough chance to see what the "eight" will do.

"Although Don Lee has placed an unusually large order," said Mr. Bayless, "I know he will close the season many cars short. This is apparant by the fact that the cars are being taken as fast as they arrive."

Gosh, Yes!

PASADENAN IS A GREAT BOOSTER FOR ED PULLEN.

THE first of Southern California's motor racing fans to leave for the 500-mile race at Indianapolis drove from his Pasadena home early yesterday morning with the announcement that he would be in Indianapolis May 20, ten days before the race. Jimmy Barr, a young sportsman and society man of Pasadena and New York, who has followed the fortunes of the Mercer racing team in all its big events for the last two seasons, is the daring amateur pilot. He is driving a Mercer roadster.

Barr is a personal friend of Eddie Pullen, the leader of the Mercer racing pilots, and has been an ardent supporter of the Mercer star in all his racing events. He was one of the first to congratulate Pullen when he established a record of more than eighty-seven miles an hour in the Corona race, and he declares Pullen will be right up in the running this year at Indianapolis.

Barr will follow the National Old Trails route to Indianapolis, going through Needles, Flagstaff, Albuquerque, Trinidad, Kansas City and St. Louis on his way East. He will make the best time possible and has allowed himself twenty-one days, which will be exceptional time, considering the road conditions which prevail in the East at present. Barr expects to make his best time between Los Angeles and Flagstaff, for after that point is passed he will run into muddy roads for practically the remainder of the journey.

Barr is carrying special equipment for work in the mud holes of New Mexico, Colorado and Kansas, and anticipates very little delay on this account. Of course, the going over the muddy roads necessarily will be slow.

After the Indianapolis race Barr will tour to New York and New England, and will return to the Middle West for the Elgin road race. Immediately following the Elgin race he will drive home to Pasadena. While in the East Barr expects to purchase a new Mercer.

Ohio motorists are congratulating themselves that the Terrell bill making the owner of an automobile prima facie responsible for damage caused by accident, no matter who drove the car, has been defeated in the State Legislature by an overwhelming vote.

BUSINESS IS PICKING UP.

SUB CASINGS HAVE CUT IN PRICE SINCE THE INCREASE.

The Western Auto Sub Casing Company, Inc., announce a reduction in the prices of Fisher "Rim Grip" sub casings.

In announcing this price reduction H. S. Nettleton, general manager of the company said:

"The demand for Fisher 'Rim Grip' sub casings has increased to such an extent that our production had to be materially enlarged to meet it.

"Increased production means the use of larger quantities of raw materials and buying in larger quantities tends to reduce costs, especially when the present condition of the cotton and rubber market is considered. With this increase of production very little if any additional overhead expense is incurred than when production is light.

"At the present time the quantity of fabric consumed during the week at our factory averages two tons.

"Striking an average weight per casing of all the twenty-four sizes used now, gives us an approximate weight of five pounds each. This means about 800 sub casings per week manufactured to supply present demands, in this territory."

TWO PLACES IN RACE TO NASSAU.

Fred S. Wilson, vice-president of the Thermoid Rubber Company, manufacturers of Nassau tires, waxed very enthusiastic over the showing of his product in the Oklahoma City race last week when Bob Burman on his rebuilt Peugeot took first on Nassaus and Eddie Hearne's Case, also shod with Nassaus, blew in a close-up fourth.

Good Business Is Here!

A Message from Smith Brothers To Motor Car Buyers

The interest the buying public has had in our new 6-50 Premier even exceeded our expectations and our sales were so many that we are forced to change our sales policy temporarily.

Twice this month we were forced to give up our demonstrators to insistent buyers. We now are entirely sold out. However, two carloads will arrive Tuesday. Come in and see them.

Time Payments

Fortunately we have always been able financially to accept reasonable time payments on automobiles to responsible parties.

We will continue to do so, and be pleased to accommodate all buyers in this matter.

Used Cars

We have always made a fair allowance for used cars, believing that we were able to dispose of such cars to better advantage for the customer than they themselves.

However, our sales of new Premiers last month were so many, consequently we have too large a supply of used cars, which necessitates our abandoning our trading policy temporarily.

NEW TOURERS SELLING FAST.

SMITH BROTHERS DELIVER A BUNCH OF 'EM.

Chief Difficulty is not in Selling the Cars, but in Getting Them Out Here Fast Enough from the Factory—Ten Cars Delivered in the Last Two Weeks.

Smith Bros. announce the sale and delivery of the new Premier Six-50 since its arrival two weeks ago to Messrs. E. Semmel, J. P. Blenkiron, Walter Kays, Dr. Ralph Hagen, W. G. Hunt, Dr. J. F. Holleran and Charles Victor Hall. Also, Peerless touring car to Dr. C. P. Drum and a Peerless equipped with new type semiconvertible body to H. H. Eliel.

"The new Premier," says Mr. Teaboldt, sales manager, "is one of the best sellers with which I have ever been connected. Our chief difficulty now is in getting the Premier factory to let us have enough cars, as we have been able to deliver them as fast as received to date. We now have several orders on hand demanding early delivery. Our touring car with its many refinements and decrease in price seems to just exactly meet an existing demand, while our various roadsters with their very snappy lines and wonderful power and control, seem to appeal more directly to the class of buyers who have heretofore been satisfied with nothing costing under $4000 or $5000."

PRIVATE ROAD FOR FISHERMEN.

RESORT OWNER BUILDS MOTOR TRAIL TO STREAM.

Motorists Pay Toll to Guards at Gate Without Protest, but Claim is Made that Natives Refuse to Contribute and Commit Depredations on Property.

There are trout in the Sespe River near Henley's Camp. But to fish motorists had best comply with the formalities of the neighborhood or solemn and sundry things may happen.

Mr. and Mrs. Lee Kreps and Mr. and Mrs. R. T. Bull, who composed a party that drove to the camp in an Oakland touring car, discovered what the requisites are and brought the information back. "We were complacent and willing to submit to all the demands, so had no trouble, but I'd hate to go up there looking for fracas," said Kreps in describing the outing.

According to the Oakland party the public road beyond Fillmore is in poor condition. About six miles out it begins to improve, but a huge gate intercepts travel. Two huskies are camping on the site and the gate is not opened unless $3 is deposited. "It's a case of come through or walk to the river," says Kreps.

Henley owns all the land crossed by the road for about two and a half miles. Beyond his possessions the road is open to the public again. The situation is such that he controls all traffic absolutely, and the only way to proceed with the car is to pay up in order to get the gate opened.

As the owner explained the circumstances to the Oakland tourists, he has had to improve the road across his land wholly at his own expense. He says he has asked the road authorities repeatedly for help and even had a commissioner up there to look over the situation. The authorities will not act unless he deeds a road site to the county, and this he does not care to do.

Los Angeles motorists are disposed to be fair and usually are so bent upon fishing that they pay the toll without protest, Henley says. But he has had trouble with the populace of the near-by towns. He claims his property has been damaged, his signs against trespassing destroyed and a number of depredations committed.

PAIGE

"The Standard of Value and Quality"

You Buy An Asset In A Paige

YOU HEAR that the Paige "Six-46" is the Sensational Event of the motor car season—because of the distinctive beauty of its design, because of the amazing power and flexibility of its motor, because of its luxurious riding qualities made possible by its Cantilever Spring suspension, because of its unexcelled Gray & Davis starting and lighting system, because of its Bosch magneto, its Rayfield carburetor, its unique lubrication, its seven-passenger roominess, its 124-inch wheelbase and its astounding price—withal—$1525 here.

YOU HEAR that the Paige "Four-36" is the Sensational Event of the motor car season because of its powerful Paige motor, its silent chain drive, its splendid roominess and 116-inch wheelbase, its Gray & Davis system, its spring suspension, its ignition and carburetion and lubrication, its beauty and distinction of body design, because of its incredible new price—$1175 here.

BUT LET US TELL YOU SOMETHING. Conceding these attributes of the Paige—both "Six" and "Four"—there is something in Paige Value more fundamental even than these.

Paige Design in "Six" and "Four" means Economy in Paige Maintenance and Paige Operation. That means the Loyalty of Paige owners. That, perhaps, is the highest compliment to Paige Efficiency and the best proof of Paige Supremacy.

Information.

SAN DIEGO ROUTES ARE IN MUCH BETTER SHAPE.

CO-OPERATING with the Automobile Club of Southern California in making the historical 1915 motor tour a success, Lyon C. Buxton, in the official Moon scout car, reports the exact condition of the coast and inland roads to the San Diego exposition today.

Hundreds of motorists are passing over these routes continuously, and the demand for road information is steadily growing at the headquarters of the auto club.

Exposition officials declared last week that the automobile traffic to San Diego is a large factor in increasing the attendance at the fair. An average of four people go with each car, and as many as 100 automobiles tour southward during the week, carrying 400 motorists.

Mr. Buxton, local branch operator of the famous Moon cars at Pico and Olive street, stated yesterday that the coast road has been wonderfully improved by the highway supervisors through Orange and San Diego counties.

Detours are rapidly being replaced by completed paved portions of the State highway. Motorists who are going to San Diego via the inland road are advised to take the Valley boulevard to Pomona and follow thence over the diagonal road to Riverside, if they care for the most scenic tour.

From Riverside follow the Box Springs grade over the new highway to Perris. Work is starting now on the paving of the road from Elsinore to Murrietta. The auto club will route motorists over the best detour to avoid the highway construction. These signs will be found in Perris. Rain during the week has made it imperative that motorists starting on a tour to the Panama-California Exposition should apply at club headquarters, No. 1344 South Figueroa street, tomorrow.

NEW MODEL DRAWS FULL HOUSE UPON ARRIVAL.

Hundreds of Autoists Call to Give Machine the Once Over and Many Orders are Placed with Southern California Distributors Calling for Delivery as Soon as Possible.

Nothing new in the line of automobiles escapes the scrutiny of Los Angeles motorists. Let a new car or a new model be announced, and they flock to see it at once. That such a condition exists was shown during the week, when the six-cylinder Saxon held the boards as the latest thing out. Several hundred persons called at the salesroom of Hawley, King & Co. to give the car its first inspection. A number of orders were placed for delivery as soon as possible.

"I never was so surprised in my life," said Manager Reeve Gartzmann in commenting upon the subject. "With all the various kinds of cars coming to the city, eight cylinders and the like, we did not anticipate so many persons would be anxious to see the Saxon 'Six.'

"When the car arrived we put it on the sales floor along with the Oakland and National cars without making any particular preparation. The first morning it was here, though, the people began coming in such a great number we had to take three cars off the floor and put the Saxon in the middle of the salesroom, so all could be accommodated.

"The size of the car seems to be the first point to impress those who see it. The 112-inch wheelbase is the same length as nearly all five-passenger cars of any make, and nearly everybody expected a smaller car. The complete equipment was another feature that evoked favorable comment. There is not an 'extra' to be bought. Such details as robe and foot rails were not overlooked by the factory. These little details never fail to impress the probable purchaser."

GARDENA MAN ON FIRST SPEEDER.

To W. Niemann of the Boulevard garage at Gardena belongs the distinction of having driven the first Saxon "racer." Niemann stripped a Saxon roadster and entered it in the race at Gardena held in connection with the annual strawberry festival. He won second place.

The race was fifty-six miles over a course that included a number of sharp curves and short straightaways. Several high-powered cars were in the contest, and the one that finished in the lead of the Saxon has a horse-power rating of more than double the Saxon's. Niemann says he was able to make forty-five miles an hour, and although that does not sound very fast, he regards it as a splendid performance for a car of the Saxon type.

New Rapid Fire Gun.

[Indianapolis News:] After a series of tests the United States army has adopted a water-cooled rapid-fire gun of the type now in use on the European battlefields. The barrel of the gun is incased in a water jacket to prevent its becoming overheated. This is refilled during heavy firing, but when water is not easily available an apparatus is employed which condenses the steam generated in the jacket and allows the water to be used over and over again. The gun, which is operated by recoil, has a maximum firing speed of about 500 shots a minute, a somewhat slower speed than the air-cooled guns in ordinary use, but the water-cooled guns are expected to fire a greater number of shots in a long period because of the saving of the time consumed by the air-cooled gun in inserting the short feed strips. The regulation .30-caliber cartridge is employed and the range is 1500 to 1800 yards. Ammunition is fed into it by a belt which holds 250 rounds, the shells being automatically inserted and ejected as long as pressure is exerted on the trigger. The gun, which weighs ninety-six pounds, is set on a tripod so constructed as to make the weapon available for use against aircraft.

WAR AND LOVE.

A German Sergeant Ordered to the Front was Married and Separated in Two Hours.

[Leslie's Weekly:] As the train pulled out of Karlsruhe, I found that I had a sergeant as my vis-a-vis. The Iron Cross decorated his breast, and he was the recipient of felicitations from many people, including myself. He told me he had just left the hospital after a month of illness, his nerves having been shattered by his experiences at the front. I asked about these experiences and he told briefly and modestly, after much questioning, a story which runs as follows:

"I was in Darmstadt on duty when war was declared. A week later my regiment received orders to leave in twenty-four hours for the front. I had a sweetheart in Potsdam to whom I was to be married at the end of August, so I wired to her to join me the next morning. I was on duty until 8 a.m. My fiancee arrived shortly after that time; I had bought our wedding ring the night before. When she alighted from the train and saw me waiting she rushed into my arms, trying in vain to keep back the tears that were running down her cheeks. 'In an hour,' I told her, 'you will be the wife of a soldier, there you must be strong,' whereat she smiled. A great happiness and also a great sorrow overcame me. I was so glad to be with her and so sorrowful because I should have to leave her so soon. Two hours later we were married and we had two hours to pass together before I had to leave my dear young wife—perhaps for a short time only, perhaps forever. I can tell you that it was heart-breaking."

"SHOT UP" EL PASO.

Bullets and Bandits from Mexico Have not Prevented Profitable Business After Sundown.

[Washington Star:] In some ways the war in Mexico has injured business in El Paso and in some other ways it hasn't. There have been times when, for three weeks at a stretch, not a single one-night stand show happened along. But every time there is a new President in Mexico, which is quite frequent of late, El Paso grows in popularity as a health resort, Senor Luis Terrazas, Sr., still being dean of the corps.

The alfalfa growers have been having a hard time of late because of the scarcity of water, but the Elephant Butte dam is nearly ready, and the real estate agents are expecting to harvest at least seven crops of buyers a year.

While El Paso has been "shot up" by the Mexicans and overrun with cattle thieves, refugees and rifle smugglers, its legitimate exports to Mexico through the port of El Paso, for the year 1914 were $6,177,188, as against $1,970,827 for the year previous.

And there has been a lot of trade in the side streets after sundown. There are some men in El Paso who were so poor before the war that they could not afford to have their shoes half-soled who now refuse to send the cook to market in anything less than a six-cylinder car.

I know I can depend upon the Chamber of Commerce in El Paso to back me up in the statement that the city is located in the same latitude as Arabia, and that twins can be raised here more cheaply than anywhere else in the Southwest.

Where Dust Comes From.

[Baltimore American:] This question is probably asked every day (mentally) by those who try to get rid of dust, indoors and on the street. There are always in the air minute particles of earth floating about which are not visible to the eye. These are stirred up by the wind and because of their lightness.

When these particles consolidate the weight causes them to settle in a given place. This will be apparent in a room no one enters and where the dirt or dust has not been carried by any person.

The visible dust that accumulates outdoors is the result of the wind stirring up heavier particles than is in the invisible dust. Rain mixes part of this with the soil and the organic matter helps as a fertilizer.

Other parts of dust are oxidized and consumed by the air through the heat of the sun. Dust is continually changing from one form to another.

The New York State Automobile Association and the Albany Automobile Club are backing two bridge bills in the Legislature. One would provide for the taking over by the State of the Greenbush toll bridge, over the Hudson at Albany, and the other would appropriate $100,000 for the construction of a bridge at Dunsbach Ferry, over the Mohawk River.

In order to help the Buffalo Council to decide on the terms of a jitney ordinance, Chief of Police Regan recently wired the Police Chiefs of twenty-one cities asking how many jitneys were in operation and how they were regulated.

Washington, D. C., is to have a jitney service.

Summer, Too.

NON-SKID TIRE USEFUL ALL MONTHS OF YEAR.

THE general impression among motorists is that the non-skid tire is a winter tire. In this they are in error, declares Manager Tom Wilkenson of the United States Rubber Company's Los Angeles branch, who points out several reasons why the Nobby and Chain Treads are all-year and all-weather casings.

In the first place the owner of a car equipped with Nobbies or Chain Treads need never fear the results of rounding a corner and finding a wet pavement. This is a danger which constantly confronts motorists, summer and winter, and the only remedy is a non-skid tire.

The traction which a Nobby or Chain Tread casing will give in the sand is another important feature of this all-year tire. The extra protection from punctures and the longer wearing qualities of the anti-skid types also is another important feature.

Those motorists who tour extensively will find that Nobby and Chain Tread equipment on the rear wheels will prove a big advantage. In fording rivers, climbing steep grades and pulling through sand they are invaluable. Especially is this true of the chain tread type, which has proved a wonderful tire in the sand.

Manager Wilkenson reports that a large shipments of chain and Nobby tread tires is on the way to the Los Angeles branch now, and that he will be able to equip all sizes during the summer months as well as the winter.

As there are nearly 1000 signatures to the petition asking for a bus line connecting Chicago's aristocratic North and South sides, prospects for the establishment of the line are rosy. For some time it was feared that the residents of Lake Shore drive and Sheridan road, used to traveling in their own limousines, would object to having busses running on their streets, but this seems to be unfounded. Most of the signatures are those of residents on the two streets. The busses would operate for 10-cent fares, and thus could not strictly be called "jitneys."

Strong Testimony.

PERFORMANCE OF MOTOR ON LONG JAUNT PRAISED.

THAT motor-car interviews and photographs, no matter how unusual and difficult, are far from being as convincing as actual duty behind the steering post of a machine, is the conclusion of S. S. Davis, after driving from Los Angeles through mud and bad roads to Colorado, Tex.

In a letter to W. H. DuBois of the local Hupmobile agency he describes the route traversed by his party as one long run of "mud, sand, steep grades and rocks." With his car loaded to the limit with luggage, and carrying four adult passengers, Davis set out with the intention of following the Old Trails route. This idea was abandoned upon arrival at Flagstaff.

"The women of our party," wrote Davis, "are delighted with the performance of the car. For, while it has been driven many miles on the roads in the West, the fearful circumstances that we have encountered this far east were enough to challenge the worth of any car."

Davis has been wintering with his family in Southern California and purchased a Hupmobile early in January. In his letter he is so enthusiastic that he gives authority to quote him as the strongest kind of a 'Hup' booster. This is a result of the gruelling ordeal the car has gone through since leaving this city.

In returning to the East the party is making a number of stop-overs, and this in connection with impassable roads at places, is making the trip a leisurely one. According to Davis, they plan to average about 100 miles per day. As far east as Texas 158 miles has been the longest daily run, while the minimum is fifty-eight, with a total mileage of 1730 for the run.

Davis estimates a load of 1200 pounds, which includes four adult passengers, chicken wire, extra tires, kitchenware, water and tools. Outside of roads and weather, there has been but one delay and this caused by a blow-out with a spike in the front tire.

Economy.

TIRE ENTHUSIAST SAYS CORDS CUT DOWN COST.

"I FEEL that the number of miles of satisfactory service is the best gauge with which to measure the value of automobile tires," said W. P. Tribble, vice-president of the Buffalo Lounge Company of Buffalo, N. Y. "It is by this measure that I have judged Goodrich tires to be the most satisfactory from the user's standpoint.

"I used a great many different tires, carefully figuring the mileage obtained from each, and in 1903 I settled on the Goodrich, and since that time have used them continuously with one exception. Two or three years ago I was tempted by an excessive mileage guarantee to try another tire. My experience with them, however, soon brought me back to the Goodrich tires, and I could not now be tempted to give them up.

"The greatest tire that has ever been made is the Silvertown Cord. When I purchased my Franklin last year I found these tires were the standard equipment, and the tires have gone more than 7000 miles now without so much as a puncture in any one of them, and there is no indication of wear. The ribbed tread has the appearance of being as good as new, and I don't doubt that I shall get double this mileage from the tires.

"Another great feature about the Cord tires is the resilience which enables one to get so much more mileage from a gallon of gas. Recently I made a trip of 110 miles and by actual measurement my gasoline went thirty-one and three-quarter miles to the gallon. In shorter distances on the boulevards of Southern California, I have secured as much as thirty-four and three-tenths miles to the gallon.

"The Franklin car, of course, is wonderfully economical when it comes to fuel consumption, but I don't believe that even the Franklin, on ordinary tires, would begin to give that sort of mileage. It is this power transmitting quality of the Silvertowns that makes them so efficient in this respect, and when you combine with this resilience the wonderful durability of the Silvertowns one has the nearest to the tire ideal which has so far been manufactured."

Maxwell

This is the car that over 40,000 happy owners have given the "rough and tumble" acid test of real automobile owners' wear.

An automobile on the road for 22 months in constant, every day use by an owner ceases to be a designer's theory. It becomes—either a great automobile success—or it becomes a great automobile failure.

Multiply one Maxwell "25" by 40,000 and give each one of these 40,000 automobiles day in and day out rough and tumble road wear and if this car stands up and delivers, it has become one of the rare great automobile successes.

And that is the Maxwell success today—that is exactly the "acid test" that the Maxwell "25" has passed through; and that is why the Maxwell is the most talked about automobile that is built today.

The Maxwell "25" sells completely equipped, including electric lighting and starting for $850.00 delivered anywhere in Southern California or Arizona. Liberal terms if desired.

PRESIDENT SEES ALL PROSPEROUS.

Paige Head Completes Tour of the Country.

Pleased with Conditions on the Coast.

Home in Detroit Preaching Prosperity.

President H. M. Jewett of the Paige Motor Car Company has returned to Detroit after a tour of the United States, which extended from the Atlantic to the Pacific. Mr. Jewett was in Los Angeles a fortnight ago on the last leg of his journey. He visited and studied commercial conditions in every large commercial center of the United States.

Mr. Jewett talked with big business executives, with politicians and with every one who was in a position to know business conditions, and everywhere he secured glowing reports of business generally.

After his extensive trip the Paige head gave out an interview to the effect that the season of 1915 will prove more prosperous than any of the past. From the fact that what Mr. Jewett said was the result of a personal and unusually thorough investigation, his remarks have added weight.

"This pessimistic talk about general depression in all business fields is twaddle," said Mr. Jewett. "I felt from the very beginning that the industries of this country were too well founded to suffer much or for long from any cause outside of its own boundaries. But now I am firmly convinced that the business prosperity of the United States will go on without let-up.

"I have looked into the present conditions with my own eyes; have discussed the possibilities of the future with some of the biggest and most influential financiers and executives in the country and I have secured very reliable reports from hundreds of our agents and distributors. Everything points to but one conclusion. Business is in splendid shape and constantly improving.

"In the New England States I found every cotton and woolen mill straining every effort to produce enough goods to meet the demand. The large leather houses of this section were also at the height of their activity. These industries are the backbone of New England prosperity and as long as they continue on the basis of their present production there cannot be even a semblance of depression in that section.

"In the Central States and covering practically the entire area of the Mississippi Valley, nature, with the wise assistance of American farmers, has produced the greatest crop of recent years, representing a value in dollars that it is quite impossible to grasp.

"This record crop and the unusually high prices, due to the war and other conditions, brings to the farmers of America billions of dollars in extra profits. These farmers know absolutely nothing about any depression in the land. For them the sun of prosperity is shining. Their increased purchasing ability is helping to speed up the wheels of commerce and industry.

"On the Pacific Coast I was swept into a whirlpool of enthusiasm. Everybody was happy and prosperous. The entire West seems to be going through another important development that will undoubtedly leave it in better condition than it has ever been before. Since the formal opening of the two magnificent expositions, California has become a mecca for hundreds of thousands of visitors."

RADIATOR MADE IN TWO PARTS.

SHELL OF RADIATOR SERVES TO PROTECT CORE FROM BLOWS.

Owing to the delicate construction of the radiator of an automobile, a very light blow will sometimes put it entirely out of commission. The Maxwell Motor Company have adopted a radiator of two-unit construction. These units are the shell and the core. The shell is made of pressed steel and performs only two functions—that of enhancing the beauty and appearance of the radiator, but principally to serve as a buffer to the more delicate inner construction. As there is a quarter of an inch of space between the shell of the radiator and the core, it takes an extraordinarily hard blow from the top or the side to result in a leak; and, if the shell becomes dented, it is a very simple matter to remove four small bolts and entirely separate the core from the shell and remove the dents without affecting the core.

CYLINDERS AND POWER TRANSMISSION FIGURED.

JUST as a few months ago the question of the number of cylinders in the motor agitated the pleasure car industry, motor truck manufacturers and dealers now are showing concern in the various types of power transmission and propulsion.

After the four-cylinder car had been the accepted type for years, the "six" came into vogue and now the "eight" is the latest with probability of a "twelve."

The chain drive was declared by the truck pioneers to be the only practical system for transmitting power from the motor to the wheels. Some manufacturers of pleasure cars began building light trucks with a shaft drive, but the real advance was the appearance of the worm drive.

The "eight" of the truck world is typified now in the internal gear rear axle shaft drive, according to J. A. Stoner, manager of the Mack Motor Truck Company. Mr. Stoner's concern is the largest exclusive truck organization on the Pacific Coast. Its lines of Mack, Saurer and Republic trucks include seventeen different models.

Represented in the numerous models are all the types of construction. "There never can be any question but the chain drive truck is a success," said Mr. Stoner, "but for certain usages other types will prove more satisfactory. However, it must be conceded that with all the argument and discussion the selection of the drive is largely a matter of preference.

"The Mack truck has been built with a chain drive for years, but it now is to be had with a worm drive as well. All truck men agree the worm has its peculiar advantages.

"Speaking as an experienced truck man, it is my candid belief that theoretically and practically the internal rear axle shaft drive is the nearest approach to perfection as the final drive. We are having this shown daily in the performance of the Republic. By this system every bit of the power reaches the wheels. The load is carried on a dead axle and the power is transmitted through live axles to a set of gears within the wheels. This axle sustains no weight, its sole function being to drive the wheels."

Mileage.

TIRE WEAR UP TO THE DRIVER.

SO DECLARES LOCAL AUTHORITY ON AUTO CASINGS.

Dealer of the Opinion that Man Who Knows how to Take Corners Properly Gets Greater Mileage than Any Other—Try this a While and See how it Works.

The factor of mileage in tires depends greatly on the driver, declares Manager Jessup of the Los Angeles branch of the Kelly-Springfield Tire Company. Of course, there are many other features entering into it, such as construction and proper size for the weight of the car, but the personal element is the largest one.

Two drivers can take tires of the same make, the same construction and the same wearing qualities and one will get double the mileage that the other obtains.

It is the opinion of Jessup that the largest single feature entering into this is the way a car is handled on the corners. There may be numerous other reasons, such as improper handling of the brakes, too little or too much air in the tires or starting too suddenly, but Mr. Jessup points out the fact that the motorist who knows how to handle his car will get much greater mileage than the man who just skids around the corner and lets it go at that.

"Any one driving," said Jessup, "can tell whether the car is rounding the corner too fast. The way the car swerves in making the turn and the strain that one can feel when the speed is too high should warn one to take the next one easier. When the car skids or jerks around the corner, the entire weight and strain is coming on the side walls of the tire. Needless to say, this sort of driving will soon break down the best of tires.

"If one must take corners fast it is better to go into them conservatively and come out rapidly, 'giving her the gun' in the middle of the turn. This will prevent skidding and will get one around the turn just as fast as a skid."

Every Minneapolis automobilist who violates the traffic or automobile laws in the future will be deprived of the use of his machine for a full year, according to an edict issued by Police Judge Smith.

FACTORY OFFICIAL TALKS TO DEALERS.

VICE-PRESIDENT E. R. BENSON of the Studebaker Corporation was greeted by the largest and most enthusiastic gathering of Studebaker dealers and employees ever held in Southern California, at the Los Angeles Athletic Club last week.

The Studebaker official has been making a tour of the western territory and after a conference which followed the dinner, left for San Diego with R. D. Maxwell, manager of the local Studebaker branch. They toured in a Studebaker six via the inland route.

Benson talked at length to the gathering of dealers on the policies of the Studebaker company, its aims and ambitions, the basis of business on which it was founded and the outlook in general for the coming season.

After the talk over two hundred lantern slides were shown of the numerous plants, branches and places of business of merchants throughout the United States. Benson brought out very forcibly the point that the automobile business today is on a merchandising basis and that any firm selling automobiles is as much of a merchant as his brother in the hardware, dry goods or grocery business. From a very small start the automobile industry now ranks third among the manufacturing industries today, the only other two industries that are greater being the steel and food products.

"After the wonderful business that has been done the first quarter of 1915, without a question of a doubt this will be the biggest year in the history of our organization," says Benson, "for as well as having the best automobiles on the market for the money, the honesty of purpose that has always been put into Studebaker products gives us a proposition to sell without a premier."

FLYING SPARKS OF MOTORDOM.

Motor cars are now extensively used throughout India. In Calcutta there are about 2000 motor cars registered, and in Bombay about 1000. The cars are of various makes, but the cheap class of car predominates. There is keen competition between English and American manufacturers. While English cars retain a popular position for touring purposes, American cars are in better favor for use in and around different cities and towns, being cheaper and more serviceable. One American car holds the long-distance speed record of India, having made the trip of 1470 miles between Bombay and Calcutta in 73¼ hours.

The kind of car suitable for India is one which would easily lend itself to tropical conditions. Any car suitable for use in India should be fitted with a large petrol tank and ample radiator. Detachable wheels, preferably wire, are a desideratum. Wood gives place to metal for body work. A ground clearance of at least eight inches is essential. Cars of twenty horse power are as a rule most suitable.

Striking evidence of the effect of the European war on American automobile trade is shown in the government report on exports for February. Where only fifty-seven trucks, valued at $83,461, were exported in 1914, 1502 trucks, valued at $3,022,482, were sold abroad during February just passed. In February, 1914, there were 2637 passenger cars, valued at $2,378,494, shipped, as compared with 2230 in February, 1915, valued at $1,785,330. During the eight months' period ending February, the export of trucks increased from 493, valued at $797,722 in 1914, to 4974, valued at $14,411,924, in 1915. The passenger car exports decreased from 16,390, valued at $14,919,487, in 1914, to 9134, valued at $7,893,429, in 1915.

The American Motor Association of Dallas, Tex., is pushing a campaign for the completion of the Southwestern Motorway and the Southern National Highway. The first is routed from Chicago through Springfield, Alton, St. Louis, Jefferson City, Springfield, Mo.; Monnett, Muskogee, Dallas, and across Texas to the Mexican border. It thus runs through four States, Illinois, Missouri, Oklahoma and Texas. These four States last year purchased more automobiles than thirty-three of the other States. The Southern National Highway starts at Washington, D. C., and runs through Richmond, Durham, N. C.; Knoxville, Nashville, Memphis, Little Rock, Hot Springs, Dallas, Fort Worth, Sweetwater, Mescalero, N. M.; El Paso, Phoenix to San Diego. Both highways have been completely modernized in part.

It frequently happens that a car runs finely for a time and then the motorist suddenly awakes to the fact that its action is becoming less and less lively, and upon looking back, in the light of this illuminating realization, sees this failure has been coming on for a long while, but so slowly as to have missed attention until now. With such symptoms as these it should be noted whether the exhaust is smoky and smelly and remembered whether or not it is habitually so. If it is the most likely place to apply a remedy is in the muffler, the small holes of which are clogged and may be almost entirely closed. Exhaust back pressure works this way.

There is a tendency to regard the solid tire as a device which attained its highest point of possible development several years ago, and which, for a limited range of usefulness, has become a staple. Nothing could be more erroneous. Continuous improvements are being made in solid tires, in sectional design no less than in methods of attachment, and its scope is rapidly broadening out. Perhaps the greatest step in its advancement, however, was its adaptation to more or less standard detachable mounting, whether by the use of a regular clincher rim or by special means. Memories of the old process of stretching and joining the ends of "endless" bands are not pleasant.

Application has been made to the A.A.A. for a sanction to hold automobile races on the afternoon and evening of June 12 at Brighton Beach, New York. The Brighton Beach Motordrome management plans to illuminate the track with powerful electric and gas lights at night.

Million-dollar Attraction.

EXPOSITION AUTO SHOW THE WORLD'S GREATEST

American Motor-car Industry Well Represented by Wonderful Display in Palace of Transportation—[illegible] First of Kind in History of Motoring—[illegible] Makers Among Exhibitors.

THAT the motor car display in the Palace of Transportation at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition is the greatest automobile show in the history of motordom, is the consensus of opinion of thousands of motor "cranks" and manufacturers who have visited that portion of the great exposition.

The automobile division is given a great amount of space in the Transportation Palace and the surroundings are typical of the exhibits. A beautiful white trellis separates the automobile exhibits from those of monster locomotives. The wonderfuly ceiling borders, which have attracted great attention, are one of the features of the automobile section and have been the center of comment by the thousands who have seen them. Done on a huge scale are relief maps of the great automobile highways of the country, the principal one, that of the Lincoln highway, covering a great space. These relief maps show every item of interest to autoists who contemplate long journeys and a wealth of knowledge may be gained by a study of them.

ATTRACTIVE SCHEME.

The various coast routes are shown in a like manner while other spaces are given over to paintings of the wonderful scenes in California which are accessible by motor, including Yosemite, the beautiful spots adjacent to Los Angeles, Lake Tahoe and a score of other places equally interesting.

At no other automobile show ever held has such a scheme been attempted and the great relief maps in the Transportation Palace are pronounced the most wonderful of their kind ever erected. Every city and hamlet along the great routes is shown while the roads are marked plainly for their elevation and scenic attractions. Tiny electric bulbs of various hues are clustered about each stopping place and not a detail has been overlooked in presenting to motor enthusiasts the wonderful trips that may be taken in the United States with ease and comfort.

Naturally, however, the greatest interest is in the cars.

MAKING CARS.

The Ford exhibit has met with great success. Securing a big floor space this firm erected a miniature factory, where by means of rapid work, a complete car is assembled every ten minutes between the hours of 2 o'clock and 5 o'clock in the afternoon.

The bare frames are placed on a moving platform and as they glide slowly along, a squad of twenty-six men rapidly assemble the various units until, ten minutes later, the car rolls off onto the floor under its own power and is run out of the grounds by a waiting mechanic. This exhibit has proved a great attraction, not only to motor lovers, but to thousands of a mechanical bend.

In addition to this, the Ford Company has a splendid exhibit of all models on the floor, including their latest enclosed type which has created so much comment and in the Mines Building, adjacent to the Transportation Palace, the same company has erected a miniature plant, a replica of that at Detroit, showing this great system in operation as well as the system of caring for Ford workers after their factory hours.

MANY MACHINES.

Despite its mechanical attractions, however, the Ford exhibit is no leader among the wonderful displays of other cars. The Packard, Cadillac, Pierce-Arrow, White, Chalmers, Winton, Jeffery, Mitchell, Hupmobile and others have erected beautiful booths and have arranged their various models in a natty manner.

The Jeffery exhibit is certain [illegible] tract attention. Three handsome [illegible] ing cars finished in red, white [illegible] blue, respectively, are arranged [illegible] that order in the foreground [illegible] Jeffery floor space.

1 to 60 Miles Per Hour on High

CROWDED, CONGESTED TRAFFIC CONDITIONS DEMAND VERY slow motor speeds. You can creep along silently and smoothly on high gear at one mile per hour—slower than a walk—in the Haynes, America's Greatest "Light Six."

THERE'S NO NEED OF SHIFTING GEARS WHEN YOU ARE HEMMED in behind a slow-moving wagon.

SIMPLY TOUCH THE THROTTLE WHEN THE TRAFFIC CLEARS AND any speed up to a mile a minute is at your disposal.

ONE MILE PER HOUR OR SIXTY MILES PER HOUR WITHOUT shifting gears is possible with America's Greatest "Light Six" because every unit in the car is designed for flexibility. The six-cylinder 3½x5-inch en bloc motor is accurately balanced to give the constant pull at low speeds. The intake manifold is enclosed in the cylinder casting. The car is light and the weight is correctly distributed to the four wheels.

A RIDE THROUGH THE CROWDED DISTRICT WILL SHOW YOU WHAT HAYNES FLEXIBILITY OF CONTROL IS.

BASEBALL WAR WORKS HARDSHIP ON PLAYERS.

Where One Athlete has been Benefited it will Mean Thin Picking for a Dozen Others — Reaction is Following Ridiculous Salaries—Readjustment is Now Taking Place in All the Leagues.

BY HARRY A. WILLIAMS.

PLAYERS are just beginning to reap the results of the war made on organized baseball by the Federal League.

An inevitable reaction has set in following a year of great excitement and insane baseball salaries. Men on both sides of the controversy for a time lost their heads and ran amuck. Salaries are being slashed right and left, and athletes are being fired in wholesale quantities. The Feds are dropping their mediocre players as fast as the expiration of their contracts will permit, while clubs in organized baseball are shedding their surplus help in order to recoup some of their losses of last season. In many cases it narrowed down to a choice between retrenchment or bankruptcy.

The situation created by the advent of the Federal League looked alluring to those who cannot see more than three feet ahead, but to those schooled in the A B C of baseball it was apparent from the start that there must be a final accounting. While baseball is a sport, it also is a business, and it is one of the laws of business that the income must at least equal the outgo. This rule is as inexorable as the laws of nature, and failure to recognize it results in ultimate insolvency.

Last year it was t'other way about, and the magnates got hep to themselves in time to prevent a financial cataclysm. But for the determination of the leaders of the game to force a policy of retrenchment throughout organized baseball the game certainly would have been hopelessly wrecked on the shoals of financial disaster. [illegible] impossible to violate the laws [illegible] business without paying [illegible]

[illegible] Bill Page, the late, [illegible] baseman of the Angels, [illegible] the sufferers, for every [illegible] baseball war has [illegible] worked a hadship [illegible]. And there are [illegible] to come. The Feds [illegible] drop a lot of their [illegible] as soon as their [illegible] expire, and as a lot [illegible] have been de- [illegible] meantime, the outlook [illegible] for them.

[illegible] any use for a contract [illegible] players, bound by nothing [illegible] ordinary reserve clause, [illegible] over the Federals cannot [illegible] except, possibly, for their [illegible] of foresight.

Gilmore's Talk.

The latest alleged utterance of James A. Gilmore, president of the Federal League, is that the Feds do not desire peace. Gee, they must be having a lot of fun in the Federal League, regardless of high salaries.

However, this statement is quite hard to reconcile with an interview credited to Mr. Gilmore on April 17, as follows:

"It is [illegible] that the lawyers and the players are getting all the money. The promoters have little but experience for their pains. Peace and readjustment is bound to come in time, and the sooner the better for all concerned.

"Mind you, the Federal League is in the field to fight till it gains its end. The men associated with me have capital and the patience to go on indefinitely as at present.

"I do not mean to claim that the Federal League has been a financial success everywhere. The backers of the various clubs did not expect to reap financial harvests at the start.

"But getting back to the folly of the prolonged war. There are many players in our league, and in the American and National leagues, too, who are at best but a heavy burden to their employers. Their services cannot be dispensed with because they have been able to take advantage of chaotic conditions to extract ironclad contracts at salaries far beyond their real worth. The rank injustice to the promoters lies in the fact that these men are utterly indifferent about their moral obligations to those who pay their salaries.

"During the present war, baseball has suffered far more through the indifference of certain stars than through the avarice of these men which prompted them to make and break contracts at will. It has affected the very roots of the profession because it has ruptured discipline. Genuine club spirit now seems to be the exception rather than the rule.

"The principles of the Baseball Players' Fraternity are doubtless logical and sound. But here again, the undesirable element of the profession—the men who are content to accept money for loafing—has gone too far. The association has been used in some cases as a fulcrum to pry loose salary increases. These unfortunate conditions may not be alleviated while the rival forces of baseball are at each others throats. That is why I declare that further continuation of the fight is a shameful waste of time and money."

All of which would see to indicate that Mr. Gilmore and his associates are not quite as strong for the noble athlete as they were a few months ago.

There are some good, game sports in the Federal League, but they seem to have been somewhat shy in practical baseball experience. Most of them had plenty of money to spend, and seemed to think that the main thing in baseball is to get your name in the newspapers. Every possible trick was turned that could gain publicity. The signing of some player at a prohibitive salary made good winter reading, but it was h—ll when pay day arrived.

The Ehmke Price.

Organized baseball unquestionably slipped the Feds some terrible lemons—let them bid their heads off for certain players who were not really desirable.

This statement does not necessarily apply to Howard Ehmke, the kid pitcher who jumped from the Los Angeles club. He signed with the Feds at a salary of $700 a month or better, with a bonus in the bargain. No practical baseball man would have taken him under these conditions.

Ehmke was young and inexperienced, and there was no proof that he could pitch major league baseball. He made a wonderful showing in the Coast League the first part of the season, but met with repeated reverses later, and finished only a little better than 50-50. At best, he was but half a pitcher. That is, he could work only one game a week and be effective. On this basis he would receive at least $700 for every four games pitched in the Federal League.

It may be good baseball business to sign a comparatively untried youngster up at that figure, but it is significant that none of the managers in the American and National League, who know the game from both ends, would consider him at anything like that salary.

Ehmke has had no stronger booster than the writer. He may develop into a star, and we hope that he does. His case is simply cited as an example of some of the long chances taken by the Federal League.

MARATHON RUNNER HAVANA GUIDE.

CUBAN WHO RAN IN ST. LOUIS IN STARVING CONDITION SEES FIGHT.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, May 1.—An interesting sidelight of the recent Willard-Johnson heavyweight bout at Havana, Cuba, was the appearance of Felix Carvajol, the Cuban long distance runner at the ringside. Carvajol's reputation as a runner in the United States is based upon his feat in finishing fourth in the Olympic marathon held in St. Louis in 1904. Although defeated by Thomas Hicks, Alfred Corey, and A. L. Newton, all under American colors, the Cuban ran a wonderful race when his handicaps are considered, and had the honor of being the first of the foreign entrants to finish.

Previous to the race, Carvajol was a mail carrier in Cuba, who jogged over his route at a steady and apparently tireless trot. He first attracted attention when he ran the length of the island in remarkable time. As a result of this feat a few friends raised enough money to send him to the United States for the marathon in connection with the Olympic games of 1904. Carvajol landed in New York with just enough money to purchase his meals, not realizing that St. Louis was not a part of New York City.

In order to reach the scene of the race he was obliged to spend his food fund and arrived in St. Louis without a penny. He had not eaten for two days previous to the race, which he ran in heavy street shoes, a colorless cotton shirt and his only pair of trousers, cut off at the knees. Without assistance or an attendant the unknown Cuban dog-trotted along the course, stopping frequently to beg food and water from the spectators. At one point he spent fully half an hour in a roadside apple orchard. Despite these delays Carvajol finished in fourth place, the freshest of all the runners. It was the general opinion that had he been properly attended and coached he would have won the 1904 Olympic marathon easily.

Today Carvajol is guide and runner for Havana's leading hotel. Still trim and bronzed he can trot mile after mile with little apparent effort, but admits that he is too old to run in the next international marathon. He expresses regret in a casual way that he was not prepared financially and otherwise for his St. Louis race, which he still believes he could have won in easy fashion. Carvajol is conversant with athletics in both the United States and Europe and will spend an evening discussing in broken English the performances of the stars of the cinder track. One chapter of his athletic career is sealed, however, for Carvajol will not tell how he managed to return to Cuba. He simply shrugs his shoulders and changes the subject when questioned on this point of his invasion of the United States.

DAD MOULTON GETS HUNCH.

WINDMILL BUILT NEAR POLE VAULT.

Athletes Can Gage Jump by Speed of Mill—Towel Supply Runs Low. Hereafter Deposit to be Required. Training Quarters Now Easily Best in the United States.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

EXPOSITION GROUNDS, SAN FRANCISCO, May 1.—Dac. Moulton is now a permanent fixture of the exposition track. Last week he moved into a neat little three-room apartment, built especially for him. Mrs. Moulton is on the scene too, and the two have held open house for the last week.

Hunch Man.

Dad is one of the best hunch-getters that has ever appeared in western athletics. He lives on hunches, and it's a poor day when he can't discover a new one. And the hunches are of the most amazing variety. One time it is a hunch about a new fixture for setting hurdles, or a real hunch about the air currents that whip over the hills back of the track and cause the aviators to flutter and flop, or a deep-seated dark hunch which bares the whole musty secret of why somebody failed to have salt when the dove of peace hovered over the two quarrelling universities. Oh, Dad is full of hunches.

The Windmill.

You see, there is quite a little breeze along the Marina where the track is located, and for a time Dad was nonplused, especially when he considered what it might do to a man about to pole vault. The man would be swung into the pole before he was ready to clear.

For some days Dad sat pensively with his face to the wind. He studied that breeze until he knew every little gust by name, and could tell to the whisper just when each little zephy was due. Then, as is his wont, he had a hunch. Why not build a windmill close by the standards, so that when the mill whirled in the wind the vaulter might gauge his speed.

As the days wore on, each filled with breezy observations, the hunch grew stronger, until at last Dad acted. Now the pole vaulter may watch the windmill set by the standards and know just when and how to vault. It [illegible] of silent coach.

Who Took the Towels.

Who took the towels? That question is one that athletic directors are asking each other. After the interscholastic meet, held a couple of weeks ago, the towel supply was found to be short. Of course, Dad has a hunch as to who took the towels, but he has another hunch that he says is better. Hereafter, all visiting teams will be required to make a towel deposit which will be refunded to them if the full supply is returned.

Great Quarters.

Undoubtedly, the training quarters erected here are the largest and most complete that have ever been put at the disposal of athletes. Under the huge bleachers, which pile back from the track, there are ten large rooms, each equipped with rubbing tables, benches, lounges and hot and cold showers.

In the middle of this row of rooms is a large reception hall and rest-room, while at the side a buffet is being fitted up. A strong room for the trophies and cups is built at one end, and at the other are telephones and a telegraph office. Everything for the accommodation of the public and press is complete.

First Real Meet.

The first real big meet of the exposition season is to be the Pacific Coast Conference meet, which is to come May 7 and 8. Entries are now being received by Athletic Director McGovern.

A line of steam automobiles will be operated through the Scenic Park district, surrounding Denver, by a transportation company, which has just been organized with a capital of $50,000. The busses will run between Denver and Golden, Lookout Mountain, Estes Park, Genesee Park, Grand Lake, Bear Creek, Idaho Springs and other mountain resorts.

WATCH THE TIMES PRIMARY ELECTION BULLETINS.

The Times will bulletin primary election returns Tuesday night, May 4, in front of the New Times Building, First and Broadway, and The Times Branch Office, 619 South Spring street.

Up-to-the-minute returns will be received from every precinct in Los Angeles, and thrown upon large screens opposite the New Times Building and The Times Branch Office.

The Times also will give returns by telephone to all who call.

It is impossible to violate the laws of nature or business without paying the penalty.

To quote Bill Page, the late, lamented second baseman of the Angels and one of the sufferers, for every player that the baseball war has benefited, it has worked a hadship on a dozen others. And there are more hardships to come. The Feds must of necessity drop a lot of their second-rate players as soon as their fancy contracts expire, and as a lot of classy youngsters have been developed in the meantime, the outlook is indeed bleak for them.

Nobody has any use for a contract breaker, but players, bound by nothing but the ordinary reserve clause, who went over the Federals cannot be criticised, except, possibly, for their lack of foresight.

Gilmore's Talk.

The latest alleged utterance of James A. Gilmore, president of the Federal League, is that the Feds do not desire peace. Gee, they must be having a lot of fun in the Federal League, regardless of high salaries.

However, this statement is quite hard to reconcile with an interview credited to Mr. Gilmore on April 17, as follows:

"It is shame that the lawyers and the players are getting all the money. The promoters have little but experience for their pains. Peace and readjustment is bound to come in time, and the sooner the better for all concerned.

"Mind you, the Federal League is in the field to fight till it gains its end. The men associated with me have the capital and the patience to go on indefinitely as at present.

"I do not mean to claim that the Federal League has been a financial success everywhere. The backers of the various clubs did not expect to reap financial harvests at the start.

"But getting back to the folly of this prolonged war. There are many players in our league, and in the American and National leagues, too, who are at best but a heavy burden to their employers. Their services cannot be dispensed with because they have been able to take advantage of chaotic conditions to extract ironclad contracts at salaries far beyond their real worth. The rank injustice to the promoters lies in the fact that these men are utterly indifferent about their moral obligations to those who pay their salaries.

"During the present war, baseball has suffered far more through the indifference of certain stars than through the avarice of these men which prompted them to make and break contracts at will. It has affected the very roots of the profession because it has ruptured discipline. Genuine club spirit now seems to be the exception rather than the rule.

"The principles of the Baseball Players' Fraternity are doubtless logical and sound. But here again, the undesirable element of the profession—the men who are content to accept money for loafing—has gone too far. The association has been used in some cases as a fulcrum to pry loose salary increases. These unfortunate conditions may not be alleviated while the rival forces of baseball are at each others throats. That is why I declare that further continuation of the fight is a shameful waste of time and money."

All of which would see to indicate that Mr. Gilmore and his associates are not quite as strong for the noble athlete as they were a few months ago.

There are some good, game sports in the Federal League, but they seem to have been somewhat shy in practical baseball experience. Most of them had plenty of money to spend, and seemed to think that the main thing in baseball is to get your name in the newspapers. Every possible trick was turned that could gain publicity. The signing of some player at a prohibitive salary made good winter reading, but it was h—ll when pay day arrived.

The Ehmke Price.

Organized baseball unquestionably slipped the Feds some terrible lemons —let them bid their heads off for certain players who were not really desirable.

This statement does not necessarily apply to Howard Ehmke, the kid pitcher who jumped from the Los Angeles club. He signed with the Feds at a salary of $700 a month or better, with a bonus in the bargain. No practical baseball man would have taken him under these conditions.

Ehmke was young and inexperienced, and there was no proof that he could pitch major league baseball. He made a wonderful showing in the Coast League the first part of the season, but met with repeated reverses later, and finished only a little better than 50-50. At best, he was but half a pitcher. That is, he could work only one game a week and be effective. On this basis he would receive at least $700 for every four games pitched in the Federal League.

It may be good baseball business to sign a comparatively untried youngster up at that figure, but it is significant that none of the managers in the American and National League, who know the game from both ends, would consider him at anything like that salary.

Ehmke has had no stronger booster than the writer. He may develop into a star, and we hope that he does. His case is simply cited as an example of some of the long chances taken by the Federal League.

MARATHON RUNNER HAVANA GUIDE.

CUBAN WHO RAN IN ST. LOUIS IN STARVING CONDITION SEES FIGHT.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, May 1.—An interesting sidelight of the recent Willard-Johnson heavyweight bout at Havana, Cuba, was the appearance of Felix Carvajol, the Cuban long distance runner at the ringside. Carvajol's reputation as a runner in the United States is based upon his feat in finishing fourth in the Olympic marathon held in St. Louis in 1904. Although defeated by Thomas Hicks, Alfred Corey, and A. L. Newton, all under American colors, the Cuban ran a wonderful race when his handicaps are considered, and had the honor of being the first of the foreign entrants to finish.

Previous to the race, Carvajol was a mail carrier in Cuba, who jogged over his route at a steady and apparently tireless trot. He first attracted attention when he ran the length of the island in remarkable time. As a result of this feat a few friends raised enough money to send him to the United States for the marathon in connection with the Olympic games of 1904. Carvajol landed in New York with just enough money to purchase his meals, not realizing that St. Louis was not a part of New York City.

In order to reach the scene of the race he was obliged to spend his food fund and arrived in St. Louis without a penny. He had not eaten for two days previous to the race, which he ran in heavy street shoes, a colorless cotton shirt and his only pair of trousers, cut off at the knees. Without assistance or an attendant the unknown Cuban dog-trotted along the course, stopping frequently to beg food and water from the spectators. At one point he spent fully half an hour in a roadside apple orchard. Despite these delays Carvajol finished in fourth place, the freshest of all the runners. It was the general opinion that had he been properly attended and coached he would have won the 1904 Olympic marathon easily.

Today Carvajol is guide and runner for Havana's leading hotel. Still trim and bronzed he can trot mile after mile with little apparent effort, but admits that he is too old to run in the next international marathon. He expresses regret in a casual way that he was not prepared financially and otherwise for his St. Louis race, which he still believes he could have won in easy fashion. Carvajol is conversant with athletics in both the United States and Europe and will spend an evening discussing in broken English the performances of the stars of the cinder track. One chapter of his athletic career is sealed, however, for Carvajol will not tell how he managed to return to Cuba. He simply shrugs his shoulders and changes the subject when questioned on this point of his invasion of the United States.

DAD MOULTON GETS HUNCH.

WINDMILL BUILT NEAR POLE VAULT.

Athletes Can Gage Jump by Speed of Mill—Towel Supply Runs Low. Hereafter Deposit to be Required. Training Quarters Now Easily Best in the United States.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

EXPOSITION GROUNDS, SAN FRANCISCO, May 1.—Dac. Moulton is now a permanent fixture of the exposition track. Last week he moved into a neat little three-room apartment, built especially for him. Mrs. Moulton is on the scene too, and the two have held open house for the last week.

Hunch Man.

Dad is one of the best hunch-getters that has ever appeared in western athletics. He lives on hunches, and it's a poor day when he can't discover a new one. And the hunches are of the most amazing variety. One time it is a hunch about a new fixture for setting hurdles, or a real hunch about the air currents that whip over the hills back of the track and cause the aviators to flutter and flop, or a deep-seated dark hunch which bares the whole musty secret of why somebody failed to have salt when the dove of peace hovered over the two quarrelling universities. Oh, Dad is full of hunches.

The Windmill.

You see, there is quite a little breeze along the Marina where the track is located, and for a time Dad was nonpulsed, especially when he considered what it might do to a man about to pole vault. The man would be swung into the pole before he was ready to clear.

For some days Dad sat pensively with his face to the wind. He studied that breeze until he knew every little gust by name, and could tell to the whisper just when each little zephy was due. Then, as is his wont, he had a hunch. Why not build a windmill close by the standards, so that when the mill whirled in the wind the vaulter might gauge his speed.

As the days wore on, each filled with breezy observations, the hunch grew stronger, until at last Dad acted. Now the pole vaulter may watch the windmill set by the standards and know just when and how to vault. It [illegible] of silent coach.

Who Took the Towels.

Who took the towels? That question is one that athletic directors are asking each other. After the interscholastic meet, held a couple of weeks ago, the towel supply was found to be short. Of course, Dad has a hunch as to who took the towels, but he has another hunch that he says is better. Hereafter, all visiting teams will be required to make a towel deposit which will be refunded to them if the full supply is returned.

Great Quarters.

Undoubtedly, the training quarters erected here are the largest and most complete that have ever been put at the disposal of athletes. Under the huge bleachers, which pile back from the track, there are ten large rooms, each equipped with rubbing tables, benches, lounges and hot and cold showers.

In the middle of this row of rooms is a large reception hall and restroom, while at the side a buffet is being fitted up. A strong room for the trophies and cups is built at one end, and at the other are telephones and a telegraph office. Everything for the accommodation of the public and press is complete.

First Real Meet.

The first real big meet of the exposition season is to be the Pacific Coast Conference meet, which is to come May 7 and 8. Entries are now being received by Athletic Director McGovern.

A line of steam automobiles will be operated through the Scenic Park district, surrounding Denver, by a transportation company, which has just been organized with a capital of $50,000. The busses will run between Denver and Golden, Lookout Mountain, Estes Park, Genesee Park, Grand Lake, Bear Creek, Idaho Springs and other mountain resorts.

Some test for trucks.

A fleet of distillate-burning, Los Angeles-made Morelands running up Grand avenue hill with overloads on them.

A Parade.

IGHT TRUCKS CLIMB A STEEP HILL ALL AT ONCE.

THE time is not long past when a loaded motor truck attempting to negotiate Grand-avenue hill as little short of a curiosity. This as looked upon as the supreme test nd a successful trip over the steep d treacherous climb resulted in the le of many commercial cars.

It is only a little more than three ears ago that the first Moreland uck was sent over this same hill arrying a capacity load. This test as closely watched by many prosective truck buyers and the ease th which the Los Angeles-manufacured power wagon reached the sumit produced a lasting effect.

More than 1200 Moreland trucks re now in daily service and Grandenue hill has long ago been passed as a testing ground by its buildrs.

Quinterb hill, with its 24 per cent. rade, and shied at by practically ery eastern truck builder, was next bdued and made to look easy by the Moreland. Bear Valley grades and the San Bernardino switch backs were conquered with such complete success that today a test is rarely asked for by a prospective purchaser at the local truck plant.

Just prior to a recent delivery to a local oil concern of eight three-and-one-half-ton Morelands a unique test was decided upon. The entire fleet with their tanks loaded to capacity were driven to the foot of the origional testing ground.

From a standing start at the foot of the hill two abreast and not more than ten feet apart, the fleet of eight trucks was driven over the 18 per cent. grade. Over the summit without even hesitating the first trip was made. A second trip was then made including a stop in the steepest point on the hill.

The test was a complete success and it will no doubt furnish a surprise to the transportation world. Sending eight trucks, representing more than $25,000, into a treacherous hill at the same time is no small risk.

AUTO CLUB'S HIGHWAY TABLE.

WITH scout cars covering all portions of Southern California highways, the Automobile Club of Southern California has prepared a complete account of highway conditions.

To San Diego via Coast Route.

Road conditions have changed, according to the quantity of rain in each locality. At the present the coast road to San Diego is practical. but south of Laguna Beach that road is affected by rain, as it consist mostly of adobe. The seven-mile stretch of adobe road which runs along the fence north of Oceanside is soft at the present, and there have been cars mired there within the last few days. There is also a bad place near the top of the Torrey Pine grade, where they have been working on the road, and the rain has made it soft.

Inland Route to San Diego.

This route at the present is still passable and will be ,unless a great deal more rain falls within the next few days. It is advisable upon leaving Perris to follow the new auto club signs, which mark the best possible detour. Upon leaving Perris motorists may take the road to the left and follow on the Ethanac road to the boundary line, where the club signs will be picked up and followed through to Murrietta. It is also necessary to take the detour around through Murrietta Hot Springs, thence back into Temecula, as the culvert between Murrietta and Temecula is still unrepaired and affords a very muddy crossing.

San Diego to Imperial.

This route has not been affected to any extent by the rain; it has really benefited, as the rain on the sand in the desert helps pack it and makes a firm roadbed. This trip will be greatly enjoyed by everybody and is one of the many interesting spots in the State of California to the easterner.

San Francisco Coast Road.

This route is passable at the present, although if other than business the trip should not be taken, as it is far from pleasurable, there being a great deal of mud encountered north of Los Olivos, also north of Bradley. There will also be a great deal of water in the Santa Maria and Salinas rivers, these two particular spots having to be forded at the present on account of lack of bridges. The auto club does not recommend people going north any further than Santa Barbara at the present. The Conejo grade should not be taken for at least another two or three days on account of mud north of Camarillo. Also in the course of another week or ten days the highway will be complete from Ventura to Carpenteria. The last stretch of unfinished pavement is nearing completion. This is located at the end of the last causeway before crossing the Rincon Hill. The present route to Santa Barbara, which should be used for the next three days is via Saugus, Castaic, Piru, Fillmore, Santa Paula, Ventura, and thence on the Rincon.

CARROLL AND JUST HUNT THE WARY TROUT WITH SUCCESS.

E. Richard Just, the vulcanizer, is some fisherman, and last week he undertook to pilot Frank Carroll of the Goodrich Company to the best spots in the Little Bear Lake region. They encountered some very bad weather and extraordinary rains a great deal of the time they were in the district, but in spite of this fact both Mr. Carroll and Mr. Just got good strings of trout to pay them for their perseverance. Both are determined to try this section again after the weather has settled.

MOLINE-KNIGHT MODEL COMING.

NEW LIGHT CAR IS NOW ON THE WAY OUT TO LOS ANGELES.

Manager G. M. Flint of the Moline Automobile Company was pleased to hear that his first carload of light Moline-Knight "4-40" machines has left the factory and will probably be here about the first of next week. The model "4-50" touring cars and roadsters are already here and since the factory branch moved down to "Automobile Row" quite a number of the silent cars have been sold.

There are 341,250 motor vehicles of various descriptions in use in the United Kingdom, according to an estimate made recently by the secretary of the Good Roads Board. Of these machines, approximately 136,000 are privately owned automobiles, 132,000 are motorcycles, 4500 are omnibuses, 36,500 are cabs and the remaining 32,250 are motor trucks of various types and styles. For example, there are 11,700 gasoline machines of over two tons capacity, and 3500 steam vehicles in the same class, while of the 17,050 commercial cars having capacities under two tons, 14,000 are of four-wheel construction and 3050 are three-wheel types.

Never place the boot on top when a car top is wet. If it is desired to store the car for any length of time, raise the top or dry it thoroughly before folding.

A Good Idea.

DESIGNERS WORK FOR A LOWER COST OF UPKEEP.

"ECONOMY of operation and upkeep is the governing idea at the Maxwell factory," says Harry Lord, of the Lord Motor Car Company. "The efficiency of every plan originated by the designers and builders of the Maxwell "25" is finally determined after the most exhaustive tests from the standpoint of economy.

"There are, as we all know, four kinds of automobile expense—fuel expense, tires, repairs and accessories. The extent of the last-named item is, of course, optional with the car owner.

"As to repairs, the expense depends for the most part on the sturdiness of the car. The metallurgical department at the Maxwell plant devotes its entire time to experimenting on composition and treatment of various metals used in automobile construction, and the best proof of their success in choosing the best materials are the non-stop, non-break records made by the Maxwell racing cars on the Pacific Coast during the past four months.

"These racing cars are used by the Maxwell engineers to a very great extent for the purpose of proving the metals and designs which they have worked out in theory and through experiment at the plant.

"Careful choice of materials is the very best insurance against many and costly repairs.

"Tire expense is reduced to the minimum in the case of the Maxwell '25,' first by building a light and well-balanced car and then by equipping it with oversize tires all around. Mr. Frank Avis, No. 2919 Santa Rosa avenue, Pasadena, purchased a Maxwell '25' on December 16, 1914 and we have just received a letter from him stating that 'one of the tires which was on the rear wheel of the car when I bought it has gone the entire 12,002 miles and still has the original air in it." And Mr. Avis has run his car in jitney service ever since he acquired it.

"The most convincing proof of the fuel economy of any automobile is in the performance of the car in actual service. Mr. Taylor of Ventura drove from Nordhoff to Los Angeles one day last week with five people in his Maxwell touring car, and their baggage, and when he drove into a garage in Los Angeles and had his gasoline tank refilled it required less than two gallons and a half to fill it to the running-over point. He had driven a total distance of over seventy-seven miles on 30 cents' worth of gasoline. Mr. Taylor reports the road in very good condition with the exception of a stretch for about four miles from the bottom of the grade north of the range above Calabasas."

Shutting Off.

TWO METHODS OF MAKING YOUR HEADLIGHTS DIMMER.

"THIS proposition of dimming the head lamps of automobiles in order to reduce the light for city driving or when the car is left standing seems to be a puzzle to most people," declares Froman Speers of the Bekin-Speers Auto Company, distributor of the Haynes Light Six.

"To make the matter clear, suppose that there are two tubs to be filled with water and that a separate pipe carries the water to each tub. The tubs will receive a certain amount of water within a given time. One of two methods may be used to reduce the amount of water flowing into the tubs.

"Both tubs may be filled from the same pipe and the other pipe turned off. In this method less water is used in the same time that both pipes were flowing. The second method is to allow the water to flow into the tubs through the two pipes and cut holes in the pipes so that part of the water in each pipe may leak out. In either case the amount of water reaching the tubs will be less than in the first case.

"Now the electric current behaves in the same manner. The head lamps are the tubs and the wires the pipes. The electric current is the water flowing through the pipes. When the lamps are burning at the full intensity current is coming to each one through separate wires. The only way to make an electric lamp give less light is to cut down the current flowing through it. The wires may be cut the same as holes were cut in the pipe, and resistances or coils of wire connected in to use up part of the current so that less current will reach the lamps. Obviously more current is being used when the lights are dimmed by this method than were the lights burning brightly, but this system can still be found on some cars.

"The most economical way is to actually reduce the amount of current going to the lamp by switching both lamps into series the same as both tubs were filled from the one pipe and the other pipe shut off entirely. In this method the electricity is saved by turning the dimmer switch just as gas is saved in a gas light when the gas is turned down low."

Consul-General Mansfield, at Vancouver, in a report on jitney operation in that city says about 350 cars are being operated. Average daily receipts of each jitney are reported at $8, and the traffic of the British Columbia Electric Railway has been severely affected.

SAVAGE QUALITY—4

The Savage "shock absorber"

ILEAGE of the Savage averages ay above other tires—due largely the Savage cushion. Finest rubr compounded according to our pecial secret formula produces a ushion stock of greatest resiliency. But two rubbers of widely differnt characteristics do not adhere readily. So the "breaker strip," a corded fabric impregnated with a special form of rubber, is used to unite the cushion with the tread.

Cushion and breaker strip, working together, are shock absorbing in the highest degree, and so distribute each impact on the tire that it is practically absorbed before reaching the carcass.

This means great endurance and is one of the reasons why Savage Tires give such long mileage.

POMONA TO STAND BY FRESHMEN RULE TO END.

Huns Point Out that Trojans had All the Competition They Wanted in Football and Baseball—Claim that the Present Freshman Class is Full of Athletes — Hint U.S.C. Needs Freshmen to Take Stars' Places.

Pomona College has not been heard from on the freshmen rule that has been arousing so much excitement in the south and north. The Huns were the first collegians in California to adopt the rule barring freshmen. What they have to say on the vexing question follows:

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

CLAREMONT, May 1.—With the freshman rule on trial for its life in Southern California, Pomona College, its sponsor, feels that a few words should be said in favor of the innovation that is expected to prove a cleansing agent for intercollegiate athletics.

Pomona adopted the rule a year ago last fall without any hope at that time of any of the other colleges falling into line. The Huns, in adopting the rule, felt that they were taking a step which would ultimately work for the good of Southern California's college athletics by helping to bar the so-called "ringer."

Occidental and U.S.C. quickly followed Pomona's lead, and a new conference was formed with this rule as a basis. Both promised to give the question a fair trial, and not to pass judgment until it had had plenty of time to prove its worth.

THE PROTEST.

U.S.C. has been the first school to get anxious on the freshmen rule. On the other hand, Pomona and Occidental, both smaller schools, which would naturally suffer the most at the hands of any law barring such a large proportion of their students, are heart and soul in favor of the rule.

It is complained that the smaller conference schools, without the aid of the freshmen, cannot give U.S.C. a close enough run for first money to make competition exciting. The Huns, on the other hand, cannot see the logic of this argument, in view of the fact that the coveted football championship of the State is held by Pomona, and because of the fact that the championship was won against a team representing U.S.C. In making the statement that there is no competition for the Trojans in the south, the 1914 football season is forgotten.

Again, in baseball, Occidental and Whittier, both Southern California schools, hold wins over the Trojan nine. The Trojans cannot complain of lack of competition in baseball either.

STARS GOING.

Only in track are the Trojans the decided superiors of their smaller rivals. With Drew and Kelly to form the backbone of the team, U.S.C. defeated both Occidental and Pomona by large scores. However, Kelly is just now completing his last season of intercollegiate competition, having represented his college now for four years. There seems to be some doubt, also, as to whether Drew will return to this State next year. With these two stars gone, U.S.C. will get all the competition it asks for in track, and possibly a little more. Even if Pomona and Occidental should use their first-year men, they could not defeat the Trojans with such stars as Drew and Kelly to compete against.

Pomona does not advocate the barring of freshmen from athletics because she does not get her fair share of high school stars. This year's crop of athletes in the beginning class has been unusually large, and the Huns face the coming year in athletics with the best prospects that Pomona teams have ever faced. The present freshman class contains stars in all branches of sports, men who will be eligible for competition next year. The Huns are sincere in their support of this measure.

NEED HELP.

The Huns feel that the rule has not been given a fair trial. They affirm that the present season has been unusually successful when the fact is considered that this is the first year of the new conference. The last football season produced some of the best football that has ever been seen in California, and this without the aid of the freshmen.

Discussion of this question of the elimination of freshmen from intercollegiate athletics may be heard all over the campus, and it is furnishing almost as much excitement as the coming conference meet. Some students even go so far as to say that U.S.C. feels that her teams will be outclassed next year without the aid of some of their old stars, who will graduate, and that the Trojans feel the need of freshmen to bolster up their teams for the coming year. Others affirm that U.S.C. is sincere in her agitation against the rule.

Nothing official has been done in regard to the matter. However, no matter what the other schools may decide to do, the Huns are determined to stand by their decision made a year ago. Pomona will never use freshmen again, and hopes that the other colleges of Southern California will come to the same conclusion as regards the matter. The Huns will stand pat, and expect the support of Occidental when the matter comes up for discussion May 8.

HAP HOGAN TAKES SWIPE AT FRESHMAN EXCLUSION.

HAP HOGAN has joined the intercollegiate insurgents and come out openly against the freshman rule.

The leader of the Venice Tigers claims that the strict rulings of the intercollegiate conferences are responsible for a decrease in the number of college athletes. He says that every young man should take an active part in athletics and that the college authorities should encourage the men, rather than do everything possible to discourage them and turn them from outdoor sports to their books.

"There is such a thing as a man overdoing athletics," said Hap. "Just as in everything else, there is a chance to play too strong, but it's better to have a man physically strong than mentally strong and weak physically.

"I believe that the colleges spend too much time arguing about a man's classroom standing. It should be a proposition of honor. If a man is in college he should be allowed to compete for that college, no matter what class he is in as long as he is carrying a reasonable amount of work and satisfying the faculty.

"This ringer talk and professionalism is nonsense. I think that if any man on the Venice ball club decided that he wanted to go back to college to study law, medicine or some other profession, he should be allowed to represent his college in any branch of athletics. What is the difference if one man makes some money playing ball and another works as a waiter?

"A man should not be dubbed a professional and cut off from any of the activities of his college just because he received money for competing in athletics. The professional man in college should be given the same consideration as the boy who works his way through as a waiter or who cuts lawns after hours. And if a man is good enough to stay in college he should be good enough to play on the teams no matter whether he is a freshman or a senior or a special student."

CACTUS KATE COMING BACK.

Nevada Road Now Thoroughly Logged.

Auto Club Signs to be Put up Shortly.

Fine Roads and Wonderful Scenery.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

ELY (Nev.) May 1.—Preliminary logging work over the Los Angeles-Ely road was finished here last night with the arrival of the automobile club party in the Packard, "Cactus Kate." Within the next thirty days a flood of west-bound motor travel will be headed for the Pacific Slope and a heavy proportion will take the Los Angeles road.

They will find the Automobile Club signs in place, according to Frank Jordan of the Auto Club, who has been doing the logging work en route. Jordan tonight mailed to Los Angeles the data for the signs to be placed and work on their construction will be commenced next week.

Tourists who take the Los Angeles road at Ely will find not only a good road for practically the entire distance, but one of beauty and scenic interest. The eastern tourist will enjoy the big mining camps of Tonopah and Goldfield. The high altitude through which the road traverses the Nevada deserts insures freedom from excessive summer heat. The passes at Lida and the White Mountains furnish wonderful mountain scenery. And with the entry into Owens River Valley the tourist finds a farming country of extraordinary beauty lying in the shadow of one of the most magnificent mountain ranges in the world.

The great Los Angeles aqueduct is crossed and recrossed by the road and its engineering marvels are a source of constant interest. The character of the roadbed is almost without exception a firm gravel, insuring an excellent highway, despite rains. And everywhere along the road the tourist finds ample evidence of the good work that is being done by the local good roads organizations.

It is a heavy task for the sparsely settled portions of California and Nevada to maintain the long stretches of road through their borders, but they are doing their work in excellent fashion.

Only twice did the Packard party find stretches of any length demanding gear work. One was the climb out of the Owens River Valley over Westgard Pass, and the other from Deep Springs Ranch, where heavy rain had just fallen. The Silvertown cords with which "Cactus Kate" is shod reached Ely with all Los Angeles air and no perceptible signs of wear.

Tomorrow "Cactus Kate" will set out on the return journey, which will probably be made in faster time.

The heaviest rains that have fallen in ten years in Nevada made the journey from Los Angeles a slow one, but indications tonight are for good weather for the return trip.

BILLIARD EVENTS.

George Kirkland outplayed E. Bowers by 100 balls to sixty-seven, at the Majestic billiard academy on Friday evening, having undertaken to give the latter twenty on 100. The Coast champion was not up to form, gathering fourteen in his best run, and making a number of unaccountable misses in open positions. Bowers scored high run of the game, sixteen. During the twenty-seven innings required, Kirkland scratched thrice, played safety twelve times, and made eleven misses. Bowers scratched twice, played ten safeties and made fifteen misses.

Kirkland ends his open challenge series without the loss of a single game, either on even terms or odds. His exhibitions give way to the tournament for the city championship trophy.

The tournament for the Los Angeles championship trophy holds the stage at the Majestic billiard academy this week, with eight entries competing for four prizes. The entire schedule will consume nearly six weeks.

Manager Alfred E. Mackenzie has placed George Kirkland in charge of the affair, and he announces the first round schedule as follows:

Monday, L. W. Evans and L. W. McCain; Tuesday, William Maguire and Robert Harbor; Wednesday, Joseph Kennedy and R. E. Lee; Thursday, E. Bowers and D. Kilmer.

Pedersen ties Graham for third prize in the bankers' pocket billiard tournament, having won from Bradford last night at the Voorhies palace in fifty-one innings. Bradford made high run of ten, the totals standing at fifty to thirty-six. The tie is to be contested in an extra game.

Lusk beat Woodward, forty to twenty-seven, in the Nelms-Brunswick combination billiard tournament Friday night, the game going forty-nine innings. The schedule is to be resumed this week.

The jitney bus service continues to thrive in Baltimore, and several new lines have been started. Among the latest is a pay-as-you-enter affair fitted up with a signal bell for the passengers to ring when they want the vehicle to stop.

National Commission Refuses Reinstatement.

Hempstead Surrenders All His Claim.

Jumper Finds Leaping Poor Business.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, May 1.—As a result of a conference between H. M. Hempstead, president of the New York National League baseball club, and R. B. Ward, president of the Brooklyn Federal League club, held this afternoon in connection with the special meeting of the Federal League called to consider the status of Player Benny Kauff, Mr. Hempstead announced that he had surrendered all the claims of the New York Giants to the services of Kauff. Statements issued said the situation had arisen from a misunderstanding.

CINCINNATI (O.) May 1.—The National Baseball Commission today refused the application for reinstatement of Benny Kauff, Brooklyn Federal League player, who signed a New York National League contract on last Thursday.

The finding of the commission follows:

"Player B. Kauff applies to the National Commission for reinstatement in organized baseball. His request is refused for the reason that in the past he had not respected his contractual obligations and therefore in our judgment is not a desirable person to be identified with the great national game."

The decision was arrived at after numerous telephonic communications had taken place between Chairman August Herrmann and President Tener of the National League and Johnson of the American League, the other two members of the commission.

CHICAGO, May 1.—Jacques Fournier, the Chicago American slugger, with an average of .462, leads the batters of the American League, according to averages published here today. Cobb, Detroit, is hitting .420, closely pushing Veach, his teammate, with .423, for second place. The others hitting in the .400 class are Lapp, Philadelphia, .417, and Jacobson, Detroit, .408.

With nine thefts to his credit, Cobb leads the base stealers.

Including games of last Wednesday, five pitchers in the league have two or more victories without a defeat. Dauss, Detroit, leads, with four wins; Fisher, New York, has three, and Boland, Detroit; Benz, Chicago, and Caldwell, New York, two each.

Heinie Groh, Cincinnati, leads the National League, with an average of .429 and his closest rivals are Luderus, Philadelphia, .425; Connolly, Boston, .407, and Whitted, Philadelphia, .400.

Base-stealing honors go to Snodgrass, New York, and Beecher, St. Louis, with five. Grover Alexander, with four straight victories, leads the National pitchers. Next are Schneider, Cincinnati; Chalmers, Philadelphia, and Pierce, Chicago, with two wins each and no defeats.

Eddie Lennox, Pittsburgh, leads the batters of the Federal League. In the seven games he has been at bat six times and has a batting percentage of .500. Next comes Westerzeill, Brooklyn, .476; Mann, Chicago, .437; Duncan, Baltimore, .436; Gagnier, Brooklyn, .435; Meyers, Brooklyn, .417; Russell, Baltimore, .400. Kauff is hitting .378 and sets the base-stealing pace with nine.

Allen of Pittsburgh, with four wins to his credit, leads the undefeated Federal pitchers. Kaiserling, Newark, with three victories, and McConnell, Chicago, with two, are closest rivals.

CALIFORNIA'S STATEMENT.

[The following statement has been issued by the California Intercollegiate Committee, explaining the State University's stand in breaking with Stanford and insisting on the barring of freshmen from athletics.]

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

BERKELEY, May 1.—To the genuine regret, we believe, of both universities intercollegiate athletic relations are terminated. The central issue in controversy was the so-called freshman ineligibility rule advocated by California and opposed by Stanford. This rule provides that a student shall not be permitted to compete on a "varsity" team during his first year in college. It is now due to the public that we should state why California believes and insists on the rule and cannot in deference to her honest convictions continue intercollegiate contests unless they be governed by the rule.

THE EASTERN UNIVERSITIES.

There is assuredly strong presumption that what the foremost universities of the United States have after long experience found good for them will be also good for us. We have taken special pains to communicate with such universities and the replies show that Harvard, Yale, Michigan, Cornell, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Illinois, Chicago, Nebraska, Texas, etc., observe the rule and regard it as essential to clean and right athletic standards. We do not desire to proceed in defiance of the best judgment of the best colleges unless there be convincing reasons, and we are aware of none why we should stand in isolation.

Men have been known to enter universities or to be persuaded to enter universities for athletics alone. Sometimes even athletes of special attainment or promise are practically hired in some cases, by secret and guarded devices to register as students.

NO ACCUSATIONS.

The Stanford committee assures us that no such unfortunate occurrences have ever happened at their university. We have answered that we make no accusations and that we do not base our contention for the freshman ineligibility rule on any specific cases. Those in authority at the two universities would not, of course, stoop to, or when they know, tolerate, such practices, but it is certainly undeniable that the temptation is ever present to the irresponsible fraternity or alumnus or so-called friend of a university to bring to the campus a great athlete, and by questionable and secret methods maintain him there. We wish to discourage such men by requiring of all students a year's residence in the university before they shall be eligible for "varsity" teams.

TEN YEARS.

For some ten years California has been urging the freshman ineligibility rule on principle. This year the California students instructed their committee that the time had come to insist on the rule upon the ground that, much as they desired intercollegiate contests with Stanford, they would rather forego the contests than the principle. Such being their position, arbitration obviously is impossible.

AGREEMENT IMPOSSIBLE.

After many meetings an agreement seemed impossible and the committees adjourned. Immediately thereafter the Stanford committee summoned us and proposed the following programme, consisting of five items: The first, the freshman ineligibility rule, was a concession to us; the fourth, the restoration of freshman intercollegiate contests conditional on the consent of the Stanford faculty, was desired by both sides; the second and third, modifying the scholarship requirements for athletes at the two universities and excluding students in the affiliated colleges from University of California teams, were concessions to Stanford; the fifth, a gentleman's agreement to continue intercollegiate contests this term on the present basis, was requested by Stanford and consented to, though reluctantly, by us. The affiliated college rule would deprive us of men like Beeson and Rice. The concessions to Stanford were for us a serious matter, but the students finally consented to confirm our approval of the Stanford programme.

When the Stanford faculty declined to allow the restoration of freshman games we suggested the elimination of that provision and that the programme should in all other respects stand as drawn. These freshman contests were desired by both sides and their elimination would therefore be a sacrifice by each party, but a sacrifice which, as we pointed out, would surely be worth making in the interest of the continuance of intercollegiate relations.

To our surprise Stanford refused to accept this proposal and it then developed that the Stanford students never had approved the programme laid before us by their own Intercollegiate Agreement Committee and that they regarded it, in the words of the editor of the Daily Palo Alto, as a "mere tentative proposal very doubtful of acceptance even if the Stanford faculty should consent." When this was the situation, why did they not so inform us and at once? We never suspected till some ten days ago that the Stanford students were casting aside all that had been achieved by the long deliberations of the two committees.

We gave Stanford every concession asked by her representatives. Now that our ways have parted we assure Stanford that we cherish toward her no ill-will. We do not question her motives. We simply regret that she cannot see, as we sincerely believe we see, that the time has come when it is the imperative duty of the two leading universities of California either to abandon intercollegiate athletics or to adopt the approved method of placing them on a plane above suspicion and distrust.

HAMLIN MAKES ECONOMY TEST.

Ralph Hamlin made 35.1 miles on a single gallon of gasoline yesterday in a Franklin 6-30 touring car as his contribution to the National Franklin economy test.

This exceeded his mark of 34.6 made last year. He was accompanied by Prof. Fred D. Hood of Polytechnic High School and Roy Compton as observers. The trip was over the Wilshire boulevard to Santa Monica and return, then out Vermont to Slauson and return, via Figueroa street, to Jefferson, where she wheezed her last gasp. The run is very remarkable.

Studebaker

DIFFERENCES

—FULL-floating Rear Axle
—Drive thro' TWO radius rods and Torque arm
—TRIPLE-life, double-shackle Springs
—NEVER-failing Battery Ignition
—OVER-size brakes and Brake Equalizer
—13 Timken Bearings
—Finish that takes 20 operations and 60 days in shops

When you buy a car, you have to take so much purely on the manufacturer's say-so that it's enlightening when you can lay your finger on DEFINITE details that show HOW the car is built and use them as indications of the quality that runs thro' the entire car. Here ARE differences—DEFINITE details that you can see with your own eyes—details of design that any engineer will tell you are important. Take the list with you when you go to look at cars—and judge the car by how closely it lives up to what you can get in a Studebaker at $985.

No other FOUR on the market uses a Rear Axle as good as the Studebaker FULL-floating Rear Axle—and most of them use the earlier types of axles—not so safe—not so accessible.

Only four other FOURS use radius rods—and of them, two have very LIGHT rods that take up only part of the driving strains. They cost $90 to $210 more than the Studebaker FOUR. Other Fours drive thro' the springs.

Whenever the springs have to take up any of the driving thrusts at all, it is necessary to have one end firmly fastened to the frame. Hence, it is impossible to use spring-shackles at both ends as in the Studebaker FOUR. Used at both ends, spring-shackles take up the end-play and make the car VERY much easier-riding. Only two other FOURS have them. They cost up to $210 more than the Studebaker FOUR.

Five of the Fours that are "said" to compete with the Studebaker FOUR use the obsolete magneto system of ignition, although they cost up to $210 more than the Studebaker FOUR.

Not one of the other Fours on the market has brakes relatively as large as those on this Studebaker FOUR. Studebaker is using brakes larger than those on most cars weighing half a ton more. Only five of the other cars use a brake equalizer—and the only brake equalizer that compares with the Studebaker Brake Equalizer is on a $5,000 car.

Not one of the Fours running $300 more in price than this Studebaker FOUR uses as many Timken Bearings as Studebaker does. Studebaker is Timken's best customer. Uses Timken Bearings at EVERY point of hardest wear.

Not one of the Fours at any price can match the finish of this Studebaker FOUR for the simple reason that Studebaker has more than 63 years' experience in finishing fine vehicles of every nature. This Studebaker FOUR at $985 goes thro' no less than 20 operations and spends 60 days in the paint-rooms.

—and not one of them has them ALL except this

Studebaker FOUR $985

Just a note to say that if you want a 1915 Studebaker, you'd better order now—for we are practically SOLD OUT and doubt if it will be possible to get more cars when those in our showrooms are delivered to owners.

TETZLAFF IS IN BLIZZARD.

Teddy Tetzlaff, former world's premier automobile road race driver, is believed to be lost in a raging blizzard somewhere between Chandler's Ranch, Bouquet Canyon, and the summit of the Tejon Pass, on the road to Bakersfield. Tetzlaff is known to have passed Chandler's Ranch on his way into the Tejon after having been warned that the mountains were blocked with six feet of snow. His destination or whereabouts are unknown. He left Los Angeles in a Maxwell "25" several days ago, supposedly on a trip to Bakersfield to inspect the Maxwell agency there.

Oaks Win in Tenth.

after crisis until the seventh, when the Tigers bobbed up with two runs and tied the count. This offset the pair promoted by Oakland in the first round.

Hap Hogan directed the team from the dug-out. Bundled up in overcoat, earmuffs and mittens, Hap looked like an Eskimo, and about all that could be seen of him was the end of his noble nose. Hap is only recently risen from a bed of influenza, and he wasn't taking any chances.

JOEY AGAIN.

Joe Berger pulled off some mighty fine stuff around second base, and sawed off a double and a single, only to suffer a relapse in the tenth. Kuhn, the red-headed catcher, opened the tenth with a drive that Joe subjugated after a severe struggle. He then pulled Gleischmann off the base with a hot throw that was wide. Middleton forced Kuhn, Berger to Risberg. Lou Litschi, who is supposed to drive the ball to left field when he does not miss it entirely, confounded all those present by crashing one through Gleischmann that was entirely too warm to handle with comfort. Middleton hiked along to second on the smash.

MANEUVERING.

At this point, Christian decided to do a little maneuvering and sent Rube Gardner in to bat for Prough. Rube knocked a jitney fly in short center. Berger, Bayless and Risberg surrounded the pill, but couldn't capture it on the fly. Middleton ran along home with the winning run, while this was happening. Litschi, who had feared that the ball might be caught, remained, jumping up and down in one spot about half way between first and second. His attitude was one of extreme doubt and indecision. When he did finally decide to advance, it was too late, Bayless having tossed to Berger for a force-out. Gardner was flagged stealing. Yesterday, Tub was cutting down base-runners with great eclat.

That run looked mighty big, and didn't diminish any when Pruiett pitched the last half and buzzed something up that the Tigers couldn't see. He simply one-two-threed the top of the batting order.

THE SCORING.

The Oaklets scored two runs in the first inning almost before the crowd had firmly anchored, which is very unusual to them.

Johnson, who is new here, did not know exactly where the home plate is located, and walked Marcan. Mundorff fouled to Tub. Marcan then stole second while Johnston was engrossed in striking out. Ness shot a clean single to center, and Marcan galloped home. The pill eluded Bayless, who was coming in at full tilt. Dick was forced to wheel around and chase back from whence he came, but before he could overtake the escaped sphere Ness had raced clean around to the plate. Berger skited over back of second, picked Lindsay's mean bounder off his left hip and whipped to first for the completion of a sensational play.

ELECTRIFIED.

Carlisle electrified the crowd with a catch of great power and beauty in the sixth. Johnston hit the pill far afield. Walt chased back and with his face held firmly in the direction of the fence, hopped high in the air and yanked the drive down with one hand as it whizzed over his shoulder. This made Johnson feel pretty good, but it caused Johnston's usually sunny disposition to curdle and turn to clabber. (Note difference in spelling of names. One is of Swedish origin, and the other is something else.)

DAWDLED ALONG.

The Tigers dawdled along, getting a man around to third now and then, but they invariably failed to connect with the home plate until the seventh. Gasoline Gus singled, and was forced by the other Gus. Tub Spencer, who was in great batting form, sliced a single to center and Gleischmann gained third. Kane, batting for Johnson bounced the ball high in front of the plate. When the ball finally came down Kuhn used it to throw Johnny out at first as Gleischmann was already across. Carlisle singled Spencer in from second with the tying run, Tub showing a surprising burst of speed and fine determination. Berger fanned.

When Wilhoit busted a triple to right center with no one out in the eighth, a score seemed inevitable, but it wasn't. Bayless grounded to Ness, and Joe did not dare to make a dash for the saucer. Risberg also drove to Ness, and Jack touched him out on the line, all the time keeping his right eye glued on Wilhoit, who was mighty anxious to score, but couldn't. Hetling drove to Marcan, and our last real chance had evaporated.

ENGLISH MAY PLAY GOLF IN AMERICA.

FAMOUS CHAMPIONS SAY THEY MAY ENTER TOURNEYS IN UNITED STATES.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, May 1.—Final decision on the part of a number of the leading English professional golfers relative to participating in the United States open championship is expected within the next few days. Edward Ray and Harry Vardon have already announced their intention of competing in the open-title tournament at Baltusrol June 15-18. George Duncan, James Braid and J. H. Taylor have intimated that they will make the trip to the States, and should all five compete in the open event, it will prove one of the few real international contests of the year.

These five players between them have won the English open championship seventeen times in the past twenty-one years. Vardon has captured the title six times, Taylor five times, Braid five times and Ray once. Vardon also won the United States open in 1900, when the title tourney was played at the Chicago Golf Club at Wheaton, Ill. In 1913 Ray and Vardon tied with Francis Ouimet in the final round at Brookline, Mass., being defeated in the play-off by the youthful American golfer after one of the most sensational matches ever played on an American course. Their participation in the United States championship would lift that event to the international plane held by the 1913 tournament, when the leading professionals of England and France met the best American amateurs and professionals at Brookline, Mass.

ERZOG AND UMPIRE HAVE FIGHT IN CARD-RED GAME.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

ST. LOUIS, May 1.—Umpire Rigler and Manager Herzog of Cincinnati fought on the local National league field and later caused each other's arrest upon charges of peace disturbance.

In the seventh inning Huggins of St. Louis put Leach of Cincinnati out at second by the hidden ball trick. Herzog disputed Rigler's decision and was ordered off the field. A few minutes later he returned and, according to Rigler, called the umpire a name. In a flash Rigler tore off his mask and struck Herzog in the face with it.

The two clinched and pummeled each other until twelve policemen and their fellow-players separated them. Herzog was taken to the clubhouse with a bleeding nose and discolored eye. Rigler showed few marks of the encounter. St. Louis won from the [illegible] 6 to 5. Score:

Why the Bird's Song Changes.

[Baltimore American:] It is generally assumed that a bird sings because he is happy, but science goes deeper for an explanation of the why and wherefore of the bird's song. Nature's optimistic joy in constructive progress is expressed in the singing of the male birds, who charm their mates to further their wooing, and continue after eggs are laid to encourage the fulfillment of hatching.

The song stops when the little birds come out of the shell. The nightingale, for weeks during the period of nest-building and hatching, charms his mate and human ears near him with the beautiful music of his love song. But as soon as the little nightingales come from the eggs the song changes to a sort of guttural croak, implying anxiety and sense of responsibility.

If the nest and contents were destroyed the nightingale would at once resume his beautiful song to inspire his mate to help him build another nest and start all over again the loving work of being fruitful and multiplying.

MISS MUNGER IS BEATEN.

L. A. High Girl Loses to Miss Biller.

Peterson Does Away with Winnie.

Finals to be Played Next Wednesday.

Play was again resumed yesterday forenoon in the City High School tennis tournament on the Y.M.C.A. courts, and as a result some of the best tennis seen in the high schools of the south was played. The defeat of Grace Munger of L. A. High in the girls' singles by Nora Biller of Manual Arts was the sensation of the morning's play.

Miss Munger has been considered the best of the girl tennis players of the south and her defeat came as a surprise. Miss Munger put up an excellent fight, but the hard serves and drives of Miss Biller were more than she could stand. Although Miss Biller won in straight sets, both were hard played and went to duce. The final score stood 6-4 and 8-6.

In the boys' singles the match between Peterson of L. A. High and Winnie of Manual was the drawing card. Winnie played excellent tennis, but Peterson performed up to his playing in the State tournament when he and his partner, Clover, won the State doubles championship. Peterson won on his fine drives from the back of the court, while Winnie made his points on his service and his slams when up to the net.

Following are the results of the day's play:

REB RUSSELL TOO FOXY FOR DETROIT SLUGGERS.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

CHICAGO, May 1.—Russell proved an enigma to Detroit today, holding them to three scattered hits, and Chicago shut out the visitors 5 to 0. Ray Schalk's homer with two men on the bases was enough to give the locals the game, but they added two more by bunching hits in the third and eighth innings. The score:

WHALES DEFEAT BUFFEDS, 2 TO 1.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

BUFFALO, May 1.—Prendergast outpitched Anderson in a 2-to-1 victory for Chicago today. It was Anderson's first appearance in the box here this season. He pulled out of what looked like a bad fix in the fourth inning, when the visitors secured only one run out of three singles and a base on balls. With the bases full and one out, Farrell forced Fisher at the plate and Prendergast struck out. Score:

Ambitions.

AUTOS BY TRAINLOAD TO MAKE DEALER HAPPY.

WHILE Clarence English last week thought his sales force was busy when they unloaded three carloads of the new King eights, he made up his mind that they might be a little busier when he received information from the King factory that a solid trainload of King eights had been shipped to the Chicago agents. As a result English is planning to have a trainload of eights shipped to Los Angeles.

This was the first trainload of eights ever shipped to an agent. It was consigned to R. J. Morgan and C. F. Woods, the Chicago distributors. Sales Manager W. F. Daly and Treasurer F. A. Volbrecht witnessed the departure of the train and then went to Chicago to attend the reception of the King eights at that end.

All the cars were unloaded at once and driven through the business section of Chicago. It was the most emphatic demonstration of the return of good business to the Middle West since the Chicago Automobile Show. Reports from the East are to the effect that the popularity of the eight-cylinder car is rapidly increasing and both the King and Cadillac companies are unable to meet the heavy demands on them for shipments. Both factories have been taxed to the limit to keep anywhere near up with the orders and record shipments have been the rule. The King plant has been working three shifts for several weeks.

Some Business.

COAST COMPANY IS THE LARGEST IN COUNTRY.

THE Coast distributors for the Overland car, J. W. Leavitt & Co., enjoy the distinction of being the largest individual automobile distributing firm in the world. This firm marketed 4500 Overland cars last year and bids fair to exceed this figure for the season of 1915.

This large volume of business naturally makes the firm one of the largest purchasers of supplies in the country. The necessities for carrying on the motor-car selling business, when bought in quantities, naturally cost a great deal less than they do in small lots, and the Leavitt company is taking every advantage of this. Among their recent purchases was a carload of bill heads and a carload of spring clips.

Reports received from all parts of the country indicate that the business of the Overland distributors is constantly increasing. Not only on the Coast do the distributors face the need of more room for selling their product, but throughout the country districts the rapidly-growing business almost swamps the dealers.

The factory output, according to information received by Manager Starr of the Los Angeles branch of the Leavitt Company last week, will be increased next season from 300 to 600 cars a day. In announcing the increased production, John North Willys declared he sees the brighest future for the industry. He predicts that the companies which did the biggest business this year will have little trouble in increasing their sales next year.

"The automobile industry has reached that point at which the manufacturer finds the renewal trade quite a factor in his business," said Mr. Willys in a recent interview. "Still, the general development of the country, the increased prosperity of the farmer and the establishment of new industries all tend to create a new field of buyers, and this is still the commanding feature of the automobile industry.

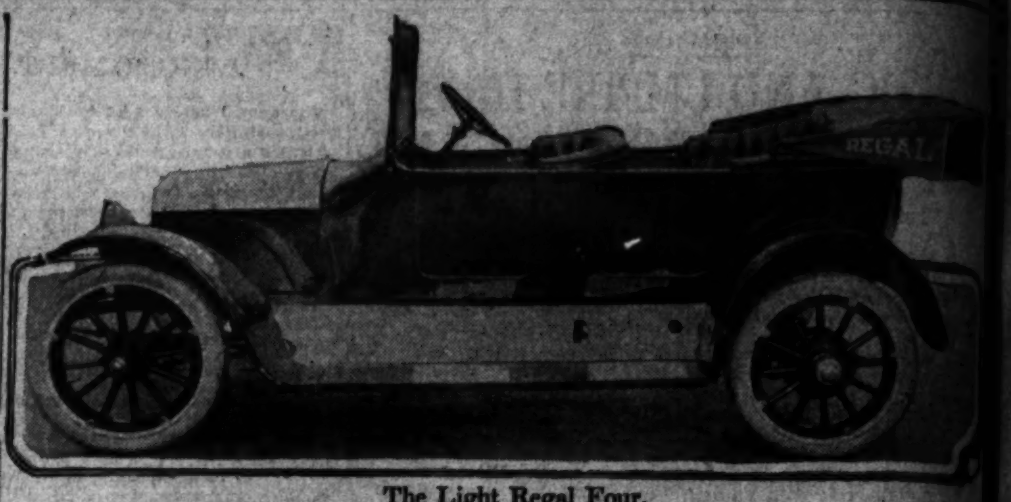
"Five years ago I said that indications pointed to the control of the industry by five houses within the next few seasons. Conditions today prove that this prediction was true. Out of nearly 100 motor-car manufacturers, five supply nearly 80 per cent. of the entire American output.

"These five companies have successfully diagnosed the needs of the American public and have built cars which would meet the general demand. They have built cars that give services at a price in keeping with the public purse."

Referring to the remarkable strides made by his own company, Mr. Willys said, "The Overland factory is today the second largest producer of automobiles in the world. In 1908 the Overland output was 465. Today in thirty-six hours as many cars are built as were marketed in the entire season of 1908.

"This statement is backed by the fact that our output has given us first choice of position at the New York automobile show for 1913, 1914 and 1915. This means that we had the second largest output during these years, the largest manufacturer not being a member of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce."

An automobile indemnity association has been formed in Sioux Falls, S. D., under the automobile insurance law passed during the last session of the Legislature. The association will insure each member of $2500 for injury to one person and for $5000 for injury to two or more, and for $500 property damage. According to the law, there must be at least 500 members.



The Light Regal Four,

LIGHT FOUR A SENSATION.

FIRST CARLOAD SOLD IN A SPEEDY MANNER.

Classy Little Touring Car Selling for Less than Eight Hundred Dollars has a One-man Top, Electric Lighting and Starting System and All Other Improvements.

Following the announcement of the arrival of the new Regal light four models, there has been a continuous reception at the Regal sales rooms on Olive street. The car has created a veritable sensation. The price of $745 delivered seems phenomenal and the local representatives believe that the advent of this model marks a new era in automobile prices and value.

The new Regal model shows all of the refinements and up-to-date features of other cars of much higher price, and carries the one-man top, crown fenders, dimmers in headlights. The full cantilever spring suspension gives the car surprising riding qualities, without the recoil of the old-style elliptical springs.

The starting and lighting system is the new Dyneto non-stallable type and is operated by switch on the dash and is absolutely noiseless in operation.

A number of outside dealers have called and signed up for the Regal line, as the new model, in connection with the Regal light eight to be placed on the market within thirty days, and the standard four-cylinder, makes a complete and attractive line for the dealers.

The first carload of the light four were all sold the first day they were shown, and other shipments are en route and orders being taken for delivery in rotation, pending arrival of future shipments.

RUNNING IN CAR TRACKS IS RUINOUS TO CASING

"IT IS remarkable how few motorists realize the danger of running their tires in the car tracks," declares Eddie Lingenfelder, manager of the local branch of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company. "It is true that a car runs easier, and the jolts to the mechanism are greatly reduced, but it is expensive comfort. There is no quicker way of ruining tires.

"The tread of a tire is the thickest part because there the greatest wear takes place. The sides have a thinner wall of rubber to protect the fabric. Now when a tire is run in the car tracks the wear is concentrated on the side of the tread and the side walls. The constant contact of the tire and the inside surface of the rail causes abrasion or wearing away of the rubber. The rail soon cuts through and ruins the tire.

"This practice of running [illegible] car tracks is also a common [illegible] among drivers of solid-tire [illegible] Only the outside edge of the [illegible] on the rail, and consequently a small part of the tire [illegible] whole load. The result is [illegible] outside edge wears off while [illegible] of the tire is apparently in [illegible] dition. Take a five-inch [illegible] Constant running in car [illegible] wear off one and one-half [illegible] the surface, reducing it to a [illegible] and-one-half-inch tire. [illegible] three-and-one-half-inch tire [illegible] pelled to do the work of a [illegible] tire, which amounts [illegible] overloading.

"This effect is still more [illegible] where dual tires are used [illegible] rear wheels, a few inches of [illegible] on one tire being compelled [illegible] dure the strain intended for [illegible] tire surface of two tires.

"Car tracks must be avoided [illegible] mileage is wanted."

Real Facts.

CONFIDENCE IN CARS IS SECRET OF REAL SUCCESS

HARRIS M. HANSHUE, manager of the local Apperson branch, says that confidence is the keynote of the success of Apperson sales during the present season.

The Fairchild Gilmore Wilton Paving Company purchased its sixth 1915 Apperson Jackrabbit last week, because of its confidence in the strength and durability of the car and in the service rendered by the factory branch.

Marco Hellman purchased a 1915 light "6-45" because of his confidence in its safety and dependability, and in the financial stability of the company.

Apperson Light Sixes were also delivered to J. T. Gilmer, C. E. [illegible] Joseph Engert, M. F. Douglas [illegible] Angeles; Mrs. Elizabeth [illegible] Oxnard, and F. E. Hughes [illegible] tura this past week.

Doc Green, city sales [illegible] has never been connected with [illegible] stitution selling an inferior [illegible] car, displays his confidence [illegible] ing the organization and [illegible] ing the Apperson Jackrabbit [illegible] many friends.

This confidence is inspired [illegible] fact that the company [illegible] twenty-two successful years [illegible] quality cars, and their [illegible] ment and conservatism has [illegible] through the long period [illegible] and development without [illegible] mechanical misstep.

Emergency of Unemployment.

[The Survey:] Here then is the sorry contrast between mobilization for war and the lack of it in peace. Under the urgency of war the nation instinctively feels that the strength of all is impaired by the weakness of any, that its whole resource is available to conserve every vital force, that as each individual and class is needed by all, so all that the nation has is available for each.

The difference between the two experiences lies in the presence or absence of a national consciousness and resourcefulness in meeting national emergencies. In peace we have not yet become conscious that unemployment is a national emergency, to be met only by the concern and resources of the whole nation. In America, the emergency is still thoughtlessly and unjustly left to the individual, the family, the locality, and the class suffering most from it, to grapple with. Even they delay so late to do so that they can have recourse only to charity, seldom to justice; only to relief, never to prevention; only to recovery from disastrous effects, not to dealing with causes of disaster.

The members of the Board of Trade of Windsor, Ont., have gone on record as favoring reciprocity of automobile licenses with the United States. They also express their opinion that it will already interfere with the tourist traffic if a horse power tax on automobiles of non-residents is imposed.

104,000 Men are Working to Supply Goodyear Tires

In the jungle and the field, in our fabric factory, our tire plants, our branches, etc., 104,000 men are employed to meet the demand for Goodyears.

That demand has grown until last year men bought about one Goodyear tire for every car in use.

It is growing now faster than ever. Our sales to dealers have this spring shown an increase of 52 per cent.

We Fortify Tires

The reason is, we fortify our tires. We give you the best that others give, plus five exclusive features. In costly ways, employed by no one else, we combat these six great troubles:

Rim-Cuts
Blowouts
Loose Treads
Insecurity
Punctures
Skidding

Not all these troubles can in any way be completely ended. But we combat them in the best ways known. We do it regardless of cost. Our "On-Air" cure—one exclusive feature—costs us $450,000 yearly.

We Never Skimp

Despite all price reductions, we never skimp these tires. In fact, scores of experts work all the time seeking new ways to improve them. Lately we have added three conspicuous improvements, each of which adds much to our tire cost.

This policy is apparent. Compare Goodyear size and thickness with the average tire. Compare the number of fabric plies. Some Goodyear supremacies can be seen at a glance.

Prices Way Down

Goodyear has made in about two years three great price reductions. They total 45 per cent. The last was on February 1st.

Every saving we make—in rubber or cotton or through multiplied output—goes to Goodyear users. Our present output enables us to give you a value which none can duplicate.

Men who use Goodyear Fortified Tires get better tires than others. They have less trouble on the average, and less cost. The evidence lies in our exclusive features. It lies in our dominant place. And it lies in the swelling Goodyear tide. We urge you to join this army. Any dealer will supply you.

Dont let compression troubles mar the success of your motor.

Equip your car with STA-TITE piston rings and do away forever with Fuel Waste, Poor Compression, Carbon Trouble and Excessive Motor Wear.

"Perfect piston ring service is indispensable to motor efficiency"—Efficiency Ed.

STA-TITE piston rings are made in three pieces with their section openings so distributed that multiple contact against the cylinder walls is always assured. Leakage is a mechanical impossibility.

This cross section shows the STA-TITE patented feature. This "interlocking" groove construction is what makes the STA-TITE ring superior to all others. This groove construction allows the ring to seat perfectly in the piston groove—eliminating "play" and the possibility of "carbon pockets."

Under Stress of Expansion—the joints are held firmly and securely; they cannot overlap and score the cylinder walls.

Install a complete set and get more power and better compression.

OTOR BOAT OF UNUSUAL TYPE.

Stewart Edward White is Proud Owner.

Los Angeles Made Boat to go to Tahoe.

New England Fishing Crafts Used as Model.

A motor boat of unusual type and design is just being completed at the Marine Engine and Supply Company factory. This boat is being built for Stewart Edward White, the famous novelist, who is now living at Santa Barbara. Sad to say the craft will not become an addition to our local Motor Boat Club. The owner expects to ship it at once to his summer home [illegible] Lake Tahoe.

ORIGINAL.

The pattern of the boat is original and new on this coast. Mr. Hands, the designer, has been working for fifteen years trying to combine the qualities of speed, safety and seaworthiness into a single unit. As a model he took the New England fishing boats which are forced to have the above qualities to a greater or less extent, generally greater. One thing, however, which the eastern boats decidedly lack is comfort and this has been the key word in the construction of Mr. White's latest.

RUN-ABOUT TYPE.

The craft is of the open run-about type. It is twenty-four feet long, with a 51-inch beam, and is finished throughout in solid mahogany. The twenty horse-power engine, which compels the craft to move along about fourteen miles an hour, has been installed under hatches forward of the cock-pit. All engine controls and steering devices are conveniently [illegible] to an automobile wheel.

LIKE AN AUTO.

The boat can be started and operated with absolute freedom from noise, dirt and grease and is just as efficient as a Ford or any other automobile ever built.

Another unusual feature is the deep curve in the sides of the boat. This curve turns over the small, choppy waves of the lake and smothers them, doing away with all spray. And if you've ever ridden in a motor boat on Lake Tahoe you'll admit that this is some feature.

When Justice Sleeps

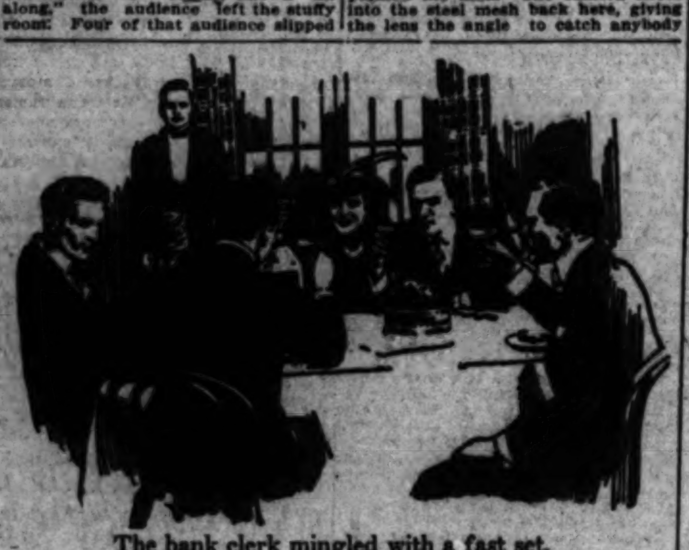
"We find the deceased came to his death by his own hands."

The pursy coroner blinked at the speed with which his jury returned their verdict. Not that any other verdict was possible—everybody agreed as to that. A waste of time and public moneys—the two weeks' hearing.

President Darius Brown was dead. There could be no doubt about it. He had been respected, living; dead, he was a knave. Gunshot wound experts and the mute, mechanical witness proved the jury correct in their finding.

Expert accountants, expert sleuths, layman witnesses showed conclusively the crookedness of the late Darius Brown. But the moneys he had filched from the bank funds and the securities he had borrowed from the vaults had been found beside his lifeless body. Depositors had lost nothing. Future depositors had gained an honest president. Darius Brown had test his life. So why bother?

Nodding their heads sagely with the satisfaction of "having known all along," the audience left the stuffy room. Four of that audience slipped furtively out, as though fearing something invisible was dogging their footsteps, casting a chill shadow between their shoulder blades. But that is my story—the tale of the real happenings at the Fourth National.



The bank clerk mingled with a fast set.

I.

President Darius Brown gradually permitted a broad smile of satisfaction to overspread his face as he studied the record of his first paying teller. He waved the Pinkerton representative, with the little bundle under his arm, away, while he stared absently at the opposite wall, then pressed the annunciator and ordered the negro porter to send in Dr. Drum.

"Go to the vault, Travers, and fix up the camera," he smiled at the Pinkerton man. "I'm just taking a minute to reward a young man who has helped get enough securities into that vault to make it worth guarding."

The detective glanced keenly at the young man who answered the summons, then his lips tightened a bit. He knew the face of Joseph Drum, had seen the young man mingling with a rather fast set, had marked his presence at the Gayety stage door. He was an old-school detective who believed the leisure hours of a banking man might be better employed.

Darius Brown noticed the look, the appraisement of the sleuth, and laughed as he whirled about upon his teller.

"Looking over the books and recollecting the circumstances attendant on certain deposits," he began ponderously, "I find that you have brought a good many customers to the Fourth National, Drum. I also am agreeably reminded that you have shown good judgment in advising depositors regarding certain investments they intended making. You are a bit gay, I know, but I have every reason to believe that you are careful, and I know you are working for the bank outside of hours. This is the twentieth century, Drum, and I am a twentieth century man. So I am increasing your salary to $5000 a year."

Joseph Drum's jaw dropped in amazed incredulity. For just a second he could not get the astounding good news into his head. The president had already risen and stood beside the door leading to the bank vault by the time he was able to voice his thanks.

"Don't thank me," he said crisply. "Just continue to be careful. Be as gay as you please, so long as you're careful and it brings us the right sort of deposits and doesn't affect the clearness of your brain. And," he wagged a long forefinger rather playfully as he gave the warning, "don't wear out the bricks in front of the Gayety stage door."

"I don't think I'll need to make but one more trip there—now."

President Brown halted, his hand on the knob, as though to answer. A little crease of uncertainty grew between his eyes as he watched the elate back of his paying teller, noted the happy springiness of his step as he returned to his cage. Then he smiled as he understood the full meaning of Drum's cryptic rejoinder and joined the detective, who had just finished adjusting his apparatus in the door of the huge, black vault.

"It works this way, Mr. Brown," explained the man. "The camera slides into the steel mesh back here, giving the lens the angle to catch anybody tampering with the combination. Here are the triggers on each side of the door, all set, and the flash powders are placed in these little containers. Now, look. Here's the trick." He knelt a short ways before the vault door, prying with his knife and finally drawing from place a loose tile. He smiled with satisfaction at the exclamation of admiration from President Brown as he looked into the aperture and saw the ingenious method in which the trigger, hidden there, was connected with the triggers beside the camera.

Carefully the detective replaced the tile, then drew away. His back suddenly stooped while a furtive, evil expression grew in his eyes as he slipped stealthily toward the safe. Without explanation, the bank president saw that he was simulating a burglar. He watched keenly, uttering an ejaculation of surprised delight as the man's foot touched the loose tile and, simultaneously the flash powders flamed from the door, leaving a plume of hot, acrid smoke behind.

"And there you have the face of the bank thief," he chuckled. "Very ingenious indeed. Just reset the trap and don't forget to develop the plate and bring it to me for a souvenir. The way of the yeggman is certainly growing almost impossible, Drummond."

"Yes, sir. Inside work is about all that can get to a well-protected bank nowadays."

Brown laughed as he turned back to his office. But the fellow's words had left a bit of an impression with him. He stood in the doorway, looking down the long aisle that lined the cages. The bustle of activity always preceding closing hour in a banking house was present everywhere, the clank of gold and silver money bags, the jingle and chime of coins swiftly counted, the slap of paper currency tossed upon counters, the slam of ledgers, the feverish scratch of pens, hurrying footsteps. A busy, faithful lot they were—these employees. And he was their friend and they his friends—this twentieth century banker.

He smiled and turned away, closing the door behind him as he resumed his desk. For the hours of a bank executive are known to no man save himself. There were a few details of the business to be righted and then a study of the market.

Darius Brown's lips tightened as he went over again and again certain bewildering evolutions of stocks in which he was interested. His brow furrowed deeply as he tried to analyze the human motives, the significance in certain unforeseen moves his fellow-financiers had been making of late with the tiny, black ants that had their home upon the ticks. Well, he would wait and see what he could make of them in the morning.

But eager though he was to find that market page of his paper at breakfast, he still had time to pause a while and smile at the simple announcement on the preceding page, of the marriage of Joseph Drum, paying teller of the Fourth National Bank, to Miss Flo Williams, who had been lending her charms of face and figure to the show girl contingent of the Gaiety Theater.

Darius Brown chuckled.

"So that's what he meant by his promise," he mused aloud, then, as he turned to the tabulated list of securities: "Well, I hope his judgment's as good there as it is in banking."

Though he would have knocked down the man who even queried him regarding his matrimonial judgment, Joseph Drum flushed as he reluctantly gave room to a traitorous thought in his mind. For weeks, for months, he had felt the ground slipping beneath his feet, had seen the pyramid of debt piling higher and higher, yet had dared take no exact measurement of it, hoping against all reasonable hope that "something would turn up" to save him. But the bill he had just opened from Hale & Co. for $255, had finally forced him to make out the long list of his indebtedness which lay upon his counter.

Great Cost of Royalty.

[Boston Advertiser:] In the democracy of Great Britain, there is considered to be a necessity for the King, but certain writers wonder whether he is worth the price. These men point out that it costs the people of Great Britain nearly $10,000,000 a year to support in practical idleness numerous nonproducers, simply because their great-grandfathers happened to be cousins of a King. The Kings of Germany and Great Britain each cost, for the support of their own persons, upwards of $3,000,000 a year. The Czar of Russia costs the people of his realm infinitely more. Yet the Czar has the largest private fortune of any man in Europe. Democracy in Great Britain with a King at its head, has perhaps proved fully as successful as democracy in France, with a President at its head. But at the same time the people of Great Britain have been forced to maintain in idleness numerous representatives of royalty. This war will probably cause many persons to begin to speculate as to whether, as a business proposition, supporting all royalty is a good investment.

Pity the Democrats.

[Detroit Journal:] Pity the unfortunate Democrats. Not only has the war cut off much of the revenues, forcing the administration to an emergency tax, but the prohibition States have nipped off $2,000,000 in liquor revenue. It is grievous to be neutral, to be virtuous and to be poor.

A bill has been introduced in the New York State Legislature giving to garage owners a lien on motor vehicles for repairs, storage and supplies purchased from them.

THE PIERCE ARROW
NO CHANGE IN 1915
The Series-3 PIERCE-ARROWS, which are the current models, have met so adequately the demands of even the most discriminating purchasers, that the Pierce-Arrow Factory has decided to make no changes either in body lines, mechanical lines, equipment, or price—during the calendar year of 1915.
The most careful study of engineering trends revealed nothing in this country or abroad, which promised to equal or surpass the present models. The bodies of Series-3 are approved types and represent a distinctive advance in grace, beauty and comfort.

POLO PONY FARM TO BE AT OJAI.

JAMES HAGGERTY TO LOCATE THERE—AWAY NOW MAKING ALL ARRANGEMENTS.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

NORDHOFF, May 1.—"It used to be in the old days that horse racing made good horse raising profitable," said James Haggerty, celebrated horseman of California and Kentucky, who has been in the Ojai Valley selecting a location for a ranch which will be devoted to the purpose of raising thoroughbred stock. "That day is gone," continued Mr. Haggerty, "and I am spending my time and money now raising good stock for polo ponies.

"I believe that I can locate such a ranch better in Ventura county than in any other county in the State. There are natural conditions prevailing in the northern part of this county, particularly in your beautiful Ojai Valley, which make the possibilities of such a farm unsurpassed, and I confidently anticipate having one of the very best ranches in my line in the country here.

"There is no reason why California-bred polo ponies should not take part in the game to a greatert extent than they do now, even, when some of the best known of foreign players secure their mounts in this country."

Mr. Haggerty would not state just what location he has decided on, and is now away perfecting arrangements for closing a deal that, it is rumored, will be for a considerable acreage of hill and valley land in the Ojai Valley, not far from Nordhoff.

POLO TOURNAMENT COMES TO AN END.

SOUTHERN DEPARTMENT ARMY TEAM WINS PENINSULA CUPS IN FINAL.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, May 1.—The universal polo tournament being held under the exposition auspices during the last six weeks came to a close today when the Southern Department army team defeated the Second Division U.S.A. four in the finals for the Peninsula cup, by the score of 14½ to 7¾.

The Southern Department team has won eight of the ten games in which they have participated during the tournament, having lost one game to the Midwicks of Pasadena, a team which boasted an unbroken string of victories, and the First Cavalry team, to whom they lost by the margin of half a goal as the result of several penalties inflicted on them for foul play.

More than 400 ponies participated in the events for the various cups offered and more than a dozen teams including three United States Army fours, competed.

The Second Division started with a lead of three goals, conceded three more while the Southern Department rolled up six tallies, making the score 6-all when the third period began. In this frame the Southern Department scored four goals to nil for the Second Division and from that time on it was only a question of the size of their score.

The First English Daily Paper.

[London Chronicle:] On March 11, 1702, appeared the first British daily paper. Its title was the Daily Courant, and its publisher was "E. Mallet, against the Ditch at Fleet Bridge." But our daily papers have altered in the two succeeding centuries. The Courant was a single sheet of but two columns. It published foreign news only, and was innocent of any editorial matter, the reason being that the editor-publisher supposed "other people to have sense encugh to make reflections for themselves." And it will cause no surprise that such an editor soon gave up his job, sold his paper, and that its very site is now buried beneath the Times.

Hard Labor Session.

SPEED KING BUILDS FOR CLASSIC IN LOS ANGELES.

Metal Discovered by Local Expert Enters into Construction of Remodeled French Racer—The Weight is Reduced for Indianapolis Event — New Oiling System and California-made Carburetor Also Carried.

WHEN Bob Burman rolls his French Peugeot to the line at Indianapolis the car will represent $2000 more, as an investment, than it did when Goux drove it into the money in the 1914 international sweepstakes. The Peugeot has been completely rebuilt. The weight has been lessened and the piston displacement reduced to come within the 300-inch restrictions.

The story of how Burman prepared for the great Speedway event is the story of three months of hard labor on the part of the speed king and long hours spent over the drafting table by both Burman and Harry A. Miller.

In the rear shop of Miller's factory the foreign speed creation was remodeled and turned out in better condition than when it left the shores of France, according to the driver, who won the Oklahoma City race last week.

With the new cylinders, which have reduced the piston displacement to 293 cubic inches, Burman claims more speed than he had with the original displacement. The cylinders are the most important features of the rebuilding of the car, but many other changes and improvements were made in preparation for the 500-mile classic.

LIGHTER NOW.

The weight of the car with the old equipment was 2300 pounds. It now weighs but 2100. The new pistons were cast in Los Angeles, under Burman's supervision, of "alloyanum," the new piston metal discovered by Miller, the inventor of the Master carburetor. The light "alloyanum" metal enters into the construction of the car throughout.

Burman has two removable "alloyanum" plates, bearing his name in large letters, placed on the sides of the "bloc," which form the water-jacket. These plates are secured by a set of small screw-bolts. On one side there are the openings for the water flow, while on the other the plate is flush.

The new manifold is bolted to the "bloc" with four solid bolt castings, while the original manifold was anchored by means of seventeen small screw-bolts. Burman has two sets of cylinders of the smaller bore and stroke, in addition to the old cylinders, which he used at Oklahoma City and in his match race with Cooper and Disbrow, which he also won. He has two sets of pistons for each set of cylinders, and has made the same preparation for emergency with extra parts throughout.

TWO AXLES.

He has two front axles, which he had turned in the Los Angeles shop from the toughest steel obtainable; new steering arm, knuckles and two sets of connecting rods, made of tubular chrome-vanadium, which replace the old I-beam rods used on the Peugeot with little success in Burman's races on the Pacific Coast last season. The new connecting rods are fitted with dip scoops for scooping oil.

Burman's oiling system is one of the most important changes made in the construction and equipment of the car. With the old splash system, one side of the cylinders never received an adequate supply of oil, but with the direct system, this trouble has been completely eliminated. The pistons and cylinders are now oiled through holes in the side of the cylinders, direct to the pistons. The oil is also changed from the crank case by means of an automatic plump.

SOME EQUIPMENT.

Sixteen special valves of "Rich-Tungsten" steel, eight wrist pins of chrome-vanadium and fourteen new piston rings of Burman's own design with oil grooves, are included in the new equipment of the racer. The speed king also has extra gears, made to order by Miller, differential housing and rear axle of chrome-vanadium.

The car is also fitted with a special Master carburetor, rigged with a covered air scoop which prevents all dirt and dust from finding its way into the throat. After completing the rebuilding of the car, the body was painted and the finishing touch was the emblem of the Chicago Automobile Club, which Burman always carries as a mascot.

Three months were spent in remodelling the Peugeot and the cost of the material and mechanical labor, exclusive of the time and work spent on the job by the driver and Miller, is figured conservatively at $2000.

HIS OWN IDEAS.

After suffering misfortune at Corona, the day before the great race, Burman tried to patch up his car for San Diego's road race, January 9, and was fairly successful. But he retired early in the race with a broken connecting rod.

It was then that the speed king determined to rebuild his car on his own lines. Burman made a flying trip from Los Angeles to Chicago, where he purchased the steel for his axles, and then returned to work on the machine. With the exception of twelve days spent at San Francisco, where he drove the Case car, the driver wore greasy overalls seven days a week, until he had a car which he claims is the peer of any racing machine in America.

The pistons for Duray's and Resta's cars were also made in Los Angeles by the inventor of "Alloyanum." In the San Francisco classics, Resta's winning car was equipped with Miller's pistons and the great Italian said that he would never use any other metal for racing pistons.

MANUAL RUGGERS SMACKED DOWN.

IN SPITE OF DEFEAT, SEASON OF VICTORY IS EXPECTED BY COACH.

Coach O. L. Fritsch of Manual sent his Rugby squad against the Arden fifteen yesterday on the Manual gridiron. He came out on the short end of a 10-to-5 score.

In spite of all this, Coach Fritsch sees a large amount of victory for his squad this year. He was surprised from start to finish at the fight put up by some of his raw material.

The Arden team was composed of old stars who were expected to have things easy when they tackled the Toiler material. The speed of the High School boys and the booting of Harold Galloway held them down to a low score. Newman, the Artisan hooker, was by far the best dribbler of the bunch.

The coach changed the line-up frequently during the game and gave thirty fellows a chance to play. Because of its being the first game of the season the contest was played in twelve-minute quarters.

During the first two quarters of the contest the Purple and Gray squad had the better of the argument. They had the ball on Arden's 2-yard line three times, but failed to score. The landslide started in the third quarter, when the ball was taken to Manual's 5-yard line in a dribbling rush. On the scrum-up Dutch Blair grabbed the ball and wriggled across the line for the first try. Blair converted, making the score 5 to 0 in Arden's favor.

In the first of the last quarter the Manual boys carried the ball over when Blewett booted the ball to Arden's 5-yard line from the center. In a scrum-up the Toilers lost twenty yards, but in the next scrum Coach Fritsch, who went in as second five, grabbed the ball and carried it over for a try. H. Galloway converted, making the score 5 all.

Within two minutes after play had been resumed the ball was carried to the Manual 5-yard line by a dribbling rush. In a scrum-up Blair got the ball and passed to Johnson, who carried it over for the last try. Again Blair converted from an easy angle, making the score 10 to 5 in Arden's favor.

On Again, off Again.

MARQUARD'S CAREER IS ONE OF UPS AND DOWNS.

RICHARD W. (RUBE) MARQUARD has had a remarkable career as a member of the New York Giants. From the time he joined the team in 1908, having been purchased from Indianapolis for $11,000, until the opening day when he pitched probably the most brilliant game of his many unusual performances, he has been before the eyes of the "fans" as a "lemon," as a twirler of exceptional merit and as a contract jumper.

Marquard started his baseball vocation at Canton (O.) in 1907, where his work attracted the Indianapolis managers. They purchased him and he continued at such a fast clip that John McGraw willingly parted with $11,000 to make him a member of the team. This was in 1908, and for three years Marquard sat on the Giants' bench, never getting a chance to show his worth and learning to the fulness McGraw baseball. He was so obscure that when he was referred to at all he was called the "$11,000 Lemon."

It was not until 1912 that Marquard received the plaudits of the "fans." He pitched and won his first game that season on April 11 and it was not until July 3 that he lost a contest, being beaten on that day by the Cubs, after having compiled a pitching record of nineteen straight victories, surpassing any similar achievement in the history of the game.

Marquard was at the top of his effectiveness in 1912, winning twenty-three games and losing twelve during the season and helping materially in winning the pennant for the Giants. In the world's series with the Red Sox, which the latter team won, Marquard captured two of the three victories credited to the Giants.

In 1913 Marquard was a power of the Giants' staff again and was on the way to a big year in 1914 when he was overtaken by misfortune after misfortune, which cost him victory after victory and lost him the confidence of the "fans." On July 17, at Pittsburg last year, Marquard defeated the Pirates, 2 to 1, in a twenty-one inning game, which was the longest contest in the history of the National League. Pittsburg scored in the first inning of that game, but never was able to reach the plate afterward. This was Marquard's turning point in the last campaign, for after that he dropped eleven struggles in a row.

During last winter Marquard jumped to the Brooklyn Feds, accepted $1500 advance money and tried to repudiate his contract with the Giants. He escaped trouble on this account only because the Federal leaders were liberal and allowed him to rejoin the Giants.

His opening game undoubtedly was his test, for there were few of the crowd present who were not awaiting an opportunity to censure Marquard for his actions last winter. That he made good and with a vengeance is to his advantage.

SOUTH AMERICA HARD HIT.

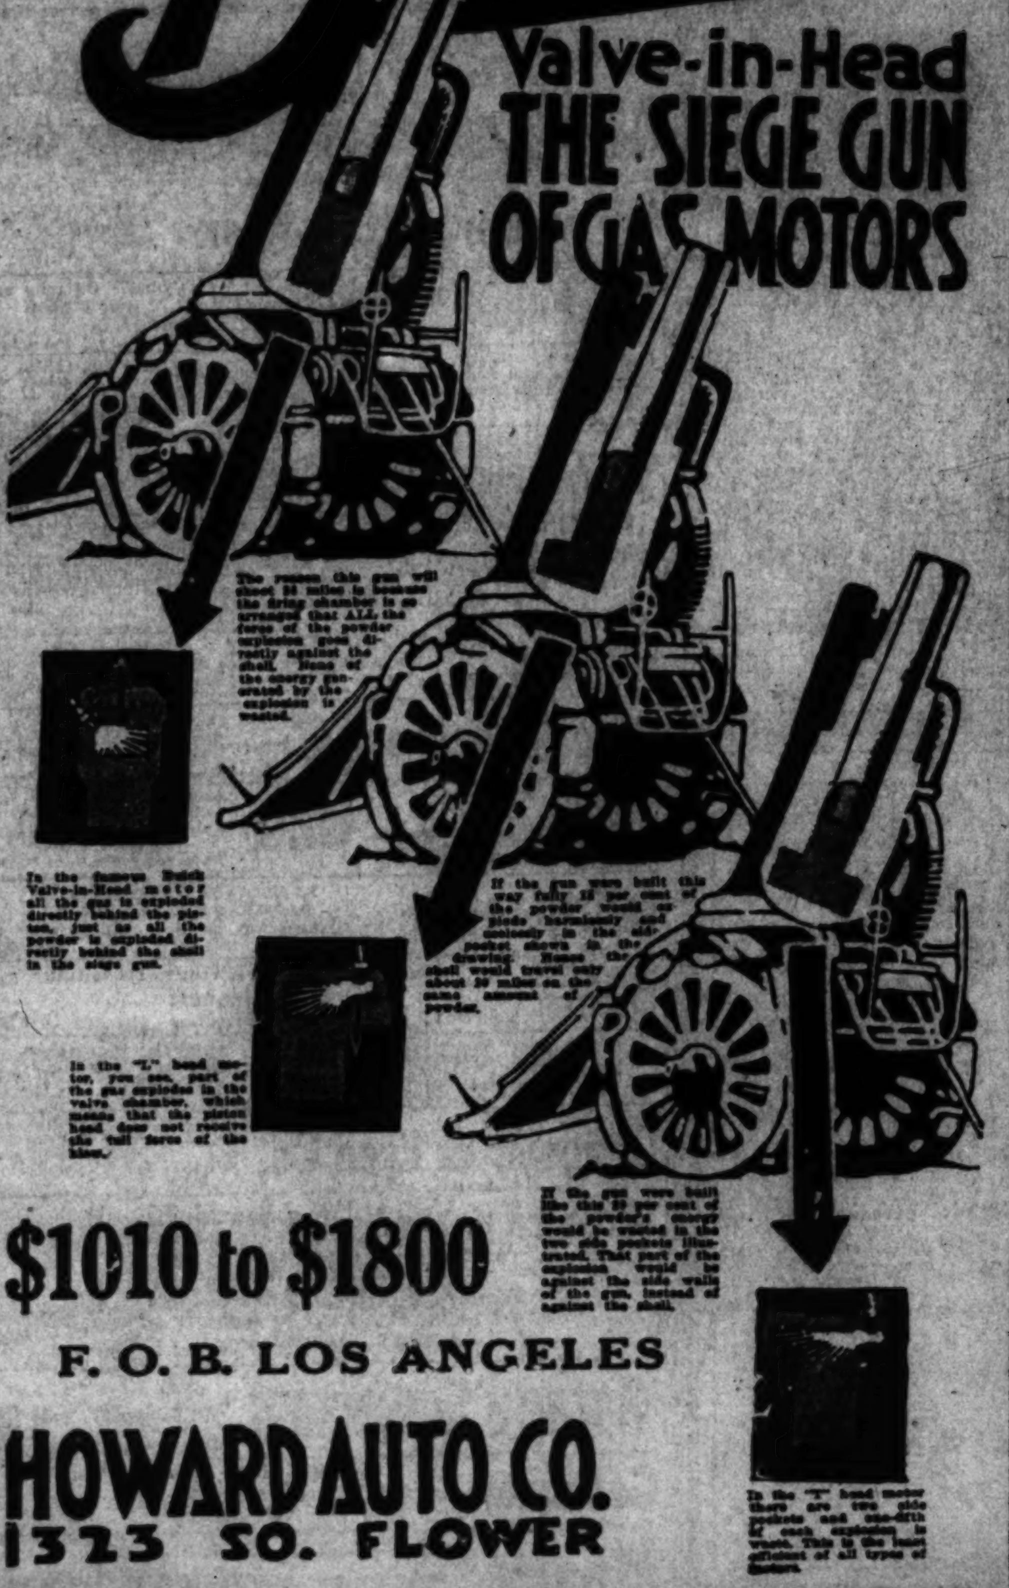
Results of the European War Have Compelled Retrenchments in Salaries and All Kinds of Business.

[Boston Transcript:] Perhaps no section of the world, particularly of that portion of the world at peace, has felt so keenly the devastating effects on business of the European war as have the nations of South America. Substantially every one of them is in debt to Europe at the present time, some of them almost to the point of bankruptcy. Not only has the trade of the United States with all South America fallen off about one-half since the European war began, but the customs revenues of the South American governments have, in some instances, fallen off two-thirds. The personnel of governments have been reduced, salaries cut down, public works stopped and other forms of retrenchment adopted. One of the South American republics was forced a year ago to borrow the money with which to pay the interest on its public debt, and is now struggling to raise the money to make another such payment. Such, in part, is the condition of affairs which will be brought to the attention of the coming conference.

In one of the larger South American countries a government official presented to a leading bank a draft for $250. His expenses to his next point of destination were carefully figured out and he was tendered $75 and told that was all the gold he could get. The trouble with South America at the present time, according to this official, lies primarily in the fact that it is essentially a producer of raw materials. In Chili the war forced a suspension in the operation of the phosphate and nitrate beds and threw 60,000 persons out of employment. In Peru both the sugar and cotton crops fell in value in proportion to the fall in the price of cotton even in the United States. In Brazil the rubber market, especially, has felt the heavy hand of a suspension of commerce and in all the South American countries the cry is universal for ships. Argentina and Uruguay alone, which make a specialty of foodstuffs, have maintained a comparative normal business condition, while some of their neighbors are rapidly making progress in the same direction.

Buick

Valve-in-Head THE SIEGE GUN OF GAS MOTORS



The reason this gun will shoot 24 miles is because the firing chamber is so arranged that ALL the force of the powder explosion goes directly against the shell. None of the energy generated by the explosion is wasted.

In the famous Buick Valve-in-Head motor all the gas is exploded directly behind the piston, just as all the powder is exploded directly behind the shell in the siege gun.

If the gun were built this way fully 15 per cent of the powder would explode harmlessly and uselessly in the side pocket shown in the drawing. Hence the shell would travel only about 20 miles on the same amount of powder.

In the "L" head motor, you see, part of the gas explodes in the valve chamber, which means that the piston head does not receive the full force of the blow.

If the gun were built like this 20 per cent of the powder's energy would be wasted in the two side pockets illustrated. That part of the explosion would be against the side walls of the gun, instead of against the shell.

In the "T" head motor there are two side pockets and one-fifth of each explosion is waste. This is the least efficient of all types of motors.

MR. TWEE DEEDLE.

1—When Mr. Twee Deedle and Dickie escaped from the Witch of the Tree they knew they would have to hurry before her witchcraft returned. You will recall, the Goose pulled her nose and disjointed her magic. They had not travelled far before they heard a shriek behind them and saw the Witch coming.

2—She gained rapidly upon them, when Mr. Twee Deedle stopped and threw a few sticks upon the ground and said a magic word. Immediately a high fence sprang up behind our friends and the Witch was obliged to climb over it.

3—This gave our three friends a good start, but the Witch was a very good runner and gained again until she was almost upon them.

4—This time Mr. Twee Deedle stopped and said two magic words, and the ground beneath the Witch gave way, and she fell into a big mud puddle. Now Mr. Twee Deedle did not know that mud gives a Witch strength, especially Tree Witches, and the Witch was able to run just that much faster.

5—In fact, the mud puddle gave her so much strength she was able to catch up with them before they had travelled one hundred yards, and she swung with her broom to give Dickie a crack on the head, but Mr. Twee Deedle said, "Hokity pokity, beezelbud jinky!"

6—When he said these magic words two little mice appeared in the field directly in front of the Witch. With one loud shriek of anguish she hopped up in the air and made off as fast as she could travel. "Look out!" cried our friends. "They are right behind you!" But the Witch was so anxious to escape the tiny mice she never glanced around to see that they did not follow her.

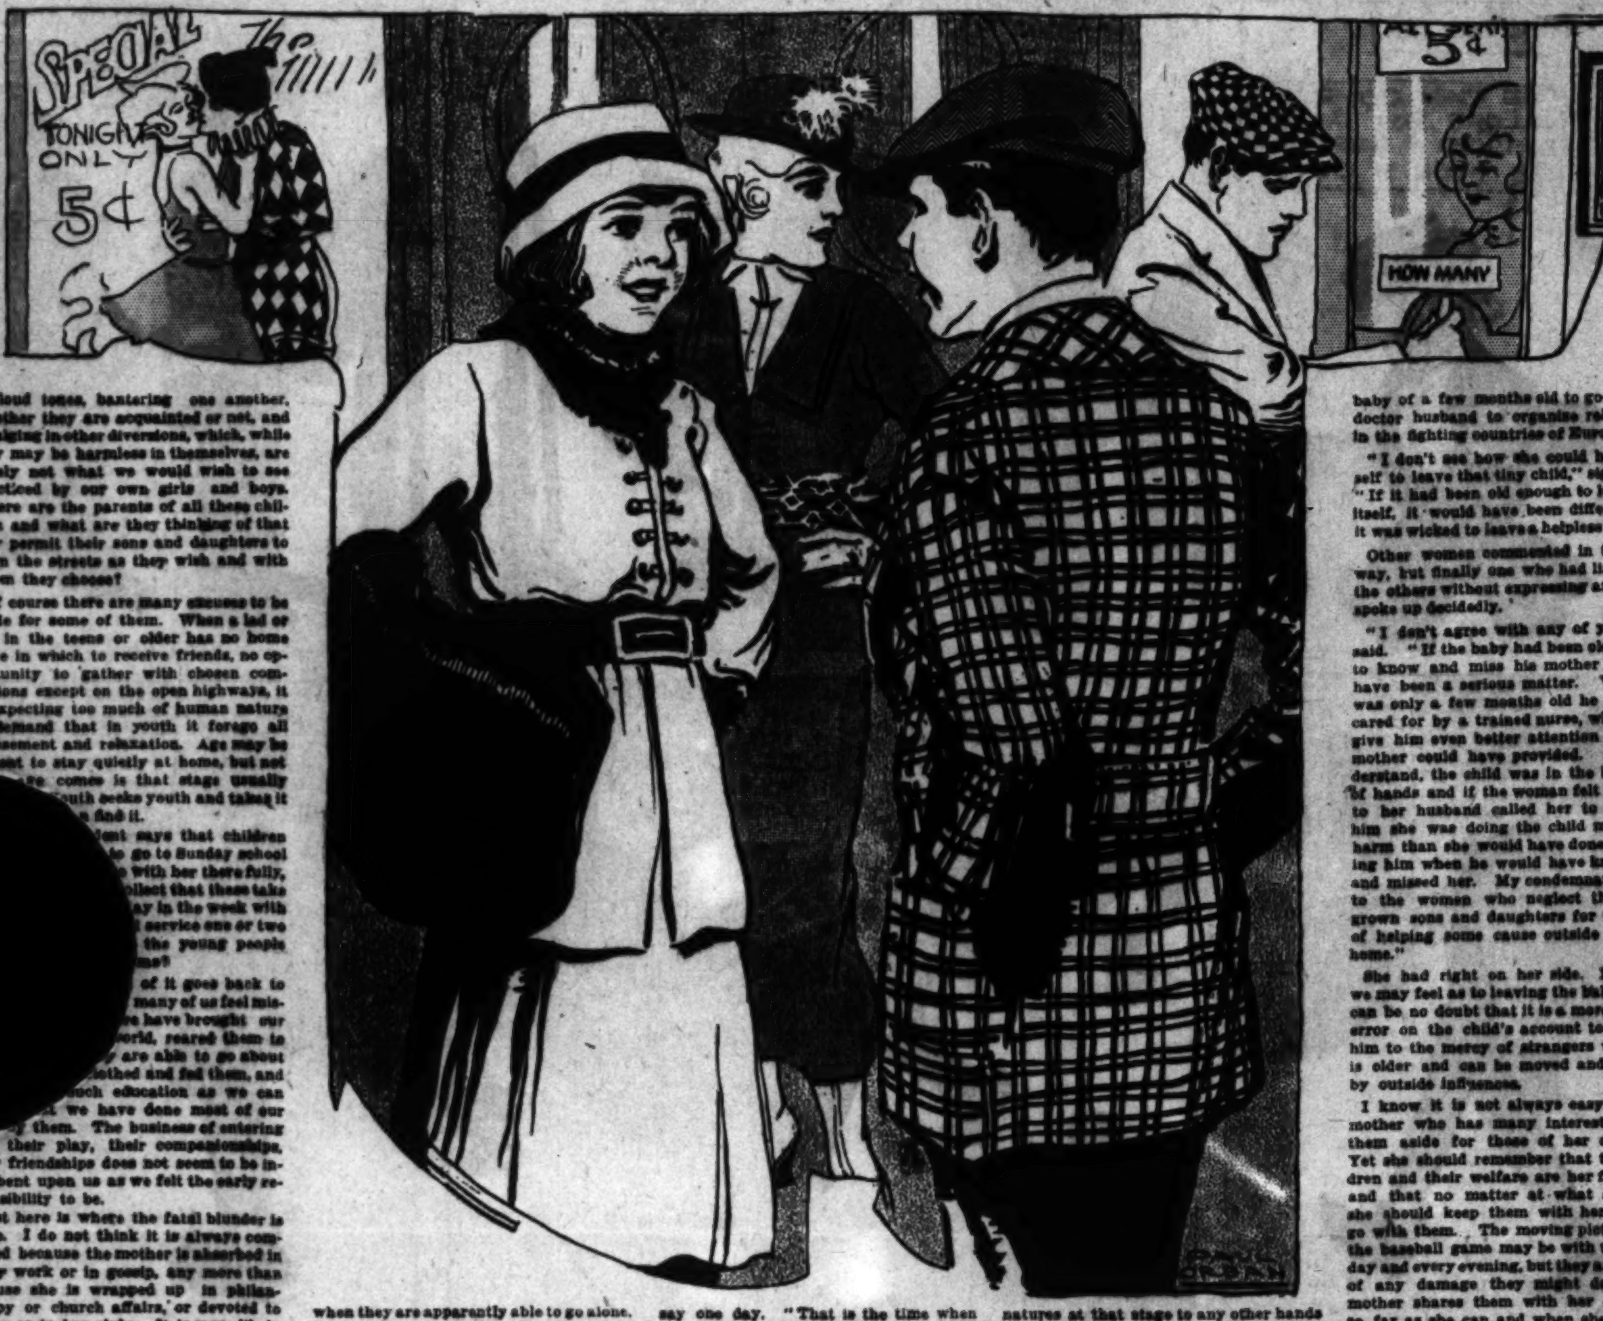
COMMON SENSE in the HOME
EDITED by MARION HARLAND

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS AGAIN.



I WOULD like to call the attention of mothers to the following letter:

"Will you allow me space in the Corner for a few words on how children should be reared? I have some thoughts on the subject which I would like to express.

"In the first place, I think children should obey their parents and should be taught to work instead of strolling the streets. A child who is taught to work while growing up will be more than likely to become energetic and prosperous in maturity. The trouble with many mothers is that they are too glad to get rid of their children. They send them off to go where they please and to play with children of unknown character. I think it is most important to keep in close touch with our children. Many persons seem to take it for granted that their boys and girls are all right and wouldn't say or do anything in the least wrong. But I personally know of children who are deceiving their parents every day.

"If we mothers would drop some of our fancy work and gossiping with our neighbors and pay strict attention to our children, there would not be so many boys in the penitentiary and so many girls in houses of ill fame. Nor would there be so many divorces and separations between married couples if their parents had done their duty. We ought to teach our children to go to Sunday school and to church instead of permitting them to go to so many moving picture shows and baseball games. There are so many indecent things for our boys and girls to see. Also, they become sweethearts altogether too soon.

"Mothers ought to teach their girls how to keep house and to do it right. I heard a couple of women talking the other d[illegible] Mrs. J. said her daughter w[illegible] old and large for her age [illegible] time she washed the d[illegible] floor the mother had [illegible] Mrs. S. said she h[illegible] sweep the floor s[illegible] before she could [illegible] was glad of it [illegible] since she had b[illegible] ried woman and [illegible] properly.

"I think we [illegible] neglect our hous[illegible] work and trashy [illegible] example we impre[illegible] road they are likely [illegible]

This letter has interest[illegible] To my mind the writer has [illegible] on several points of importan[illegible] training of children, and if I do not take quite such a pessimistic view as she does of the worst results of carelessness in the raising of children, yet I am forced to admit that the prisons and even worse places are recruited from among the families of decent people—in part, at least—and that it is an undoubted fact that the street is a most dangerous place for either a boy or girl to range at will.

Whenever I am out on the streets in the evening I am impressed with the number of young people who are strolling back and forth, flirting, romping, conversing in loud tones, bantering one another, whether they are acquainted or not, and indulging in other diversions, which, while they may be harmless in themselves, are surely not what we would wish to see practiced by our own girls and boys. Where are the parents of all these children and what are they thinking of that they permit their sons and daughters to roam the streets as they wish and with whom they choose?

Of course there are many excuses to be made for some of them. When a lad or girl in the teens or older has no home place in which to receive friends, no opportunity to gather with chosen companions except on the open highways, it is expecting too much of human nature to demand that in youth it forego all amusement and relaxation. Age may be content to stay quietly at home, but not [illegible] comes is that stage usually [illegible] youth seeks youth and takes it [illegible] find it.

[illegible] dent says that children [illegible] to go to Sunday school [illegible] with her there fully, [illegible] collect that these take [illegible] ay in the week with [illegible] service one or two [illegible] the young people [illegible] me?

[illegible] of it goes back to [illegible] many of us feel mis[illegible] we have brought our [illegible] world, reared them to [illegible] are able to go about [illegible] clothed and fed them, and [illegible] such education as we can [illegible] we have done most of our [illegible] them. The business of entering into their play, their companionships, their friendships does not seem to be incumbent upon us as we felt the early responsibility to be.

Just here is where the fatal blunder is made. I do not think it is always committed because the mother is absorbed in fancy work or in gossip, any more than because she is wrapped up in philanthropy or church affairs, or devoted to bridge or to her clubs. It is more likely to be because she fails to appreciate the importance of keeping her children close to her after they have attained the age when they are apparently able to go alone. This is in reality often the time when they need her most.

"No, I will not send my children away to boarding school," I heard a mother say one day. "That is the time when they require my attention far more than when they are younger. They have just reached the formative period, and I do not mean to trust the development of their natures at that stage to any other hands than my own."

I thought of her the other day when I heard a group of mothers discussing the action of a mother in having left her baby of a few months old to go with her doctor husband to organize relief work in the fighting countries of Europe.

"I don't see how she could bring herself to leave that tiny child," sighed one. "If it had been old enough to look after itself, it would have been different, but it was wicked to leave a helpless baby!"

Other women commented in the same way, but finally one who had listened to the others without expressing an opinion spoke up decidedly.

"I don't agree with any of you," she said. "If the baby had been old enough to know and miss his mother it would have been a serious matter. While he was only a few months old he could be cared for by a trained nurse, who would give him even better attention than his mother could have provided. As I understand, the child was in the best kind of hands and if the woman felt her duty to her husband called her to go with him she was doing the child much less harm than she would have done by leaving him when he would have known her and missed her. My condemnation goes to the women who neglect their half grown sons and daughters for the sake of helping some cause outside of the home."

She had right on her side. However we may feel as to leaving the baby, there can be no doubt that it is a more serious error on the child's account to commit him to the mercy of strangers when he is older and can be moved and molded by outside influences.

I know it is not always easy for the mother who has many interests to set them aside for those of her children. Yet she should remember that the children and their welfare are her first care and that no matter at what sacrifice she should keep them with her or else go with them. The moving picture and the baseball game may be with us every day and every evening, but they are shorn of any damage they might do if the mother shares them with her children so far as she can and when she cannot go is eager to hear a report of the sports or entertainment afterwards.

More than this, she should know her child's companions. When you wh[illegible] mothers now were girls did you [illegible] to go about with boys and girls of [illegible] own age? Why should not your [illegible] dren seek the same enjoyment? [illegible] much harm did you get from it? [illegible] know your children's playmates [illegible] friends and make them welcome [illegible] home you will soon find out which [illegible] safe and which dangerous compan[illegible] and if you have kept your children [illegible] to you in their thoughts and deeds [illegible] will be swayed by your judgment [illegible] friendships as well as in everything [illegible]

As to the idea of boys and girls [illegible] ing "sweethearts" too young [illegible] strongly. To my mind it is a [illegible] of sacred things to talk of love [illegible] ing between children, to speak of [illegible] as "lovers" and "sweethearts" [illegible] they are little more than infants [illegible] it vulgar. Let the boys and [illegible] play together naturally, like broth[illegible] sisters, or friends. They will have [illegible] preference in their intimacies, but [illegible] is no reason for any notion of love [illegible] ing being introduced. If a girl is [illegible] self-respect and the sanctity of [illegible] son and the boy is trained in the [illegible] way there is no reason in the world [illegible] they should not associate on [illegible] happy companionship through [illegible] and youth.

A good deal may be said on the [illegible] of work. I heard a lecturer [illegible] long ago that a worse punish[illegible] never devised than that of work [illegible] performed because children had [illegible] naughty. By using occupation [illegible] kind as a penalty he asserted [illegible] truth—that work is stigmatized [illegible] hateful to childhood.

There is no reason why work [illegible] be looked upon as a punishment. [illegible] should be given certain duties [illegible] to feel responsible for them. [illegible] early age both boys and girls [illegible] their place in the home, their [illegible] keeping it in order; their right [illegible] sider it their own not only as a [illegible] but also as a spot where they [illegible] where they can bring their friends [illegible] live their own life, so far as this [illegible] patible with the comfort of others. [illegible] mother who fails to implant this [illegible] in her children makes as big a [illegible] as the parent who spoils her children [illegible] gives them too much indulgence [illegible] home. The wise course lies between [illegible] two extremes.

I don't think I altogether sym[illegible] with the mother who made her [illegible] sweep the room seven times. W[illegible] she not teach the girl how to do [illegible] in the first place, check her if [illegible] the broom wrong or swept [illegible] and show her how to correct [illegible] as she went along? It would [illegible] a less discouraging experience [illegible] concerned. "Children's work [illegible] plague than profit" is an old [illegible] but the parent must recollect [illegible] not her own profit but the [illegible] the child she is seeking and [illegible] added care as part of the process [illegible] a final good.

MARION HARLAND'S HELPING HAND.

Flower Seeds to Exchange.

"I HAVE recently moved into a new home and am settling in it. I desire to put out some shrubs, roses, and summer flowering bulbs, and I wonder if among all your readers there is some one who has a surplus of plants. I already have violets and cannas and in return for the plants I wish I would be glad to give seeds of the elephant ear mustard, white velvet okra, and a prolific pepper which is a pretty plant for bedding. It grows in bouquet form and is loaded with purple, yellow, and red peppers; the fruit is hot. I also have a quantity of Burpee's 'Daylight Dolichos.' The vines grow quickly to a height of eight or ten feet and blossom profusely from base to summit. The large spikes of pure white flowers stand out boldly from the rich green foliage. As the flowers drop from the long spikes they are succeeded by broad, velvety white pods, which retain their freshness of color for a long time. A. A. C."

This description is enough to move any flower lover to a wild desire to possess the vine. I hold her address.

Celery Toast.

"I send you a recipe for a dish we have found nice for luncheon and for Sunday night supper, called celery toast. It is cheap and good. Cut celery into inch lengths and stew until soft, then put it through a vegetable press. Make a white sauce with a tablespoon each of butter and of flour and a cup of milk, seasoning it with salt, pepper, and a little onion juice, and then stir in the celery puree. Toast slices of bread, soften them with water in which the celery was boiled, pour the sauce on them, set in the oven ten minutes, and serve. Good with cold meat.

Cured Mange in Cat.

"F. O. M. asks for a remedy for a cat which has the mange. Ten years ago a small mongrel cat which was a pet in our family contracted this disease. No one else would touch it, so I, who was then a girl about 14 years old, decided it was up to me to do something for the poor creature. It appeared to suffer greatly. I mixed new lard with sulphur and applied it with a cloth on a stick. A brush could be used instead. My family said it was not much good to doctor the cat, as when affected in that way they hardly ever lived beyond the stage this cat had come to. But in a few weeks it was well, and not more than a month ago this same cat died of old age. We had all thought a great deal of Tabby. This remedy I mention is the only sure one I have ever heard of. Don't be afraid to put on lots of the mixture. I enjoy the Corner so much. I could write to a shut-in, man or woman—or rather I could have my husband write to the man. Perhaps some woman on a lonely claim or farm somewhere would like picture post cards or a letter from me. I would like to do something for some one, no matter how little it might be. MRS. L. E. McA."

The owners of pet cats and dogs will be glad to know of this simple remedy for mange. Also there is sure to be a shut-in somewhere, or a lonely woman who would be glad to receive letters and post cards. I will send this Cornerite's address to such on application. I am glad to state that the lonely young man to whom she refers in another part of her letter and whose signature she was unable to give has been supplied already with the pennants he wished to decorate his cabin.

Catching and Mounting Butterflies.

"Perhaps I am coming to the wrong place for information, but you seem able to answer so many questions that I venture to put one to you. Can you or any one of your readers tell me how to catch and mount or preserve butterflies? Or if you cannot give me the information, can you direct me to some source where I can procure it? A. B."

I am sorry to say I shall have to refer this inquiry. If you lived in a large city, where there was a good public library, I should advise you to go to the librarian for counsel. As it is, I think the best plan is to do as I have done successfully on many other occasions when I have thrown myself upon the good will of the constituency. I am sure some one will be able to reply to your question and I will gladly give your address to any one who asks for it.

Home Made Bread.

"I have received so much assistance from the Helping Hand that I am passing on some help myself and will ask a still further favor. I have seen that some of the sisters have been asking and sending bread recipes, so I will send one of my own with which I have had great success. I hope each one trying it will appreciate it as much as I do and have as fine luck with it. Three pints of bread flour, one heaping tablespoon of lard, two rounding tablespoons of sugar, three-quarters of a yeast cake; dissolve this in two large tablespoons of water; a little salt. Scald one pint of milk and allow it to become partially cool; add the dissolved yeast cake. Sift the flour, sugar, and salt together and work in the lard with the finger tips. Add the dissolved yeast and enough milk to make a dough of the right consistency to knead, adding more milk if a greater quantity than the pint scalded is required. Knead until the dough is smooth and elastic to the touch and bubbles may be seen under the surface. Place this dough in a large bread bowl or a bread raiser; cover with a clean cloth and a board or a tin cover. Let the dough rise overnight in a temperature of about 65 Fahrenheit. In the morning cut it down with a knife and let it rise again to about double its size. Shape it then into loaves and place these in greased pans, having each pan about half full. Cover the pans and let the bread rise again until about double its bulk and bake in a slow oven. Let the bread rise in the oven during the first fifteen minutes; brown it in the next fifteen, and bake done in the last fifteen minutes—three-quarters of an hour, altogether. It is well to cover the loaves with paper at first if the oven is pretty hot. I wonder if some of the sisters have some calico, gingham, silk, and wool scraps they would like pieced into quilts. I would be glad to get them to piece on shares. I will piece one-half of each quilt for enough pieces to make the other half for myself.

"MRS. W. T. H."

Although bread recipes are constantly being sent in by good housekeepers, the directions are constantly being asked and I am glad to receive a trustworthy set of instructions like the preceding, which have been tried and proved satisfactory. In this day of pressingly hard prices, when more and more housekeepers are urged to make bread at home on account of the economy, as well as because of the wholesomeness and deliciousness of really good home made bread, directions like this are especially timely. How about the quilt pieces? Are there not some of our many readers who would care to have pieces made up into quilts for them "on shares," as this Cornerite suggests? I shall put her address on file and will supply it to those who wish to follow this plan.

Appeal Generously Answered.

"Some time ago I made an appeal to the Corner for help in decorating a lonely cabin. I am glad to state that my appeal has been more than answered. I received a large number of pennants, books, papers, pictures, a couple of dictionaries, and several other small but useful articles. Also there came a number of cheerful letters, offering to send still more. I can hardly realize that there are so many kind hearted people ready to lend a helping hand in time of need, and as it will require quite a long time for me to answer all of my benefactors for their extension of good will, I take this opportunity to express my deep gratitude. I wish you could all see the genuine pleasure you have brought to me and to others as well, for there are many besides myself here for the same purpose as I and living under the same conditions, and I can share with them. Many packages were sent anonymously and it will, therefore, not be possible for me to thank the givers individually, but I hope they may see this acknowledgment. May the Corner long continue with its splendid work. G. S."

I dare say most of the Cornerites recollect the story of the writer of this letter, who was sent away in quest of health and was established in a lonely and bare cabin. The appeal for pennants to help decorate the naked walls and for a little reading matter has brought the response to which he refers. Sometimes I think I know my Cornerites and what to expect of them, but every now and then, when a case arises of this kind, I feel that I have never fully appreciated their prompt and loving generosity in replying to appeals for aid. Like the writer of the letter, one could never have imagined there were so many kind hearted people ready to lend a hand in time of need. God bless them all. That the young man shares in the spirit he commends is proved by his eagerness to help and cheer others with the brightness which has come to him.

Wants a Darky Monologue.

"Can any of the Cornerites send me or tell me where to procure a copy of this darky monologue? It is a southern courtroom scene. A number of darkies are brought before the judge and he hears the complaints and their defense. No doubt it is familiar to many and I would appreciate it if some one could supply me with a copy of it. Later on I hope to send the Cornerites many little things.

"A NEW MEMBER."

This monologue is not known to me, but it may be to others. I have [illegible] usually such recitations and [illegible] owned by the persons who [illegible] or that such artists have [illegible] right to the parts they take. [illegible] it may not be possible to [illegible] tion the correspondent asks. He's Waited Five Years.

"I have a little boy who wants a [illegible] so badly that several times he has [illegible] to make himself one. We are too [illegible] buy him one. His father is dead [illegible] friend who is a music teacher [illegible] to give him lessons, but we can't [illegible] way clear to get the violin [illegible] The boy is 11 years old and I am [illegible] for him to have the instrument [illegible] is so desirous to learn to play it. [illegible] longed for it ever since he was [illegible] old. [illegible]"

When a child has an overmaster[illegible] for a violin for five years one [illegible] likely to imagine that he has the [illegible] of music. Under the circumstances [illegible] to be hoped that some one may [illegible] put some sort of a violin in his way. [illegible] if it is small and cheap it will do [illegible] to learn on and to prove if his [illegible] it is merely a boyish whim or [illegible] from a genuine passion for [illegible] wish to make it.

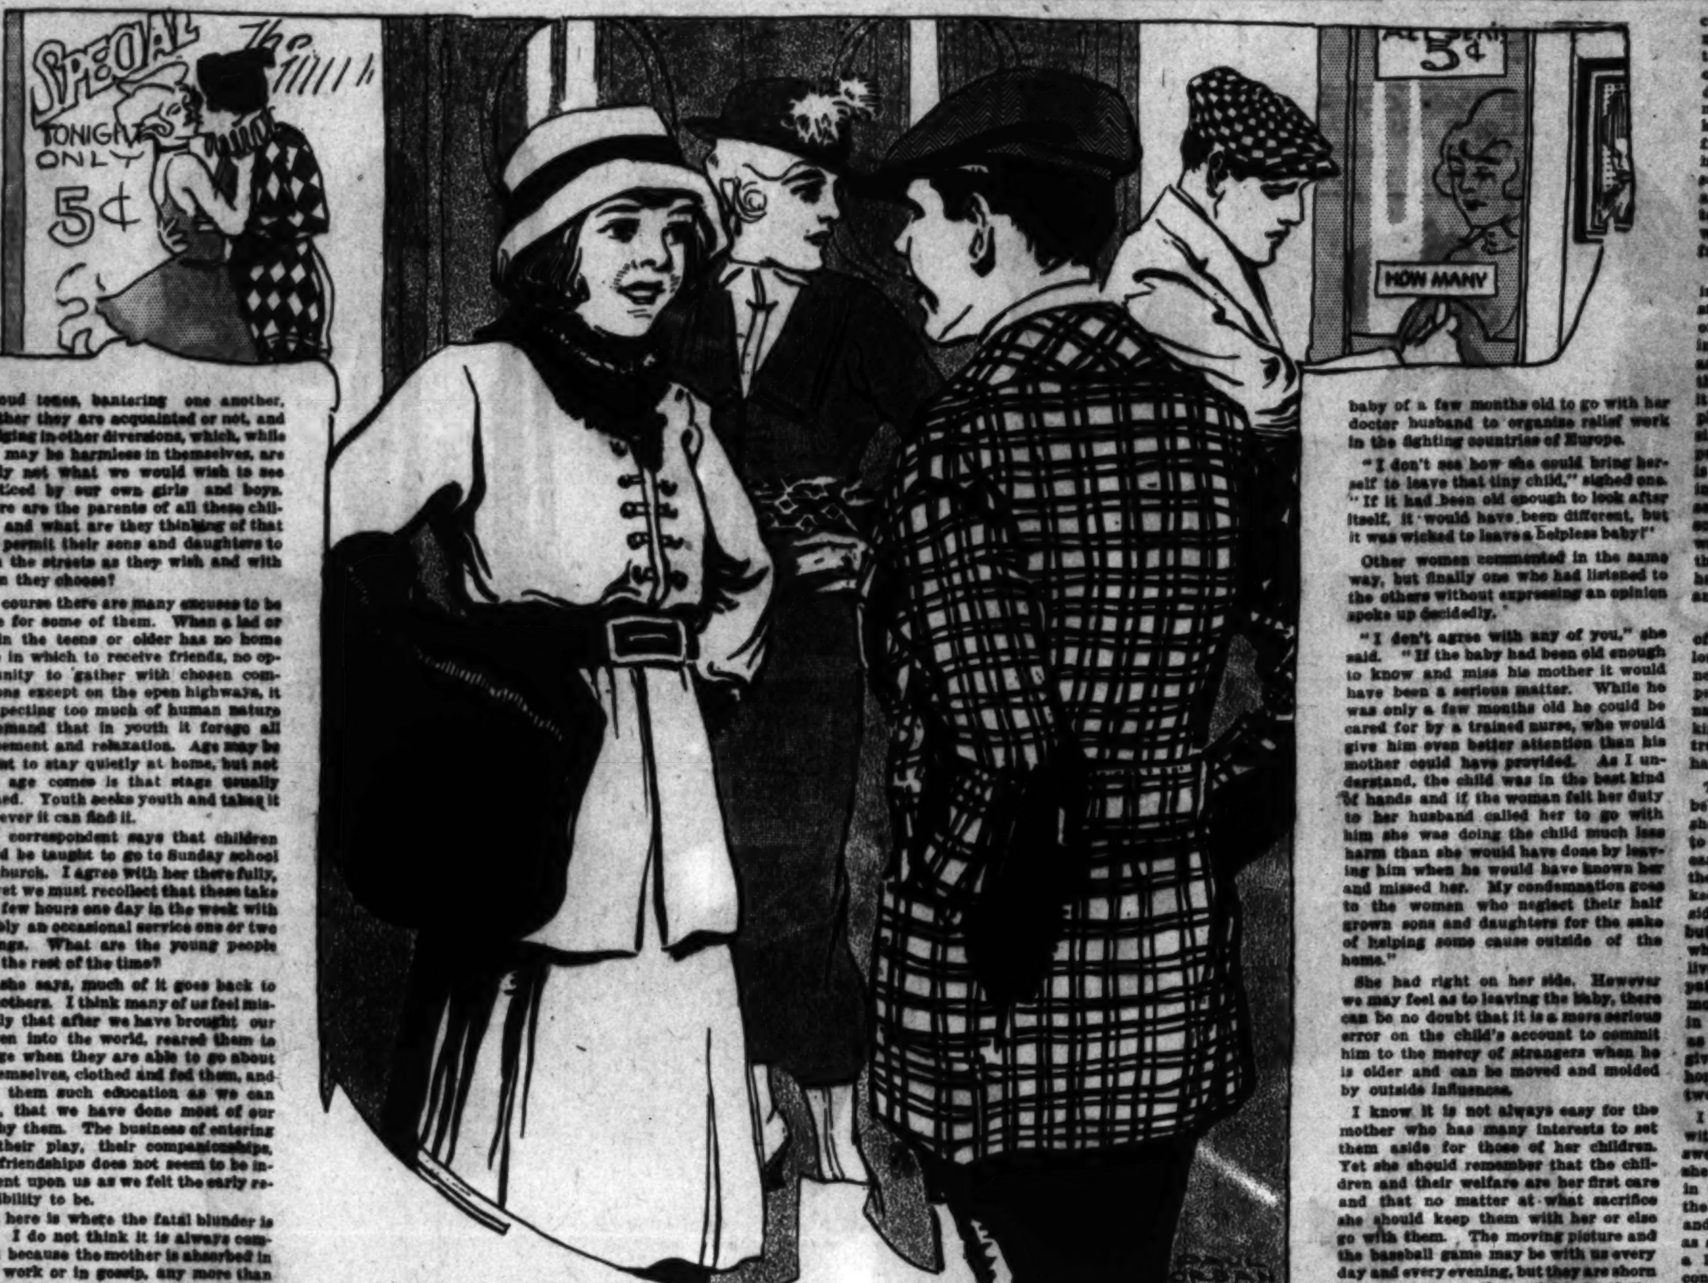
COMMON SENSE in the HOME
EDITED by MARION HARLAND

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS AGAIN.



I WOULD like to call the attention of mothers to the following letter:

"Will you allow me space in the Corner for a few words on how children should be reared? I have some thoughts on the subject which I would like to express.

"In the first place, I think children should obey their parents and should be taught to work instead of strolling the streets. A child who is taught to work while growing up will be more than likely to become energetic and prosperous in maturity. The trouble with many mothers is that they are too glad to get rid of their children. They send them off to go where they please and to play with children of unknown character. I think it is most important to keep in close touch with our children. Many persons seem to take it for granted that their boys and girls are all right and wouldn't say or do anything in the least wrong. But I personally know of children who are deceiving their parents every day.

"If we mothers would drop some of our fancy work and gossiping with our neighbors and pay strict attention to our children, there would not be so many boys in the penitentiary and so many girls in houses of ill fame. Nor would there be so many divorces and separations between married couples if their parents had done their duty. We ought to teach our children to go to Sunday school and to church instead of permitting them to go to so many moving picture shows and baseball games. There are so many indecent things for our boys and girls to see. Also, they become sweethearts altogether too soon.

"Mothers ought to teach their girls how to keep house and to do it right. I heard a couple of women talking the other day. Mrs. J. said her daughter was 9 years old and large for her age, but that every time she washed the dishes and swept the floor the mother had it all to do over again. Mrs. S. said she had made her daughter sweep the floor as many as seven times before she could get it clean and that she was glad of it now—the girl, I mean—since she had become a grown and married woman and knew how to keep house properly.

"I think we mothers ought never to neglect our house for the sake of crochet work and trashy books, for the way and example we impress on our children is the road they are likely to follow.

"MRS. A. M. S."

This letter has interested me very much. To my mind the writer has put her finger on several points of importance in the training of children, and if I do not take quite such a pessimistic view as she does of the worst results of carelessness in the raising of children, yet I am forced to admit that the prisons and even worse places are recruited from among the families of decent people—in part, at least—and that it is an undoubted fact that the street is a most dangerous place for either a boy or girl to range at will.

Whenever I am out on the streets in the evening I am impressed with the number of young people who are strolling back and forth, flirting, romping, conversing in loud tones, bantering one another, whether they are acquainted or not, and indulging in other diversions, which, while they may be harmless in themselves, are surely not what we would wish to see practiced by our own girls and boys. Where are the parents of all these children and what are they thinking of that they permit their sons and daughters to roam the streets as they wish and with whom they choose?

Of course there are many excuses to be made for some of them. When a lad or girl in the teens or older has no home place in which to receive friends, no opportunity to gather with chosen companions except on the open highways, it is expecting too much of human nature to demand that in youth it forego all amusement and relaxation. Age may be content to stay quietly at home, but not until age comes is that stage usually reached. Youth seeks youth and takes it wherever it can find it.

My correspondent says that children should be taught to go to Sunday school and church. I agree with her there fully, and yet we must recollect that these take up a few hours one day in the week with possibly an occasional service one or two evenings. What are the young people to do the rest of the time?

As she says, much of it goes back to the mothers. I think many of us feel mistakenly that after we have brought our children into the world, reared them to the age when they are able to go about by themselves, clothed and fed them, and given them such education as we can afford, that we have done most of our duty by them. The business of entering into their play, their companionships, their friendships does not seem to be incumbent upon us as we felt the early responsibility to be.

Just here is where the fatal blunder is made. I do not think it is always committed because the mother is absorbed in fancy work or in gossip, any more than because she is wrapped up in philanthropy or church affairs, or devoted to bridge or to her clubs. It is more likely to be because she fails to appreciate the importance of keeping her children close to her after they have attained the age when they are apparently able to go alone. This is in reality often the time when they need her most.

"No, I will not send my children away to boarding school," I heard a mother say one day. "That is the time when they require my attention far more than when they are younger. They have just reached the formative period, and I do not mean to trust the development of their natures at that stage to any other hands than my own."

I thought of her the other day when I heard a group of mothers discussing the action of a mother in having left her baby of a few months old to go with her doctor husband to organize relief work in the fighting countries of Europe.

"I don't see how she could bring herself to leave that tiny child," sighed one. "If it had been old enough to look after itself, it would have been different, but it was wicked to leave a helpless baby!"

Other women commented in the same way, but finally one who had listened to the others without expressing an opinion spoke up decidedly.

"I don't agree with any of you," she said. "If the baby had been old enough to know and miss his mother it would have been a serious matter. While he was only a few months old he could be cared for by a trained nurse, who would give him even better attention than his mother could have provided. As I understand, the child was in the best kind of hands and if the woman felt her duty to her husband called her to go with him she was doing the child much less harm than she would have done by leaving him when he would have known her and missed her. My condemnation goes to the women who neglect their half grown sons and daughters for the sake of helping some cause outside of the home."

She had right on her side. However we may feel as to leaving the baby, there can be no doubt that it is a more serious error on the child's account to commit him to the mercy of strangers when he is older and can be moved and molded by outside influences.

I know it is not always easy for the mother who has many interests to set them aside for those of her children. Yet she should remember that the children and their welfare are her first care and that no matter at what sacrifice she should keep them with her or else go with them. The moving picture and the baseball game may be with us every day and every evening, but they are shorn of any damage they might do if the mother shares them with her children so far as she can and when she cannot go is eager to hear a report of the sports or entertainment afterwards.

More than this, she should know her child's companions. When you [illegible] mothers now were girls did you [illegible] to go about with boys and girls of [illegible] own age? Why should not your [illegible]dren seek the same enjoyment? [illegible] much harm did you get from it? If [illegible] know your children's playmates [illegible] friends and make them welcome [illegible] home you will soon find out which [illegible] safe and which dangerous comp[illegible] and if you have kept your children [illegible] to you in their thoughts and deeds [illegible] will be swayed by your judgment in [illegible] friendships as well as in everything [illegible]

As to the idea of boys and girls [illegible]ing "sweethearts" too young, I [illegible] strongly. To my mind it is a pro[illegible] of sacred things to talk of love [illegible]ing between children, to speak of [illegible] as "lovers" and "sweethearts" [illegible] they are little more than infants. [illegible] it vulgar. Let the boys and the [illegible] play together naturally, like broth[illegible] sisters, or friends. They will have [illegible] preference in their intimacies, but [illegible] is no reason for any notion of love[illegible]ing being introduced. If a girl is [illegible] self-respect and the sanctity of [illegible] son and the boy is trained in the [illegible] way there is no reason in the wo[illegible] they should not associate on [illegible] happy companionship through chi[illegible] and youth.

A good deal may be said on the que[illegible] of work. I heard a lecturer rema[illegible] long ago that a worse punishment [illegible] never devised than that of work [illegible] performed because children had [illegible] naughty. By using occupation of [illegible] kind as a penalty he asserted—and [illegible] truth—that work is stigmatized and [illegible] hateful to childhood.

There is no reason why work sh[illegible] be looked upon as a punishment. [illegible] should be given certain duties and [illegible] to feel responsible for them. [illegible] early age both boys and girls can [illegible] their place in the home, their [illegible] keeping it in order; their right to [illegible]sider it their own not only as a habita[illegible] but also as a spot where they belong [illegible] where they can bring their friends [illegible] live their own life, so far as this is [illegible]patible with the comfort of others. [illegible] mother who fails to implant this [illegible] in her children makes as big a m[illegible] as the parent who spoils her children [illegible] gives them too much indulgence [illegible] home. The wise course lies betwe[illegible] two extremes.

I don't think I altogether sym[illegible] with the mother who made her [illegible] sweep the room seven times. W[illegible] she not teach the girl how to do it [illegible] in the first place, check her if she [illegible] the broom wrong or swept care[illegible] and show her how to correct [illegible] as she went along? It would ha[illegible] a less discouraging experience [illegible] concerned. "Children's work [illegible] plague than profit" is an old [illegible] but the parent must recollect [illegible] not her own profit but the welfare [illegible] the child she is seeking and [illegible] added care as part of the process [illegible] a final good.

MARION HARLAND'S HELPING HAND.

Flower Seeds to Exchange.

"I HAVE recently moved into a new home and am settling in it. I desire to put out some shrubs, roses, and summer flowering bulbs, and I wonder if among all your readers there is some one who has a surplus of plants. I already have violets and cannas and in return for the plants I wish I would be glad to give seeds of the elephant ear mustard, white velvet okra, and a prolific pepper which is a pretty plant for bedding. It grows in bouquet form and is loaded with purple, yellow, and red peppers; the fruit is hot. I also have a quantity of Burpee's 'Daylight Dolichos.' The vines grow quickly to a height of eight or ten feet and blossom profusely from base to summit. The large spikes of pure white flowers stand out boldly from the rich green foliage. As the flowers drop from the long spikes they are succeeded by broad, velvety white pods, which retain their freshness of color for a long time. A. A. C."

This description is enough to move any flower lover to a wild desire to possess the vine. I hold her address.

Celery Toast.

"I send you a recipe for a dish we have found nice for luncheon and for Sunday night supper, called celery toast. It is cheap and good. Cut celery into inch lengths and stew until soft, then put it through a vegetable press. Make a white sauce with a tablespoon each of butter and of flour and a cup of milk, seasoning it with salt, pepper, and a little onion juice, and then stir in the celery puree. Toast slices of bread, soften them with water in which the celery was boiled, pour the sauce on them, set in the oven ten minutes, and serve. Good with cold meat.

Cured Mange in Cat.

"F. O. M. asks for a remedy for a cat which has the mange. Ten years ago a small mongrel cat which was a pet in our family contracted this disease. No one else would touch it, so I, who was then a girl about 14 years old, decided it was up to me to do something for the poor creature. It appeared to suffer greatly. I mixed new lard with sulphur and applied it with a cloth on a stick. A brush could be used instead. My family said it was not much good to doctor the cat, as when affected in that way they hardly ever lived beyond the stage this cat had come to. But in a few weeks it was well, and not more than a month ago this same cat died of old age. We had all thought a great deal of Tabby. This remedy I mention is the only sure one I have ever heard of. Don't be afraid to put on lots of the mixture. I enjoy the Corner so much. I could write to a shut-in, man or woman—or rather I could have my husband write to the man. Perhaps some woman on a lonely claim or farm somewhere would like picture post cards or a letter from me. I would like to do something for some one, no matter how little it might be. MRS. L. E. MCA."

The owners of pet cats and dogs will be glad to know of this simple remedy for mange. Also there is sure to be a shut-in somewhere, or a lonely woman who would be glad to receive letters and post cards. I will send this Cornerite's address to such on application. I am glad to state that the lonely young man to whom she refers in another part of her letter and whose signature she was unable to give has been supplied already with the pennants he wished to decorate his cabin.

Catching and Mounting Butterflies.

"Perhaps I am coming to the wrong place for information, but you seem able to answer so many questions that I venture to put one to you. Can you or any one of your readers tell me how to catch and mount or preserve butterflies? Or if you cannot give me the information, can you direct me to some source where I can procure it? A. R."

I am sorry to say I shall have to refer this inquiry. If you lived in a large city, where there was a good public library, I should advise you to go to the librarian for counsel. As it is, I think the best plan is to do as I have done successfully on many other occasions when I have thrown myself upon the good will of the constituency. I am sure some one will be able to reply to your question and I will gladly give your address to any one who asks for it.

Home Made Bread.

"I have received so much assistance from the Helping Hand that I am passing on some help myself and will ask a still further favor. I have seen that some of the sisters have been asking and sending bread recipes, so I will send one of my own with which I have had great success. I hope each one trying it will appreciate it as much as I do and have as fine luck with it. Three pints of bread flour, one heaping tablespoon of lard, two rounding tablespoons of sugar, three-quarters of a yeast cake; dissolve this in two large tablespoons of water; a little salt. Scald one pint of milk and allow it to become partially cool; add the dissolved yeast cake. Sift the flour, sugar, and salt together and work in the lard with the finger tips. Add the dissolved yeast and enough milk to make a dough of the right consistency to knead, adding more milk if a greater quantity than the pint scalded is required. Knead until the dough is smooth and elastic to the touch and bubbles may be seen under the surface. Place this dough in a large bread bowl or a bread raiser; cover with a clean cloth and a board or a tin cover. Let the dough rise overnight in a temperature of about 65 Fahrenheit. In the morning cut it down with a knife and let it rise again to about double its size. Shape it then into loaves and place these in greased pans, having each pan about half full. Cover the pans and let the bread rise again until about double its bulk and bake in a slow oven. Let the bread rise in the oven during the first fifteen minutes; brown it in the next fifteen, and bake done in the last fifteen minutes—three-quarters of an hour, altogether. It is well to cover the loaves with paper at first if the oven is pretty hot. I wonder if some of the sisters have some calico, gingham, silk, and wool scraps they would like pieced into quilts. I would be glad to get them to piece on shares. I will piece one-half of each quilt for enough pieces to make the other half for myself.

"MRS. W. T. H."

Although bread recipes are constantly being sent in by good housekeepers, the directions are constantly being asked and I am glad to receive a trustworthy set of instructions like the preceding, which have been tried and proved satisfactory. In this day of pressingly hard prices, when more and more housekeepers are urged to make bread at home on account of the economy, as well as because of the wholesomeness and deliciousness of really good home made bread, directions like this are especially timely. How about the quilt pieces? Are there not some of our many readers who would care to have pieces made up into quilts for them "on shares," as this Cornerite suggests? I shall put her address on file and will supply it to those who wish to follow this plan.

Appeal Generously Answered.

"Some time ago I made an appeal to the Corner for help in decorating a lonely cabin. I am glad to state that my appeal has been more than answered. I received a large number of pennants, books, papers, pictures, a couple of dictionaries, and several other small but useful articles. Also there came a number of cheerful letters, offering to send still more. I can hardly realize that there are so many kind hearted people ready to lend a helping hand in time of need, and as it will require quite a long time for me to answer all of my benefactors for their extension of good will, I take this opportunity to express my deep gratitude. I wish you could all see the genuine pleasure you have brought to me and to others as well, for there are many besides myself here for the same purpose as I and living under the same conditions, and I can share with them. Many packages were sent anonymously and it will, therefore, not be possible for me to thank the givers individually, but I hope they may see this acknowledgment. May the Corner long continue with its splendid work. G. S."

I dare say most of the Cornerites recollect the story of the writer of this letter, who was sent away in quest of health and was established in a lonely and bare cabin. The appeal for pennants to help decorate the naked walls and for a little reading matter has brought the response to which he refers. Sometimes I think I know my Cornerites and what to expect of them, but every now and then, when a cases arises of this kind, I feel that I have never fully appreciated their prompt and loving generosity in replying to appeals for aid. Like the writer of the letter, one could never have imagined there were so many kind hearted people ready to lend a hand in time of need. God bless them all. That the young man shares in the spirit he commends is proved by his eagerness to help and cheer others with the brightness which has come to him.

Wants a Darky Monologue.

"Can any of the Cornerites send me or tell me where to procure a copy of this darky monologue? It is a southern courtroom scene. A number of darkies are brought before the judge and he hears the complaints and their defense. No doubt it is familiar to many and I would appreciate it if some one could supply me with a copy of it. Later on I hope to send the Cornerites many little things.

"A NEW MEMBER."

This monologue is not known to me, but it may be to others. I have [illegible] usually such recitations and the [illegible] owned by the persons who deliver [illegible] or that such artists have the [illegible] right to the parts they take. In [illegible] it may not be possible to give the [illegible]tion the correspondent asks. When a child has an overmastering [illegible] for a violin for five years one is [illegible] likely to imagine that he has the [illegible] of music. Under the circumstances [illegible] to be hoped that some one may be [illegible] put some sort of a violin in his way. [illegible] if it is small and cheap it will do for [illegible] to learn on and to prove if his [illegible] it is merely a boyish whim or [illegible] from a genuine passion for music [illegible] wish to make it.

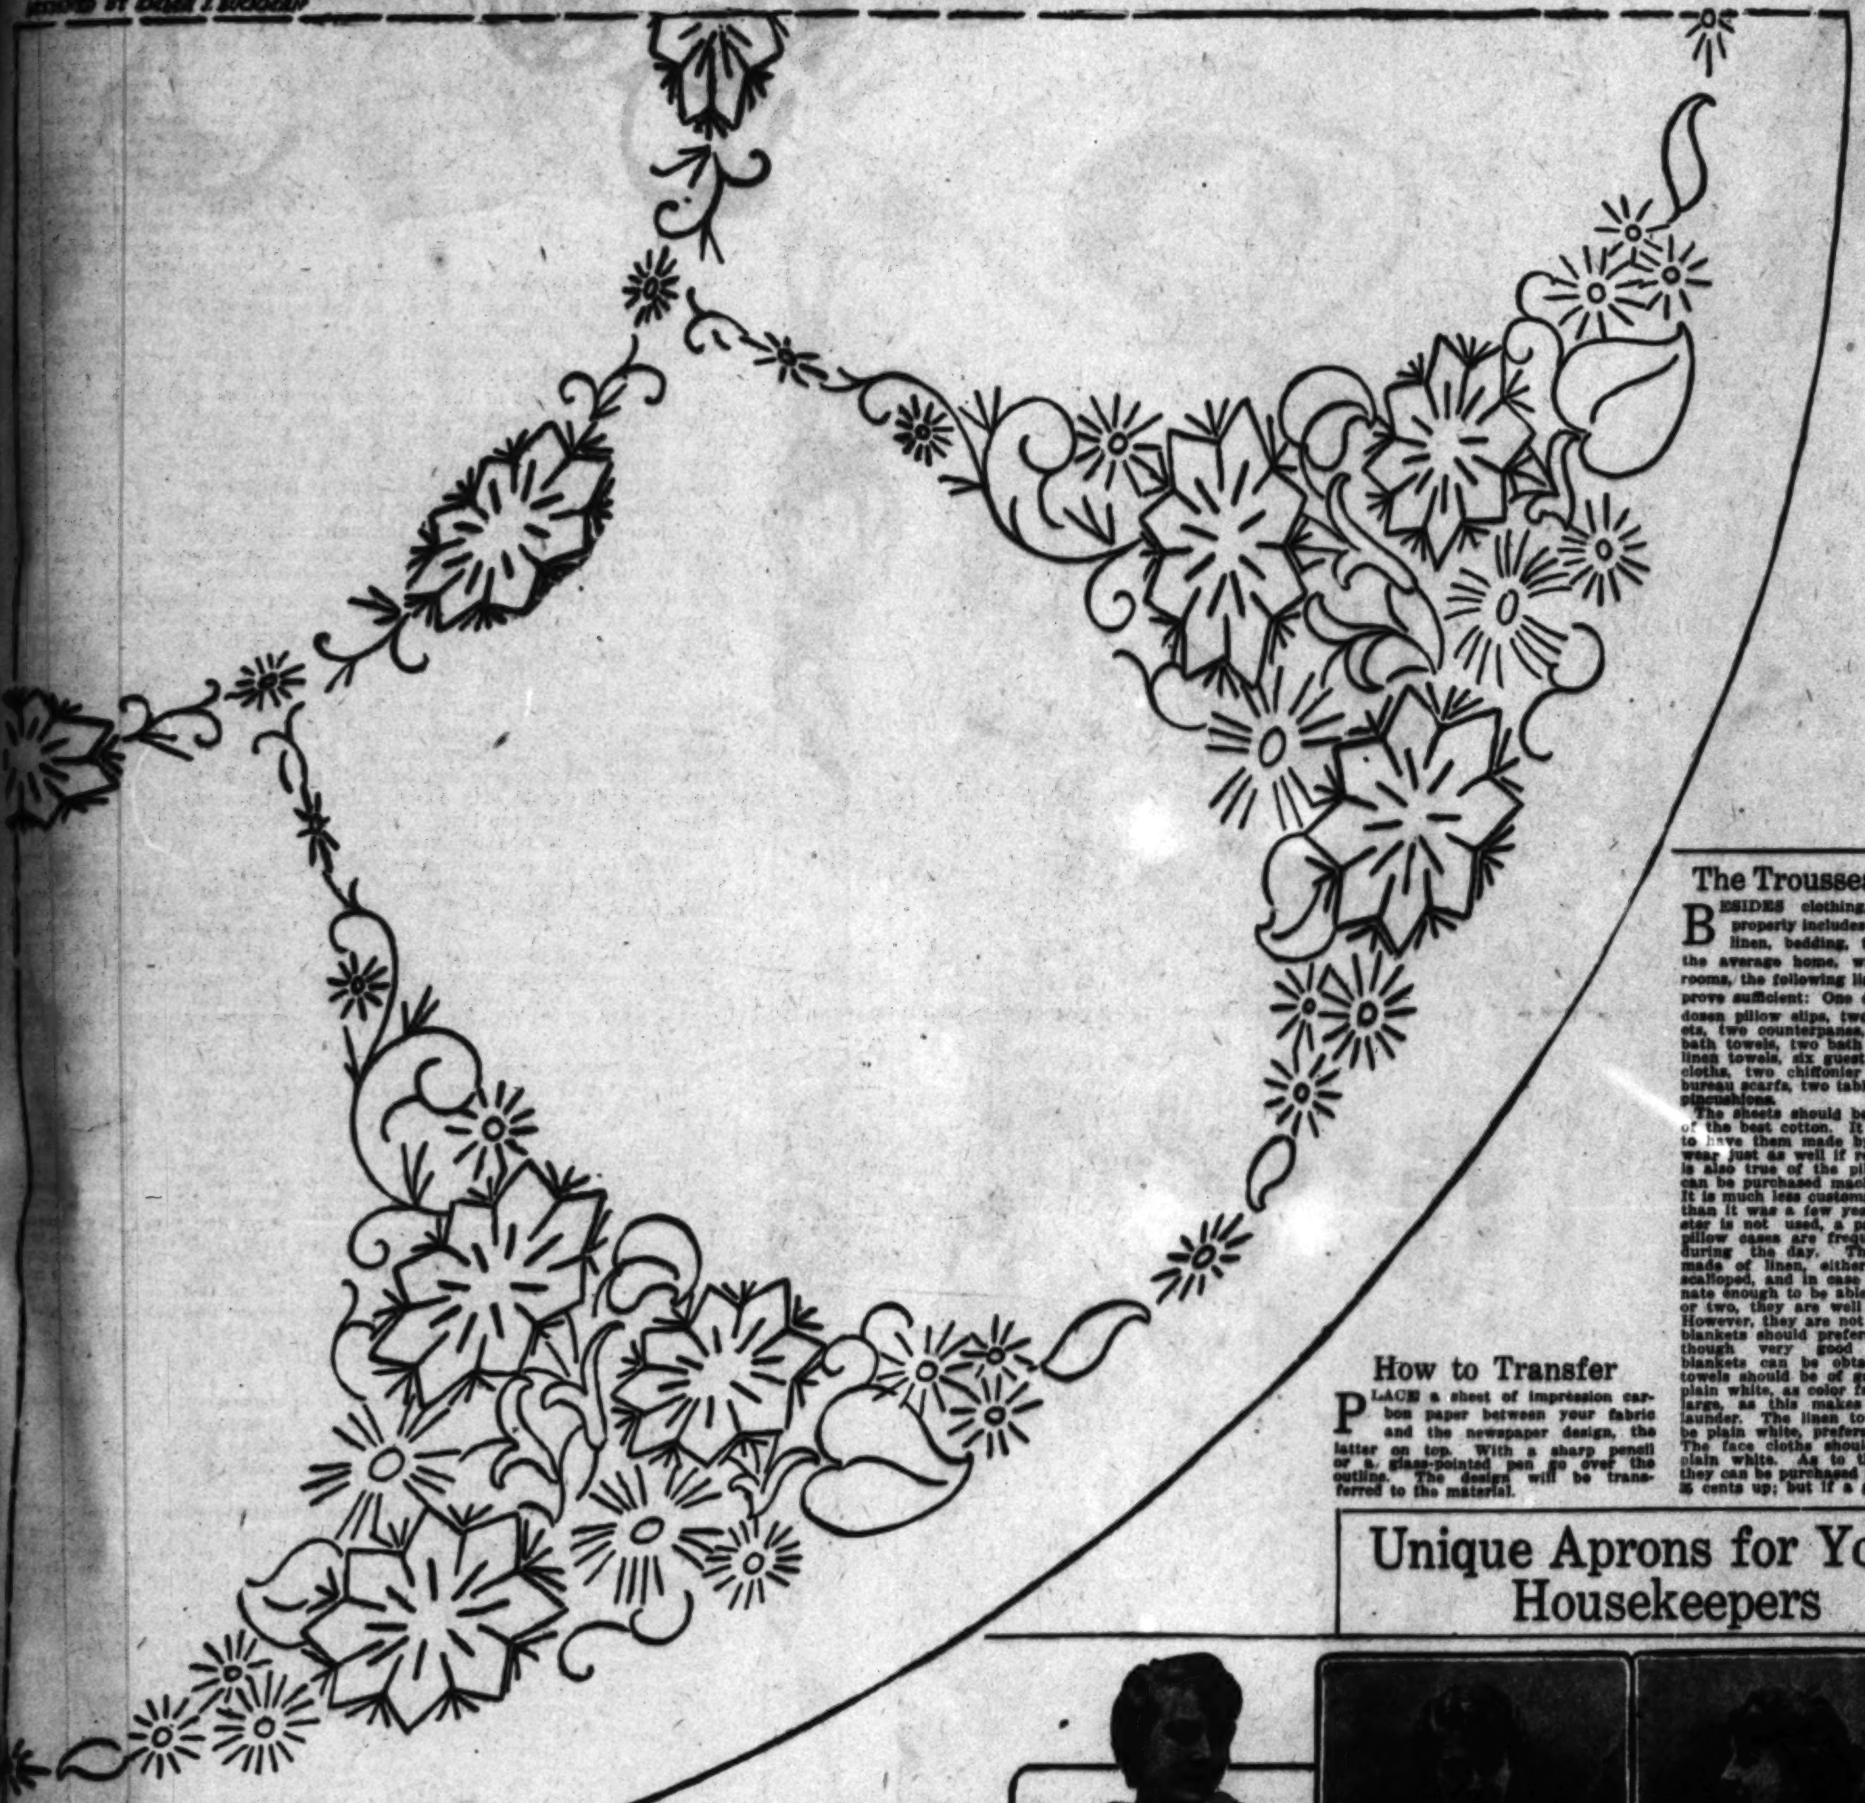
FOR THE INDUSTRIOUS NEEDLEWOMAN

BY ADELAIDE BYRD

A NOSEGAY CENTERPIECE

DESIGNED BY [illegible] J. BUCKMAN



One Quarter of Design

WITH the coming of the pretty May flowers I think it is quite appropriate to offer to my readers today a nosegay design for a centerpiece. The quaintness of the flowers is a sufficient credential to make them welcome to the nimble fingers of every embroiderer. They are amenable to suggestion that they are willing to have you treat them in whatever way you think will show them up to the best advantage. They suggest to the mind many stitches and many color combinations. Since it is fashionable to add color to the table linen it may be just as well to profit by the suggestion.

Only one-fourth of the twenty-four-inch design is shown, but by swinging the quarter around, being sure to keep the center of the design stationary, you will have no trouble tracing the complete design. Make the outer line [illegible].

I think you will find the long stitch most convenient for the straight lines. The curved ones yield readily to outline stitching. For the persons who dislike colored embroidery on white table linen, all-white embroidery cotton can be used for the work; but you would be surprised to see how effective a combination of colors looks on this particular design. For the large flowers, which are really conventional morning-glories, blue can be used, the central lines being worked in brown. The little English daisies, appearing singly, would look well if their rays were made rose-colored and the centers yellow. The bachelor buttons, which resemble the little daisy blossoms but are much larger, might be done in blue, but their centers may be yellow as the centers of the daisies themselves. The tendrils and stems of the morning-glories should be worked in green.

If you follow this color scheme you will have five colors with which to work. Under such circumstances you will find it most convenient to keep five needles near you while doing the work, each needle being filled with a different color of cotton.

There are two ways of finishing the edge of the centerpiece. One way is to use a tape binding. In this case white tape would be best. Another method is to sew cluny lace to the edge. It is always advisable to shrink the lace before using it. A very satisfactory way to attach the lace is to join the two ends together, divide the circle of lace and the circumference of the centerpiece into four, and pin the quarter marks of each together. In this way the fullness can be evenly scattered and the lace can be pinned or basted into place before the final stitches are used to join the edging securely to the centerpiece. A very artistic touch can be given to the whole piece of embroidery if you will take heavy black thread and couch it around the edge of the centerpiece, about an eighth of an inch in from the lace, using heavy white thread for the couching purpose.

This centerpiece, with a bowl of old-fashioned flowers, will bring joy to your heart and decided beauty to your dining room. You will feel as if you have a field of flowers growing before you.

Hand-Painted Sachets

DAINTY little sachets are suitable mementoes for all feminine occasions of gift-making. We have them embroidered and made of the daintiest materials, but the hand-painted sachet bag or "pillow" is a comparatively new idea. While these pretty little things have been made by artists from time to time for various friends, they were considered beyond the average girl's or woman's skill, and so were virtually unknown to the "fancy-work" world. It is surprising, however, to find how many simple little flowers or designs, even tiny landscapes, can be made with a pencil, a color box and one or two brushes by almost any one interested. The painting can be done upon silk or satin in watercolors and is most effective. The flower sachets can be painted with the flowers from which they obtain their delightful odors or with any other pretty design. Little girls will delight to make the pretty things for gifts, and many children can do better work in this instance than their equally untrained elders.

Embroidered Petticoats

ONE of the loveliest bits of finery in a fortunate girl's hope chest is a pale green taffeta petticoat embroidered with the most realistic of wild roses. The wild roses are embroidered in their natural colors—pink for the blooms, a tender foliage green for the leaves and stems and yellow French knots for the rose centers. There are even tiny bits of reddish brown on most realistic thorns that project here and there from the stems. The petticoat is a marvel of workmanship in effect and the girl in question did it all herself, though she is far from an expert needlewoman. While the wild-rose design is worked solidly, the whole is worked with not too fine silk, so that the embroidery is quickly accomplished and the stitches are not as difficult as those which must be done with finer silk. Run the embroidery as a border about the bottom of the skirt or in a narrowing panel up the front of the petticoat until a point is reached just above the knees. Forget-me-nots can be substituted. The French knots are, of course, easier to work than are the solid stitches necessary in the wild-rose design. One French knot is used for each petal and a yellow knot forms the center of each blossom.

New Napkin Rings

IN HOUSEHOLDS where the napkin is used for more than one meal and where napkin rings are a necessity, the new summery-looking rings will be a boon. They are so different from the usual variety that, for this reason alone, they will be liked. Daintily figured cretonne is used for the rings, which are an inch and a half in width. The edges can be bound with tape, or a picot edge can be crocheted to give the finishing touch. Snap fasteners will satisfactorily close the ring over the napkin, and a small white crocheted button can be used to ornament the pointed end. The cretonne ring is intended to accompany the summer luncheon sets of figured materials, but there is no reason why it should not be used on white linen, since its design reminds one of springtime and fresh flowers.

How to Transfer

PLACE a sheet of impression carbon paper between your fabric and the newspaper design, the latter on top. With a sharp pencil or a glass-pointed pen go over the outline. The design will be transferred to the material.

The Trousseau Linens

BESIDES clothing, the trousseau property includes a supply of table linen, bedding, towels, etc. For the average home, with two sleeping rooms, the following list of articles will prove sufficient: One dozen sheets, one dozen pillow slips, two pairs of blankets, two counterpanes, eight to twelve bath towels, two bath mats, one dozen linen towels, six guest towels, six face cloths, two chiffonier scarfs and two bureau scarfs, two table covers and two pincushions.

The sheets should be full length and of the best cotton. It is not necessary to have them made by hand, for they wear just as well if ready made. This is also true of the pillow slips, which can be purchased machine hemstitched. It is much less customary to use shams than it was a few years ago; if a bolster is not used, a pair of handsome pillow cases are frequently slipped on during the day. These are usually made of linen, either hemstitched or scalloped, and in case a bride is fortunate enough to be able to afford a pair or two, they are well worth initialing. However, they are not necessities. The blankets should preferably be of wool, though very good cotton-and-wool blankets can be obtained. The bath towels should be of good material and plain white, as color fades, and not too large, as this makes them heavy to launder. The linen towels should also be plain white, preferably hemstitched. The face cloths should be heavy and plain white. As to the guest towels, they can be purchased ready made from 25 cents up; but if a girl is to have a long engagement and cares for sewing they can be made by hand. One [illegible] made some with an Old English initial outlined in blue. The bureau, chiffonier and table scarfs should match, and will be found more satisfactory if plain white. This is true also of the pincushions, which should have washable slips in two parts, faced together with ribbon so that they can be frequently laundered. The old-fashioned silk-and-lace ruffled creation is entirely out of date.

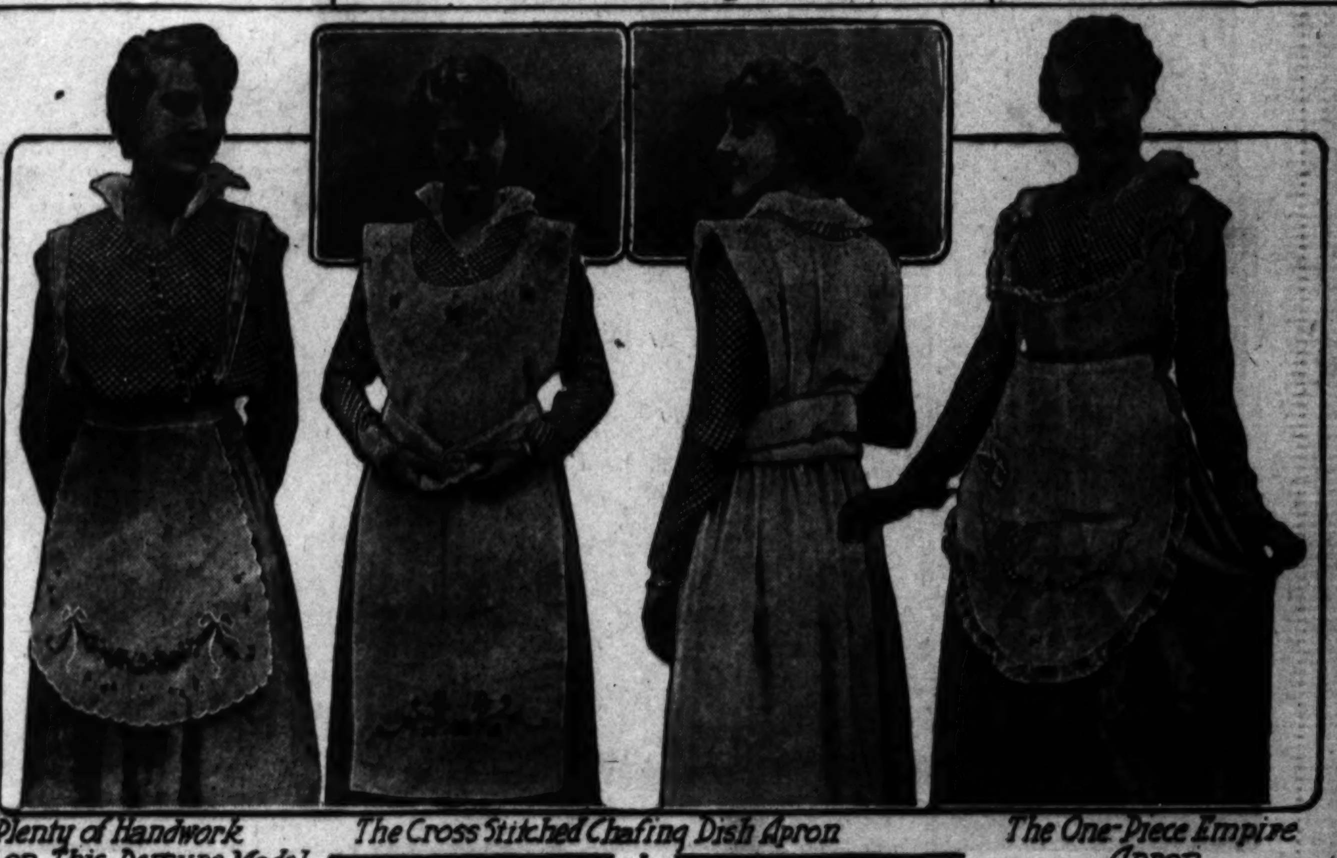
The table linen should include three luncheon sets, each for six people; and a runner, or doily, for the dining table when cleared between meals; three linen or damask hemstitched yard squares, two to three tablecloths, a silence cloth, one dozen tea napkins, one dozen medium-sized napkins, one dozen dinner napkins, two to three asbestos mats, with linen slip covers, and odd doilies for cake plate, bread tray, serving trays, etc.

The luncheon sets should be simple and durable—plain damask with scalloped edges is a good choice for one; a second could be in simple embroidery, and the third, if desired, could be in white and color, as blue-and-white Japanese embroidery, or of hemstitched colored linen. These are suitable for breakfast and luncheon. Two runners, which cross, could be substituted for the third set. These are very attractive when made of heavy white linen with very narrow crocheted edges, either in white or color. The table runner, or doily, is most serviceable when made of natural linen or Russian crash. The table squares may be used for any meal, even dinner. This is not strictly good form, for real fashion decrees that a damask cloth shall appear at dinner; but any woman has the right to make her household work as light as possible, and table squares certainly save laundry. The tablecloths are generally two yards long, although round ones may be used on circular tables. However, these do not wear as well and are hard to launder. If three cloths are purchased, the third should be three yards in length, so that a company table can be set. The napkins should be of the same design as the cloths, and, like them, should be hemmed by hand, as they wear and iron much better. A single initial on each of the table squares and best napkins will make them more attractive. The tea napkins should be as dainty as possible, and of a design that will harmonize with the best luncheon set, so that they may be used for Sunday-night and chafing-dish suppers. Whereas all these articles can be made by hand if desired, they can be purchased inexpensively ready made.

There are a few articles which are needed for the kitchen. These include eight dish towels, four of glass toweling and four of crash; six washable holders, with brass rings attached; two knit dishcloths; some cheesecloth bags for lettuce and other vegetables which are kept in the icebox, and a wall pocket for dusters; if a clothespin apron is made to match this, it is a very useful addition. Besides these, there should be some dustless dusters, a soft silk duster and some cheesecloth squares; and, if there is plenty of time, a bag to cover the ironing board will prove a great convenience. There are no roller towels included in this list, as the new paper towels are inexpensive and much more sanitary.

These lists may seem formidable, but if the time is short, or money is limited, the elimination process may be applied. This takes a great deal of moral courage, but it surely does save the dollars! Look yourself squarely in the face and say: "Do I actually need this thing, or am I getting it because I want it?" And, in many cases, it will not prove a necessity. And then, if the dearest man needs you and is waiting for his home, is it not more womanly to start, if necessary, with only one or two articles of a kind than to sacrifice his happiness while you sew or wait to earn the money for the number of things which you think you need?

Unique Aprons for Young Housekeepers



Plenty of Handwork on This Demure Model

The Cross Stitched Chafing Dish Apron

The One-Piece Empire Apron

WHY don't more women wear aprons? Aprons are such fetching articles, and they give the required domestic touch to the most frivolous little housewife. An apron makes one feel industrious, and when you consider that they are one of the few things that every man will fall for, well, it's time to make a few and to make them extraordinarily pretty.

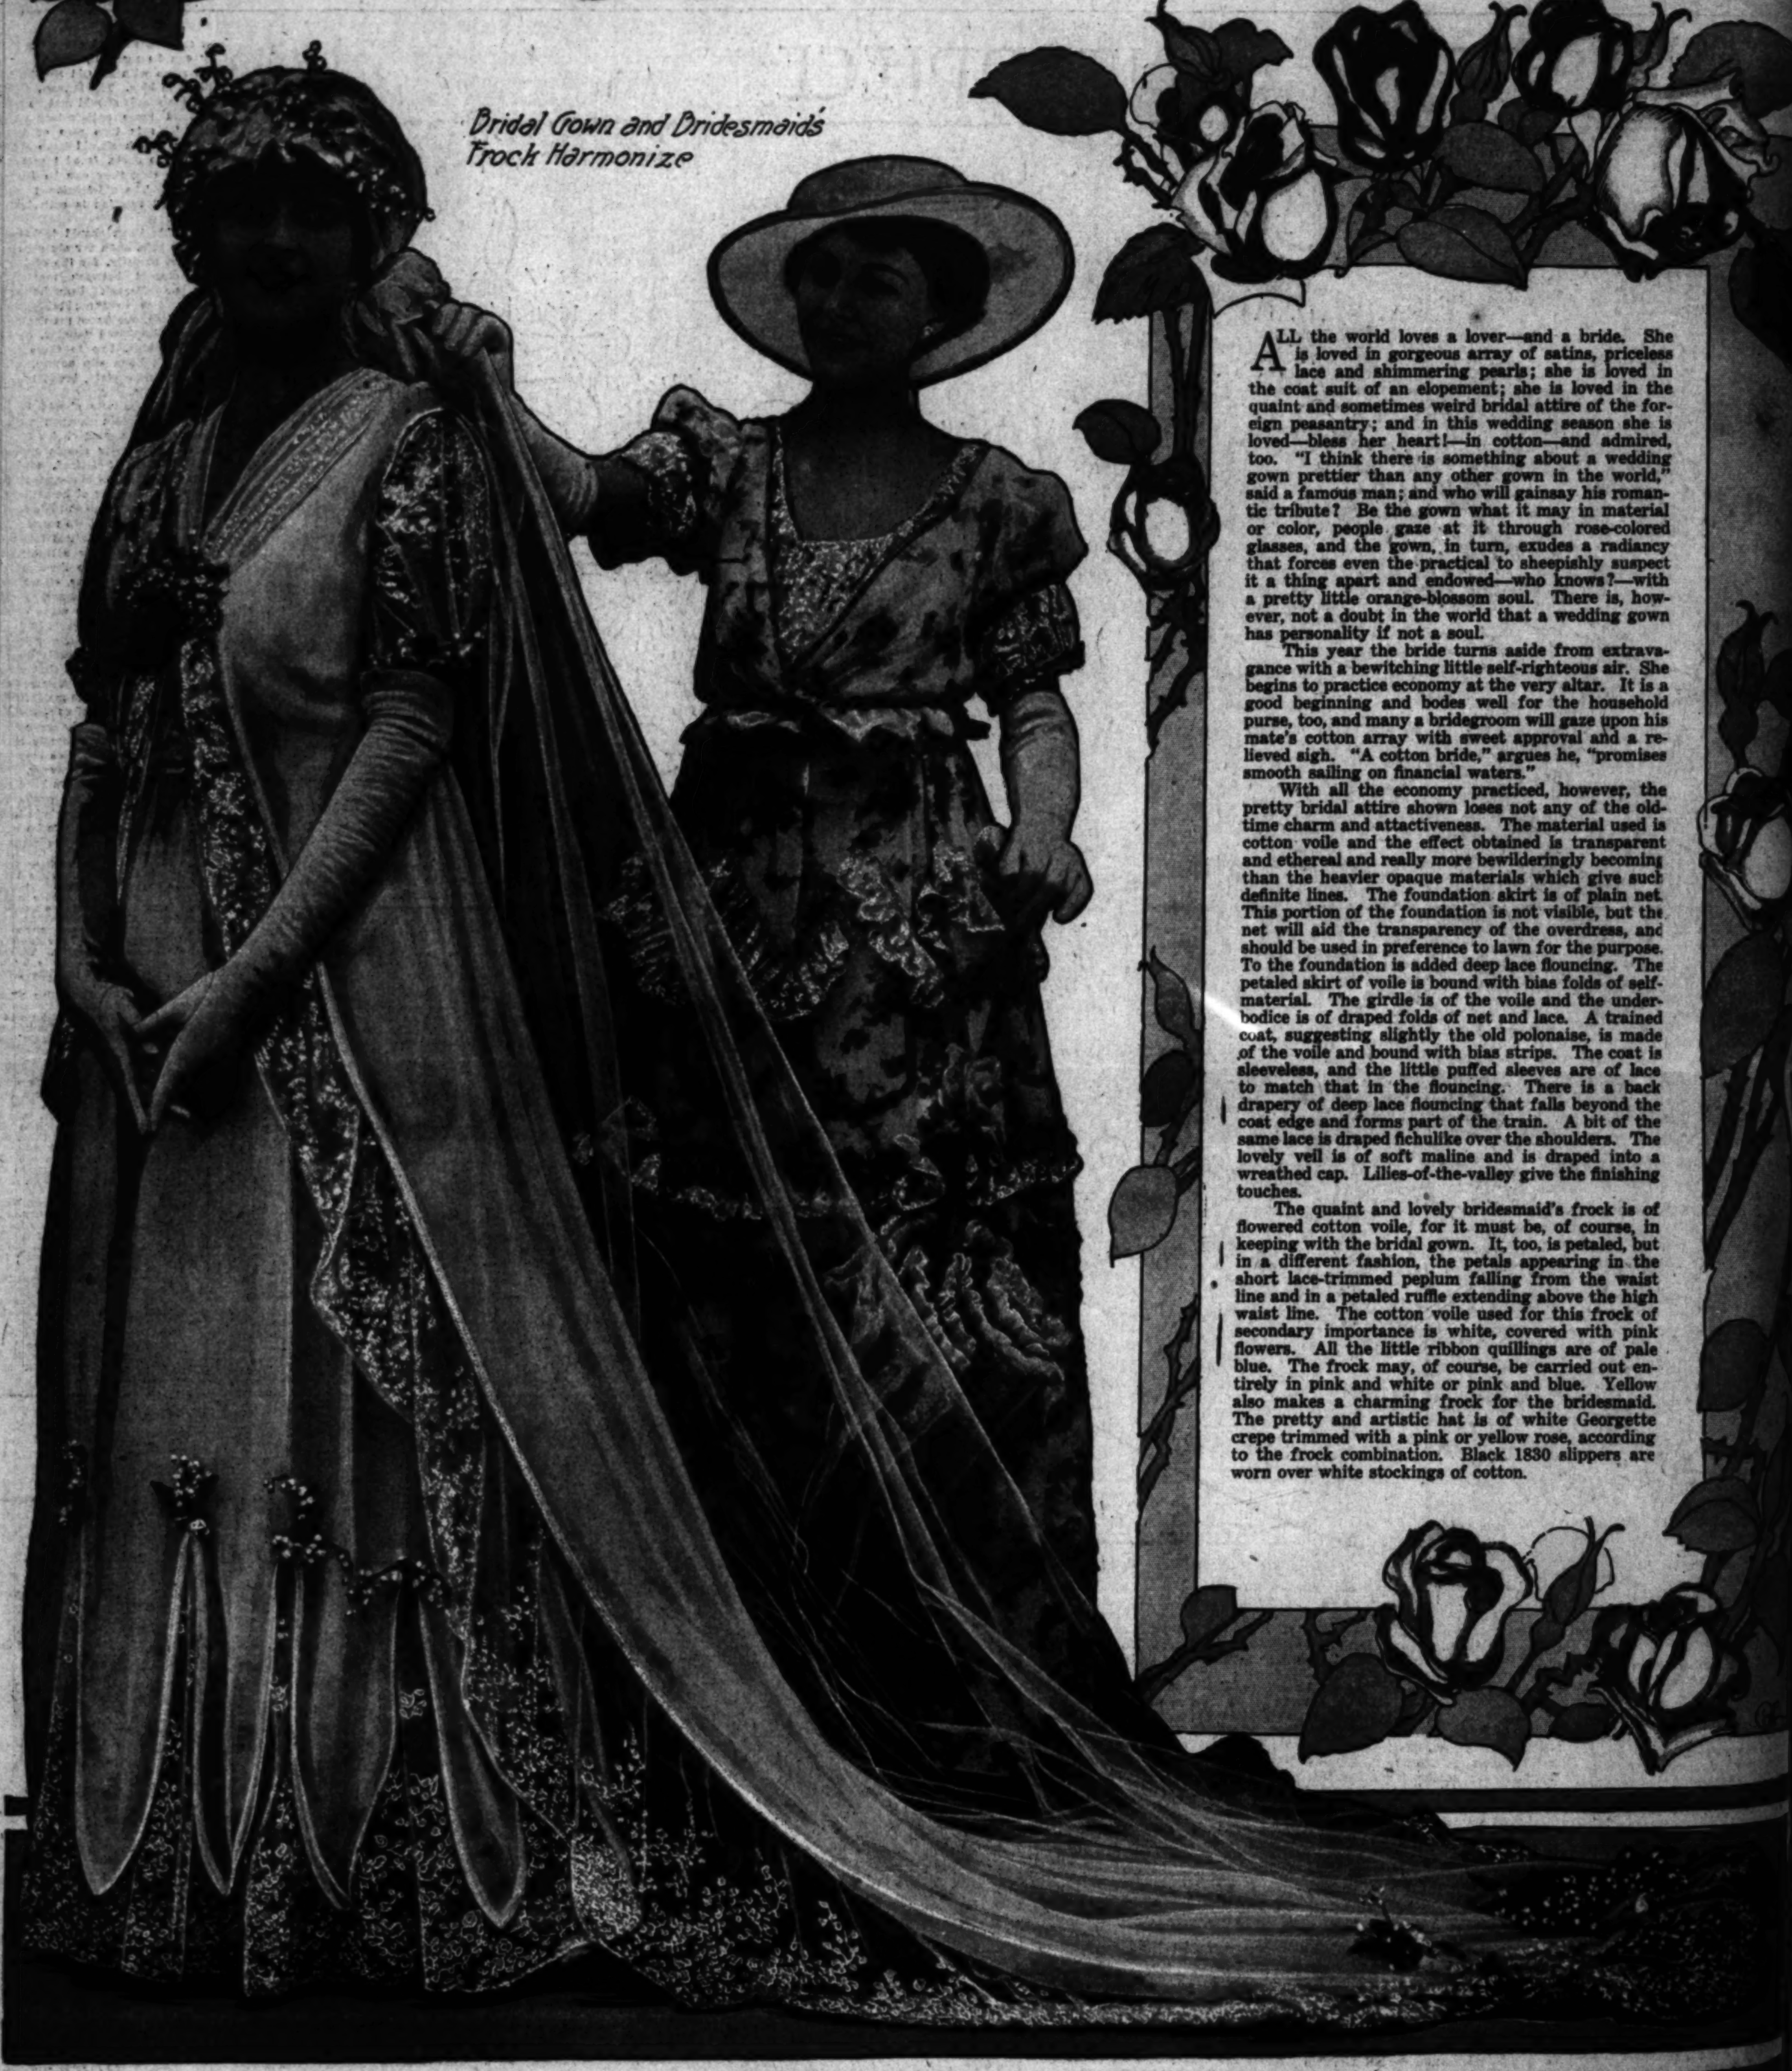
If you are fond of handwork, the plain little model with the scalloped edge will give you plenty to do. In embroidering the scallops it is advisable to sew underneath a straight piece of slightly stronger muslin than the thin batiste or handkerchief linen from which the apron is to be made. When the scallops are embroidered through the two thicknesses of material and the muslin is cut away, both above and below the scalloping, a strong edge is the result. The bowknots are worked in satin stitch in white or pale pink cotton. The garland is of forget-me-nots, worked in French knots, and the leaves of dark green in lazy-daisy stitch. Plain batiste or linen makes the band and strings. Hemstitch the string ends if you wish an added touch of daintiness.

The empire apron is really more practical than it looks. There is an abundance of lace and ribbon, but the ribbon can be attached by means of snap fasteners and the lace may be of the sturdy German val. type that launders beautifully. This attractive model is made in one piece. A strip of handkerchief linen a yard long and three-quarters of a yard in width is sufficient for this apron. Cut an oblong piece with rounded edge at the bottom, narrowing slightly toward the top and ending in two points, which are held up by the ribbon harness in the back. About five yards of lace an inch or more in width should be whipped onto the entire edge of this piece, which has been previously hemmed or rolled neatly. Six or seven inches from the top sew on the wrong side a casing of an inch and a half in width. The top of the apron is adorned with a number of posies, all in a row, worked in pink and green cottons and using French knots and lazy-daisy stitches. The same blossoms form the garland at the bottom of the apron and fall in a generous shower beneath. Run blue ribbon through the high waist casing and allow enough to tie in a pretty bow in the back. The ribbon suspenders are attached to the ribbon belt in the back by means of snaps, and to the front points by the same fasteners. Oh! don't forget the pocket; it may hold a tiny little handkerchief!

And here is something very new and eminently practical in chafing-dish aprons. Almost like a Russian tunic, or what is called the scapular in some religious orders. Take your choice, war or peace—from either aspect it is unique, and as easy to make as falling off a log. It is simply a strip of crash toweling, as fine or as coarse as your purse allows, the regulation toweling width of eighteen inches and fifty-five inches long. A three-inch hem is turned up at the bottom front, the back is pleated into a three-inch belt, and a hole large enough to allow a neatly coiffured head to slip through unmussed is cut about fourteen inches from the back belt. Cross-stitch in vivid blue, red and yellow forms a fantastic pattern across the front, and is repeated in the Rumanian motifs that appear on the shoulders, belt and button. If this pattern is too barbaric for more conservative tastes, a procession of demure little bunnies may be cross-stitched in dull blue, suggesting the rabbit of Welsh fame that is the usual reason for the chafing dish and its requisite apron. This model is so particularly practical, all-enveloping and easily slipped on that the young housekeeper is wise who fashions a number for general use about her house in place of the hideous gathered gingham affairs that are accepted because our mothers, and their mothers, and dear knows how many more wore them before us.

Aprons can be the most artistic things in the world, if you are willing to take the trouble, and there is very little of that if you follow the proper models.

BEHOLD the 1915 BRIDE—in COTTON!



Bridal Gown and Bridesmaid's Frock Harmonize

ALL the world loves a lover—and a bride. She is loved in gorgeous array of satins, priceless lace and shimmering pearls; she is loved in the coat suit of an elopement; she is loved in the quaint and sometimes weird bridal attire of the foreign peasantry; and in this wedding season she is loved—bless her heart!—in cotton—and admired, too. "I think there is something about a wedding gown prettier than any other gown in the world," said a famous man; and who will gainsay his romantic tribute? Be the gown what it may in material or color, people gaze at it through rose-colored glasses, and the gown, in turn, exudes a radiancy that forces even the practical to sheepishly suspect it a thing apart and endowed—who knows?—with a pretty little orange-blossom soul. There is, however, not a doubt in the world that a wedding gown has personality if not a soul.

This year the bride turns aside from extravagance with a bewitching little self-righteous air. She begins to practice economy at the very altar. It is a good beginning and bodes well for the household purse, too, and many a bridegroom will gaze upon his mate's cotton array with sweet approval and a relieved sigh. "A cotton bride," argues he, "promises smooth sailing on financial waters."

With all the economy practiced, however, the pretty bridal attire shown loses not any of the old-time charm and attactiveness. The material used is cotton voile and the effect obtained is transparent and ethereal and really more bewilderingly becoming than the heavier opaque materials which give such definite lines. The foundation skirt is of plain net. This portion of the foundation is not visible, but the net will aid the transparency of the overdress, and should be used in preference to lawn for the purpose. To the foundation is added deep lace flouncing. The petaled skirt of voile is bound with bias folds of self-material. The girdle is of the voile and the under-bodice is of draped folds of net and lace. A trained coat, suggesting slightly the old polonaise, is made of the voile and bound with bias strips. The coat is sleeveless, and the little puffed sleeves are of lace to match that in the flouncing. There is a back drapery of deep lace flouncing that falls beyond the coat edge and forms part of the train. A bit of the same lace is draped fichulike over the shoulders. The lovely veil is of soft maline and is draped into a wreathed cap. Lilies-of-the-valley give the finishing touches.

The quaint and lovely bridesmaid's frock is of flowered cotton voile, for it must be, of course, in keeping with the bridal gown. It, too, is petaled, but in a different fashion, the petals appearing in the short lace-trimmed peplum falling from the waist line and in a petaled ruffle extending above the high waist line. The cotton voile used for this frock of secondary importance is white, covered with pink flowers. All the little ribbon quillings are of pale blue. The frock may, of course, be carried out entirely in pink and white or pink and blue. Yellow also makes a charming frock for the bridesmaid. The pretty and artistic hat is of white Georgette crepe trimmed with a pink or yellow rose, according to the frock combination. Black 1830 slippers are worn over white stockings of cotton.

WOMEN OF MARK

A Modern Portia

TO Miss Lucille Pugh, the criminal lawyer of New York, belongs the distinction of being the first of her sex to defend a man accused of murder. This honor Miss Pugh accepts with the same unassuming frankness that characterized her conduct in the defense of Leroy Poindexter, the negro, whom she saved from the electric chair.

Thanks to the skill with which Miss Pugh handled the case the first jury disagreed, and at the second trial she literally tore to pieces some of the most damaging evidence of the prosecution,—testimony that had been amassed by the District Attorney's staff. For thirty-three hours consecutively, without sleep or rest, this case occupied the attention of the second jury, which finally rendered a reduced verdict of manslaughter in the second degree.

Lucille Pugh

As soon as she was assigned to the case, Miss Pugh began to collect the evidence necessary to break down the overwhelming testimony against her client. This entailed visits absolutely unattended to some of the most notorious dens of the Underworld, notably in Hell's Kitchen, where gambling, drinking and vice are rampant, and there is small respect for the forces of law or order.

When trying her now famous case, Miss Pugh made a rememberable picture. Standing but an inch over five feet her auburn hair parted at the side and drawn tightly around her shapely head, her brown eyes glancing from the tense face of the accused negro to the jury of twelve white men, her right hand outstretched in an appealing manner toward them, her left indicating the prisoner, she subtly sought to force into the minds of her hearers the innocence of the man she was defending. One of the best known court officials, who has attended for the last twenty years all the notable criminal trials in New York, stated that in his opinion, her defense was the most capable he had ever heard.

To meet Miss Pugh in her own drawing room comes as a surprise, as it is hard to realize that the tastefully gowned, almost girlish woman has already established herself so firmly in her overcrowded profession.

Woman Contractor Wins Out

IT pays to be absorbed in one's work. Which explains, perhaps, why the great majority of women in the business world earn considerably less than a thousand dollars a year. Business is not to them a career, as it is to a man. There are brilliant exceptions, of course. Miss Alice M. Durkin New York's only woman contractor, is one of them. She has thrown herself, heart and soul, into the building trade, and in four years has made a quarter of a million dollars.

She started without the advantage of specialized training. Her father was supposed to be a wealthy man, and the accomplishments of polite society were the only ones she acquired. After his death, however, when she was eighteen years old, it was learned that his affairs were in a chaotic state. His estate was so burdened with debt that there was nothing left for her.

Miss Durkin faced the world as a self-supporting woman, and with characteristic energy she applied for work in all quarters and accepted the first position that was offered to her. It happened to be a clerkship in a contractor's office. Resolved to make the best of a bad bargain, she buckled down to work, and discovered to her surprise that instead of being bored she was becoming more interested each day.

She saw a great light. Her position thereafter became an apprenticeship, not a disagreeable means of earning her bread and butter. She was going to be a real contractor, just as soon as she had mastered the essential details. A gift for mathematics helped her from the start. She familiarized herself with the cost of building materials and labor, and was soon able to make a shrewd estimate on any job that came into the office. Her employers, observing this, were glad to confide more and more important matters to her care.

Yet it was eight years before she felt herself to be sufficiently experienced to make an independent venture. She then accepted a partnership in a new concern, and although mere men held the principal offices and took the credit, the big constructive work was immediately laid upon her shoulders.

Miss Durkin was aware of this, but she bided her time. When after a few months she had placed the company fairly on its feet, she took control and reorganized it under her own name. One of her former superintendents became her partner, and with him to attend to outside work she gave her whole attention to figuring on contracts and giving the master touch to all plans and specifications prepared in her office.

That was less than five years ago. Today Miss Alice M. Durkin is one of the most successful women of affairs in America. Her contracts aggregate hundreds of thousands of dollars every year. She gives employment to about seven hundred men and maintains a large suite of offices.

"A capacity for mastering details," is her own explanation of her success. It has been said that no woman really possesses such capacity to a high degree. But Miss Durkin ought to know. She can point in proof to that quarter of a million dollars of clear profits. There are not many male contractors who have been as well rewarded.

What a Policewoman Does

MISS EMILE GLORIEUX, police-woman of Minneapolis, Minn., has just completed the first year of her work. She operates under the direction of the Humane Society.

She makes the rounds of the dance halls of Minneapolis and sees that minors are not admitted and that no liquor is sold and that in other respects the places are conducted respectably. During her first six months as a cop she compelled the closing of five dance halls, the arrest and fining of eight dance hall managers and the rescue of seventeen girls.

Miss Glorieux has kept her eyes open for girls who are liable to go astray in a large city. By friendly counsel, by taking them home to dinner once in a while, and helping at other times when a little aid may turn a girl from one path to another, this policewoman has laid aside the dignity of the law and become a woman to a woman in the labor of salvation.

To remove ink stains from mahogany furniture, put a few drops of spirits of nitre into a teaspoonful of water; touch the spot with a feather dipped in the fluid and the ink will disappear.—E. F., Neodesha, Kan.

When mending broken china stand it to "set" in a large box of sawdust. By so doing the article can be placed in any desired position, its own weight holding the piece steady while the cement is hardening.—S. C., Providence, R. I.

Sandwiches which are not to be used for some hours afterwards should be placed in an earthen receptacle tightly covered. Set the vessel in a pan of cold water and the sandwiches will keep moist and fresh for hours.—S. C. Providence, R. I.

When a glass cutter is not available take a file and mark the glass in the desired shape. Then lay a piece of common wrapping twine, which has been soaked in coal oil, along this line and stand the glass up edgewise, then set fire to the twine and the heat will break the glass where it is marked.—M. C., Providence, R. I.

An ordinary five-cent fire shovel, with its sides flattened out, is a splendid device for lifting pans, etc., to and from the oven. This will obviate the necessity of handling them and will prevent many burns.

When washing dainty lingeries, a few lumps of sugar dropped in the rinse water, to take the place of the usual starching, will make them beautiful after they are ironed.—Mrs. M. M., Newport, Ky.

A successful way to keep your neighbor's hens from scratching up your flowers is to spread on the ground, close to the rows or clumps of plants, strips of heavy paper, through which at close intervals, carpet tacks have been pushed up to the head. The paper is laid with the tacks pointing up, of course, with pieces of stone or brick on its edges to keep from blowing.—M. C., Providence, R. I.

For scorched linen try the following: From four peeled onions extract the juice, mix this with four ounces of fuller's earth, one ounce of soap and a pint of vinegar. Boil well together; when nearly cold put on the scorched places and let dry in the air. Wash in cold water. —E. M., Cincinnati, Ohio.

After washing the hair, a good way to thoroughly rinse it is to fill a common tin flower sprinkling can with water and suspend on a nail or hook above the head over the bathtub. The water comes with just force enough to rinse and the sprinkler can be filled as often as necessary.—J. B. S., Richmond, Ky.

After washing woolen blankets, dry them on curtain stretchers which will prevent them from shrinking.—Mrs. L.

A handy little dish washer for the milk bottle, etc., too narrow for the hand and cloth, is made from the wire handle of a grape basket, which is straightened out, with the hook left on one end.—H. H. G., Arcade, N. Y.

Instead of the ordinary method that is used for removing rust stains, try the lemon juice and salt as usual, but place over a steaming kettle. The rust spots will be removed in a few moments.—H. E. K., Los Angeles, Cal.

Before removing ribbon from lingerie, etc., sew tape—the same length—to one end of the ribbon. In drawing the ribbon out the tape takes its place. When the ribbon goes back again, sew it to the end of the tape and the tedious task of drawing the ribbon through in the old way is removed.—A. E. P., Collins, N.Y.

A simple and splendid filling for pin cushions can be made of dried coffee grounds which do not pack down and never rust the needles.

Butter and sugar to be creamed for cake or hard sauce can quickly be reduced to the right consistency by the aid of a wooden potato masher. First warm the mixing bowl before putting in the ingredients, then mash and the result is a light creamy mass with half the usual labor.—J. A. D., South Omaha, Neb.

An excellent way to clean a hairbrush is to take one-half cupful of salt and flour in equal proportions, mix and rub through the bristles of the brush two or three times. Shake the mixture all out and the brush will be clean as new. This is better than washing the brush, for it does not soften the bristles.—J. A. D., South Omaha, Neb.

To rid canaries of the parasites which affect them, place a clean white cloth over the cage at night. In the morning it will be covered with very minute red spots, almost invisible without a microscope, which are the vermin so annoying and fatal to birds. Burn the cloth and repeat if necessary.—J. A. D., South Omaha, Neb.

A sure way to remove ink stains from wash materials is to pour a tablespoonful of kerosene on the spots and rub well. Rinse in kerosene and the spots will disappear as if by magic. This should be done before the regulation washing.—S. C., Providence, R. I.

The Tango dancing slipper, which has become so popular, is a difficult thing to keep on the feet because the ribbon is bound to slip down. A way to prevent this is to work a loop with silk twist (buttonhole stitch) the same shade of the slippers, on the stocking where the ribbon is to be tied. The ribbon drawn through this loop, which should be about the width of the ribbon, will remain in place and cause no further annoyance. —F. H., N. Y. City.

Summer and Winter Postage Stamps

SOMETIMES you take precautions to place a few postage stamps inside a note book, where you would think they could not possibly stick together by carrying the book in your pocket, because there seems to be too much thickness for the body heat to penetrate, and yet you discover them, perhaps only a few hours later, stuck so firmly together that they are spoiled.

Then again, you may carry postage stamps about for many days or weeks and they never stick together. And the explanation of this is that the stamps that stick are probably "winter" stamps. This is because the government makes three brands of postage stamps, "summer," "winter" and "intermediate." The intermediate stamps are supposed to be used during the spring and fall, or during the seasons when it is neither extremely cold or excessively hot.

This does not mean that the Government Printing Department makes these stamps with any different design or color. The seasonable part of stamps is all in the glue, or gum, that is used to back them. For the summer sale the gum used is slightly harder than for the other sort. This is so it will not melt as readily with body heat or room heat, and is intended to assist in preventing them sticking together.

In winter such hard gum is not necessary, and again, too hard gum in the cold months will frequently crack right through the paper of the stamp, spoiling it. And so a thinner, lighter gum is used, which is more pliable, not so apt to crack with the cold and is better all around. Of course, for spring and autumn the intermediate grade of gum is used, of a consistency between the hard of summer and the thin of winter.

Immigration After the War

By Frederic C. Howe

Commissioner of Immigration at the Port of New York

THE European War has nearly suspended immigration. There were 992,573 aliens admitted into the United States for the year ending June 30, 1914, while for the eight months of the present immigration year from July 1 to March 1 a total of only 177,963 aliens have come. Immigration is wholly suspended from the belligerent nations; it comes only from Scandinavia, Italy, Greece, Spain and Great Britain.

What will happen after the war? Will America receive hundreds of thousands of people, shattered and weakened by the war, undermined by disease and exposure, and impoverished by the ravaging armies? Will even the German and the French, who have contributed but little to our alien population in recent years flee from future military conscription and oppressive taxes? Or will the vacuum created by the destruction of millions of able-bodied men provide a market for everyone's labor and through rising wages and the re-building of the country retain the population at home?

Opinions differ. It is probable that conflicting currents will be set in motion and that those who predict a greatly increased immigration will find their opinions confirmed, and that with the re-building of Europe the tide will be ultimately checked and may in fact be reversed.

Undoubtedly tens of thousands of women and children, widowed and orphaned by the war, will turn their faces toward America as an escape from sorrow and misery. Europe will want men, not women. Europe will have a surplus of millions of women for whom no provision can be made in the industrial and social order. Many of these have relatives or friends in America to whom they will turn for assistance. And most of the immigration to America is assisted, not by foreign governments, but by immigrants already in America. They send tickets, transportation and money to friends and relatives in the old country and upon their arrival care for them until they find employment. Probably seventy per cent of those who land on our shores are assisted in this way; many of them have "show money" temporarily loaned for inspection by the immigration officials.

IN addition to the women and children it is not improbable that we will receive a greatly increased immigration from Russia, Poland, Austria and the Balkans and southeast Europe. It is probable that many Jews will come from Galicia and Poland, whose land has been devastated and cities destroyed by the contending armies. Jewish organizations are generous in their assistance to members of their own race, and the atrocities of the war will undoubtedly lead to an outpouring of racial sympathy which will bring many members of this race to our shores. Other influences will bring aliens from the south and east of Europe. These countries are relatively badly organized. Their internal affairs are not as efficiently managed as they are in Germany, Scandinavia and England. There is little industry and relatively few cities. The able-bodied men have been taken from the farm and the village. The work is now being done by women. There will be nothing to go back to when the war is over, and this part of Europe, devastated by war and disease and overrun by contending armies, will undoubtedly contribute a larger portion to the immigration of the immediate future than it has in the immediate past.

Still other psychological and moral forces will stimulate men to migrate. Possibly 15,000,000 men have been taken from the soil and from the factory. They have been dislodged from their traditional pursuits. Their homes have been broken up; their family ties destroyed. For months they have been thrown on their own resources, living only with men and dependent as they never were before upon their own ingenuity and upon themselves. A roving, restless spirit will have been created. Men will be loath to return to the dull, barren, hopeless life of the great estates; to the low wages and long hours of the mine, the mill and the factory. They will have lost the habit of industry; they will have little taste for work. Many of them will not want to go back to their families from whom they have been so long divorced. Thousands of men, possibly hundreds of thousands, will turn to America, partly from hope, partly with a restless desire to continue a freer life than they had previously enjoyed. They will crave a continuation of the excitement under which they have lived at the front and in the trenches, an excitement not to be obtained at home.

THIS will apply to all nations, German, French and English. Undoubtedly we will have a great addition to our population from the soldier class.

These are some of the forces which will stimulate immigration. But against those weakened by disease or other physical defects the existing laws are reasonably adequate to protect us. For we now refuse to admit the sick, the infirm, those afflicted with contagious disease, imbeciles, and those likely to become a public charge—and the latter class is by far the largest—while the interpretation of the law is sufficiently elastic to protect the country from those who have no visible means of support and no friends able to guarantee them a livelihood.

On the other hand, other forces will tend to keep the immigrant at home; forces in many ways as strong as those which drive him into this country. Germany has carried State socialism further than any country in the world. She owns her railroads, telegraphs, many mines, forests, and hundreds of thousands of acres of agricultural lands. More than 3,000,000 men are constantly employed in the State service. All of the traditions of the country favor State socialism. And with her efficient methods, Germany will undoubtedly carry State socialism very much further. England, France, Austria and Russia will find it necessary to rebuild the State, to repair the ravages of war, to erect mills and factories, and regain the lost trade which the war has destroyed.

ALL these countries will endeavor to keep their able-bodied at home. They will enact social legislation, enter upon schemes of State activity to provide employment and save the country from further impairment in the struggle for industrial and commercial place, which will be immediately substituted for the warfare of arms. The vacuum caused by the loss of millions of men will bring about an increase in wages. Automatically men will be kept at home by the opportunities which there prevail. It may be that wages will rise so high that able-bodied immigration will entirely cease. It is possible that the aliens already in this country may be lured back in large numbers to their native lands. Under ordinary circumstances something like 300,000 immigrants leave America every year to return, either temporarily or permanently, to the country of their birth. They come to America to accumulate a little competence with which they acquire a homestead or a little business in their native village. And the lure of high wages and better industrial conditions may accelerate this movement and lure from America hundreds of thousands of those dissatisfied with what they have found in this country to re-establish themselves in their own homes. Undoubtedly, the process of nation building will check emigration, especially from Germany and England, which countries are far better organized politically and industrially than the other nations of Europe.

Margaret of New Orleans

By L. G. Randall

A YOUNG girl, on her first visit to New Orleans, stood beside her mother gazing with deep interest at a beautiful white marble statue—the work of a great sculptor. The statue represents a woman seated in a low chair with one arm thrown caressingly around the shoulders of a little child who looks up at her lovingly and trustingly. The woman is poorly dressed. Inscribed on the base of the statue is the one word "Margaret."

"Who was Margaret and what did she do?" asked the young girl.

"Margaret," replied her mother, "was a most remarkable woman who came here a stranger—an unlettered Irish woman who could read but little and was not able to write at all. She could not tell the date of her birth and her will was signed with a cross. Yet so famous did she become that within a few short years after her death the statue was unveiled to her memory—the first erected in this country in honor of a woman."

"When almost an infant," continued the mother, "she landed with her father and mother in Baltimore. A few years later both parents died and Margaret was brought up by a friend of her mother's, who, while good to her in many ways, evidently never sent her to school. As soon as she was old enough she went to work in a hotel as a waitress. Living in this hotel was a gentleman named Haughery, who became attached to Margaret and married her.

"Soon afterward Margaret and her husband came to New Orleans, where a few months later her husband died and Margaret, for the second time, was left alone and penniless. She found work in a laundry where she toiled for almost two years. With the money she saved from her wages she bought a few cows and started a small dairy. Customers were plentiful, for it soon became known that the milk bought from Margaret was just what she represented it to be.

"So successful was her dairy that she was able to save a few hundred dollars. This money she loaned to a friend who owned a small bakery. The friend failed and in order to get back her money, Margaret had to take charge of the bakery. At first this store seemed too much of an undertaking, for she knew nothing about a bakery. But she did not allow herself to become discouraged, and in a short time her bakery grew till it became the largest in the city. As her income increased, her charities also increased. The orphan asylums in New Orleans, Jewish, Catholic and Protestant alike were supplied with all the bread they needed at a nominal price.

"During the Civil War when the price of flour was almost prohibitive, Margaret gave generously to the poor. She fed the soldiers of both sides freely for it was a part of her nature to make no distinctions. Often in one day she gave away as many as fifteen hundred loaves of bread.

"It was her custom each year, when settling her accounts, to divide equally among the charitable institutions of New Orleans whatever profits had accumulated. She seemed to have no desire to grow rich, preferring to see the good that her money might accomplish. When she died, thirty years ago, the entire city—rich and poor alike—united to do honor to her memory."

Alimony for Husbands?

IN THE PAGEANT of divorce in the United States there is one division that has been overlooked, except by the eagle-eyed watchers of the Bureau of the Census. It is composed of men whose divorced wives pay them alimony. The statistics cover the period between 1887 and 1906 and show that in that time 8,999 husbands who sued for divorce asked for alimony. In 6,354 cases the courts granted the prayer.

It is an everyday occurrence for the aggrieved wife to ask for alimony, and more than seventy-two per cent. of these requests are successful. The man who asks for alimony is but a shade less successful. The figures show that twenty-eight out of every thousand of male seekers after the detached life demanded alimony from their better-off halves, and that twenty out of every thousand got it. The men's percentage, therefore, is a little better than seventy, which is but two per cent. less than the women's.

The census report on marriage and divorce is silent regarding the amounts that husbands receive from their former wives upon whom they continue to depend, more or less, for bread and butter. Neither does it disclose the reasons why the men were allowed alimony

The cases are scattered all over the continental United States, with the exception of Delaware and South Carolina. In Delaware six husbands asked for alimony in the two decades, but the court turned a deaf ear. In South Carolina all laws permitting divorce were repealed in 1878.

The North Central Division, in which nearly half of all the divorces in the entire United States were granted, has a little more than seventy per cent. of the husbands who draw alimony. This division comprises the following States with the number of wife-supported ex-husbands as indicated: Ohio, 673; Wisconsin, 566; Illinois, 523; Kansas, 475; Indiana, 453; Michigan, 443; Iowa, 432; Missouri, 328; Nebraska, 243; Minnesota, 140; South Dakota, 123; North Dakota, 107.

THE first nine States in this list not only are at the head of the column in their own division, but occupy the same order in the whole United States. The census experts say that the variations between different sections of the country must be accounted for by the composition of population as regards race or nationality, the proportion of immigrants in the total population and the countries from which they came; the relative strength of the prevailing religions; the variations in divorce laws and in the procedure and practice of the courts granting divorce; and the interstate migration of population, either for the purpose of obtaining divorce or other reasons.

The South Atlantic States have only 178 dependent ex-husbands on record. The North Atlantic Division, which includes the oldest and some of the richest States in the Union, is next to the lowest in the regional list. Massachusett's 107 alimony-receiving husbands is the largest number in this section, and New York has only 61.

The South Central Division of States has a total of 744 of these ungallant spouses who have found matrimony a failure in other ways than financially. The Western States come next. Nevada, with its divorce-industrious and much advertised Reno, ranks statistically with staid old Massachusetts.

A typical case of the husband asking for alimony recently came up in one of the New York City courts. The husband, fifty-eight years old, applied for an allowance of twenty-five dollars a week from his wife, from whom he had secured a separation after having been married four years. He based his plea on an alleged ante-nuptial agreement by which his wife had promised to provide him with an income of $5,500 a year,.

The judge denied the motion for alimony, giving it as his opinion, as a matter of common law, that while the husband was obliged to support his wife, similar maintenance of the husband by the wife was not a reciprocal obligation.

One and all subjected themselves to the search

THE scene invited alarm,—that is, for a young girl surveying it from an automobile sometime after the stroke of midnight. An unknown house at the end of a heavily shaded walk, in the open doorway of which could be seen the silhouette of a woman leaning eagerly forward with arms outstretched in an appeal for help! It vanished while she looked, but the effect remained, holding her to her seat for one startled moment. This seemed strange, for she had anticipated adventure. One is not summoned from a private ball to ride a dozen miles into the country on an errand of investigation, without some expectation of encountering the mysterious and the tragic. But Violet Strange was young, and for the instant in which that door stood open, with only the memory of that expectant figure to disturb the faintly lit vista of the hall beyond, she felt that grip upon the throat which comes from an indefinable fear which no words can explain and no plummet sound.

But this soon passed. With the setting of her foot to ground, conditions changed and her emotions took on a more normal character. She could now see the figure of a man in the place held by the vanished woman, and he was not only one she knew, but one with whom she was familiar,—a friend whose very presence gave her courage. With this recognition, came a better understanding of the situation, and it was with a beaming eye and unclouded features that she tripped up the walk to meet the expectant figure and outstretched hand of Roger Upham — a former client.

"You here!" she exclaimed, as he drew her into the hall.

He at once launched forth into explanations mingled with apologies for the presumption he had shown in putting her to this inconvenience. There was trouble in the house—great trouble. Something had occurred for which an explanation must be found before morning, or the happiness and honor of more than one person now under this unhappy roof would be wrecked. He knew it was late—that she had been obliged to take a long and dreary ride alone, but her success with the problem which had once come near wrecking his own life, had emboldened him to telephone to the office and ——"But you are in ball-dress," he cried in amazement. "Did you think——"

"I came from a ball. Word reached me between the dances. I did not go home. I had been bidden to hurry."

He looked his appreciation, but when he spoke it was to say:

"This is the situation. Miss Digby——"

"The lady who is to be married tomorrow?"

"Who hopes to be married tomorrow."

"How, hopes?"

"Who will be married tomorrow, if a certain article lost in this house tonight can be found before any of the persons who have been dining here leave for their homes."

Violet uttered an exclamation.

"Then, Mr. Cornell," she began——

"Mr. Cornell has our utmost confidence," Roger hastened to interpose. "But the article missing is one which he might reasonably desire to possess and which he alone of all present had the opportunity of securing. You can therefore see why he, with his pride—the pride of a man not rich, engaged to marry a woman who is, should declare that unless his innocence is established before daybreak, the doors of St. Bartholomew will remain shut tomorrow."

"But the article lost—what is it?"

Violet Strange arrived at midnight

"Miss Digby will give you the particulars. She is waiting to receive you," he added with a gesture towards a half open door at their right.

Violet glanced that way, then cast her looks up and down the hall in which they stood.

"Do you know that you have not told me in whose house I am? Not hers, I know. She lives in the city."

"And you are twelve miles from Harlem. Miss Strange, you are in the Van Broecklyn mansion, famous enough you will acknowledge. Have you never been here before?"

"I have been by here, but I recognized nothing in the dark. What an exciting place for an investigation!"

"And Mr. Van Broecklyn? Have you never met him?"

"Once, when a child. He frightened me then."

"And may frighten you now; though I doubt it. Time has mellowed him. Besides, I have prepared him for what might otherwise occasion him some astonishment. Naturally he would not look for just the sort of lady investigator I am about to introduce to him."

She smiled. Violet Strange was a very charming young woman, as well as a keen prober of odd mysteries.

The meeting between herself and Miss Digby was a sympathetic one. After the first inevitable shock which the latter felt at the sight of the beauty and fashionable appearance of the mysterious little being who was to solve her difficulties, her glance which, under other circumstances, might have lingered unduly upon the piquant features and exquisite dressing of the fairy-like figure before her, passed at once to Violet's eyes. In their steady depths beamed an intelligence quite at odds with the coquettish dimples which so often misled the casual observer in his estimation of a character singularly subtle and well-poised.

As for the impression she herself made upon Violet, it was the same she made upon everyone. No one could look long at Florence Digby and not recognize the loftiness of her spirit and the generous nature of her impulses.

Meantime, for all her interest in the case in hand, Violet could not help casting a hurried look about her, in gratification of the curiosity incited by her entrance into a house signalized from its foundation by such a series of tragic events. The result was disappointing. The walls were plain, the furniture simple. Nothing suggestive in either, unless it was the fact that nothing was new, nothing modern. As it looked in the days of Burr and Hamilton so it looked today, even to the rather startling detail of candles which did duty on every side in place of gas.

As Violet recalled the reason for this, the fascination of the past seized upon her imagination. There was no knowing where this might have carried her, had not the feverish gleam in Miss Digby's eyes warned her that the present held its own excitement. Instantly, she was all attention and listening to that lady's disclosures.

They were brief and to the following effect:

The dinner which had brought some half dozen people together in this house, had been given in celebration of her impending marriage. But it was also in a way meant as a compliment to one of the other guests, a Mr. Spielhagen who, during the week, had succeeded in demonstrating to a few experts the value of a discovery he had made which would transform a great industry.

IN speaking of this discovery, Miss Digby did not go into particulars, the whole matter being far beyond her understanding; but in stating its value she openly acknowledged that it was in the line of Mr. Cornell's own work, and one which involved calculations and a formula which, if prematurely disclosed, would invalidate the contract Mr. Spielhagen hoped to make, and thus destroy his present hopes.

Of this formula but two copies existed. One was locked up in a safe deposit vault in Boston, the other he had brought into the house on his person, and it was the latter which was now missing, it having been abstracted during the evening from a manuscript of sixteen or more sheets, under circumstances which she would now endeavor to relate.

Mr. Van Broecklyn, their host, had in his melancholy life but one interest which could be called at all absorbing. This was for explosives. As a consequence, much of the talk at the dinner-table had been on Mr. Spielhagen's discovery, and the possible changes it might introduce into this especial industry. As these, worked out from a formula kept secret from the trade, could not but affect greatly Mr. Cornell's interests, she found herself listening intently, when Mr. Van Broecklyn, with an apology for his interference, ventured to remark that if Mr. Spielhagen had made a valuable discovery in this line, so had he, and one which he had substantiated by many experiments. It was not a marketable one, such as Mr. Spielhagen's was, but in his work upon the same, and in the tests which he had been led to make, he had discovered certain instances he would gladly name, which demanded exceptional procedure to be successful. If Mr. Spielhagen's method did not only allow for these exceptions, but make suitable provision for them, then Mr. Spielhagen's method would fail more times than it would succeed. Did it so allow and so provide?

Backlog Days—The Spelling Bee

When the lines were formed, the Professor would begin pronouncing. He would give the children easy words, and they'd never know they weren't spelling right along with the best of them.

The words were easy at first, but pretty soon they'd begin to get hard. He'd start in with dozen, but soon he'd be up to viscid and sieve. Sieve looks easy in print but you just turn around and ask somebody how to spell it and see how many times he has to wet his lips. Do you remember how one school teacher taught you how to remember whether the e or the i came first? Yes, you do—think a minute. Don't you remember he said that a sieve and a sifter were about the same thing and that both started off with the same letters—si?

You couldn't let your mind wander at all in a spelling contest. If one person missed a word, you'd know that wasn't the way to spell it and could fix it around some other way.

THE Professor would give out long words for awhile, then all of a sudden change to catch words.

"Nice," the Professor would say, "a kind of rock."

Do you remember how you would spell nice—a kind of rock? Think a minute. It was one of those catch words, you know. Why g-n-e-i-s-s. I'll bet Webster laughed when he put that one in.

The Professor just gave out those short ones to catch you off guard; he knew that you would study up on the long ones and so he gave out the catch ones. After you had got so that you could rattle off daguerreotype and honorificabilitudinitibus, he would give out cacique. Honorif, —you pronounce it yourself—was a jawbreaker, wasn't it? When you said it fast it was like a marble rolling down stairs. It was just as hard to say three times in succession as any tongue twister, like a rat ran over the roof of the house with a lump of raw liver in its mouth. Well, if you think that is so easy to say just rattle it off a couple of times right fast [illegible] there, what kind of lump did you say? I'll bet Demosthenes never tried to say a rat ran over a roof of a house with a lump of raw liver in its mouth, or he'd never have gone down to the ocean and used the pebbles.

The short words were the worst. When the Professor pronounced it, how in the world was a person to tell nee-mon-icks, a system of memory training, began with an m? Not one person in a thousand would know that it was spelled mnemonics.

One by one they would go down and you would hold your breath till he gave out your word for fear that it would be an awful one. You tried to let on as though you were not worrying about your word, but you were all the time and what a sigh of relief you gave when the Professor went on. And think after all your weeks of studying and getting prepared on all the long ones that you should go down on gauze. You might have known that the a came first—but it's always easy to have might-have-known things when it's too late.

You don't think much about such a word when you are writing a letter when, if you get stuck, you can write it on the corner of an old envelope and see if it looks right, but when you go to spell it before a whole hall full of people you'd give anything if they'd let you have an old envelope and a stub pencil for a moment.

Every time around, there would be a mowing down. A lot of the people you thought would stand up longest were about the first ones to go, and people you'd never paid much attention to or thought about, it just seemed that the Professor couldn't find words to down them. Did you ever notice how quick preachers are to go down. You'd naturally think that Webster would have a hard time sending them to their seats, but instead of that they'd be about the first ones to go, but always before they got the gate they would have to stop and argue and explain how in the biblical sense it was spelled that way.

You could come mighty near telling what kind of a fellow a man was by the way he took being spelled down. Some of them would slink over to their seats as if they were ashamed and wished that they had studied harder, while others would stamp over swinging their hands as if they hadn't been given a fair show.

DIDN'T Arch Purdy make you laugh when he'd go down—he'd always pretend that he didn't understand the word while he was thinking and then he'd twist up one eye and hist up one shoulder as if he wished that he could just get his hands on it once and then drag out the letters till you'd think he'd never get through. When he'd miss the word, he'd go wobbling over to his seat, shaking his head as if it had been the Professor's fault.

Mr. Greensfelder was just opposite to Arch Purdy. Mr. Greensfelder was a little wisp of a man with a way of resting one thumb in his vest pocket. When the word was given out to him, he'd stand there looking straight ahead without moving a muscle, except batting his eyes. The harder he would think the faster they would work. He'd open his mouth then give it up; his tongue would lash out at his lips and his eyes would flitter faster than ever. Then out would come the crisp, crinkly words, like stepping on a basket, and when he was through his mouth would close up as if the trigger had been touched.

The first thing you knew everybody would be mowed down except Harvey Clark and Judge Slingerland, the two old pioneers who had gone through more spelling contests than any other two in the county. When the Professor would give out a word everybody would lean forward and nod at each letter. And when the speller went wrong everybody would gasp and if he was watching close enough he could correct before the Professor said "Next!" It was exciting!

When big, ponderous Harvey Clark spelled a word he went at it slowly and deliberately as if he were delivering an appreciation at a Woodman funeral and when he got through you would put his way up against the spelling-books. One lip-sprainer after another would be rattled off until it seemed that the two men could never be spelled down. You'd have thought they'd have missed beryllium, wouldn't you—but they didn't.

The Professor began to get worried and began turning nervously through the book afraid that he couldn't find a word that would down them.

"Fuchsia, a kind of flowering plant," he pronounced. That seemed so easy in comparison to ecumenical, desiccation—do you remember those two c's—and others that they were rolling off that you sort of took your mind off it for a moment when it happened—when Harvey Clark spelled it f-u-s-h-i-a.

"Next!" said the Professor before you knew what was happening.

Everybody in the hall straightened up —and such a common word, too. Why, everybody had them in the yard!

"I must not have understood the word," defended Harvey Clark. "I thought you meant a small flowering plant."

"I did," said the Professor. "Next."

THE Slingerland supporters nodded their heads with approval and turned expectantly to Judge Slingerland. But there was a worried look on the Judge's face—he was not exactly sure about the word.

"Will you pronounce the word again?" asked the Judge, reaching for the back of his coat, making use of every moment of gained time by bringing his brows together in deep furrows.

"F-u—" spelled the Judge while his followers nodded off the words.

The next letter was the pivot.

"—s-c-h-i-a," he added.

"Wrong," cut in the Professor. "There is no s in the first syllable—f-u-c-h-s-i-a. The match is a tie."

Say, didn't that bring them down? Do you remember how everybody clapped and cheered and how happy old Mr. Greensfelder looked now that he wouldn't have to give the watch for another year—the watch that was real gold as long as it wasn't around sulphur? I guess it was exciting with everybody talking and laughing and calling out perfectly useless questions to Harvey Clark and the Judge just to show that they knew them—why, you couldn't find anything that was more exciting! It's too bad they don't have such good times any more.

Yes, the Effect IS Beautiful. I Can Keep the Walls and Ceilings Spotless. They're Finished in

UPSON PROCESSED BOARD

You've no idea what a difference Upson Board will make not only in your bedroom—but in every room in your house. Upson Board makes artistically beautiful and sanitary walls and ceilings. You can keep them spotlessly clean by wiping them off with a damp cloth just as you do ordinary woodwork.

The wood-like panels of Upson Board—hard, tough, and rigid—take the place of plaster and wall paper. Nail Upson Board over the old cracked plaster or directly over the studding and joists. Paint it in soft, rich tones and you have beautiful, harmonious walls and ceilings that can never crack, chip, or fall. The panels can be made inconspicuous or artistically contrastive.

Do not accept an inferior substitute for Upson Processed Board. It possesses every good quality of other boards and five vitally important, exclusive features of its own. It is hard and tough—much like pine lumber. Each panel is scientifically processed by the original Upson method—KILN CURED to minimize shrinkage and expansion—WATERPROOFED so that ordinary leaks will not affect it—SURFACE FILLED to save you the expense of the priming coat required by soft, spongy, absorbent boards. You save at least $5.00 per room on this priming coat alone. Most fibre boards, because soft and absorbent, soak up paint like blotting paper and therefore require at least two or three and often four coats in addition to the priming coat. One coat of paint will often finish Upson Board smoothly and evenly, while two will always do it. This means another saving of at least $5 per room.

If there is no Upson dealer near you we will make it easy to buy direct.

it would relieve him greatly to learn that it did.

The answer came quickly. Yes it did. But later and after some further conversation, Mr. Spielhagen's confidence seemed to wane, and before they left the dinner-table, he openly declared his intention of looking over his manuscript again that very night, in order to be sure that the formula therein contained duly covered all the exceptions mentioned by Mr. Van Broecklyn.

If Mr. Cornell's countenance showed any change at this moment, she for one had not noticed it; but the bitterness with which he remarked upon the other's good fortune in having discovered this formula, of whose entire success he had no doubt, was apparent to everybody, and naturally gave point to the circumstances which a short time afterward associated him with the disappearance of the same.

The ladies (there were two others besides herself) having withdrawn in a body to the music-room, the gentlemen all proceeded to Mr. Van Broecklyn's especial room to smoke. Here, conversation, loosed from the one topic which had hitherto engrossed it, was proceeding briskly, when Mr. Spielhagen, with a nervous gesture, impulsively looked about him and said:

"I cannot rest till I have run through my thesis again. Where can I find a quiet spot? I won't be long; I read very rapidly."

It was for Mr. Van Broecklyn to answer, but no word coming from him, every eye turned his way, only to find him sunk in one of those fits of abstraction so well known to his friends, and from which no one who has this strange man's peace of mind at heart, ever presumes to rouse him.

What was to be done? These moods of their singular host sometimes lasted half an hour, and Mr. Spielhagen had not the appearance of a man of patience. Indeed he presently gave proof of the great uneasiness he was laboring under, for noticing a door standing ajar on the other side of the room, he remarked to those around him:

"A den! and lighted! Do you see any objection to my shutting myself in there for a few minutes?"

No one venturing to reply, he rose and giving a slight push to the door, disclosed a small room exquisitely panelled and brightly lighted, but without one article of furniture in it, not even a chair.

"The very place," quoth Mr. Spielhagen, and lifting a light cane-bottomed chair from the many standing about, he carried it inside and shut the door behind him.

Several minutes passed during which the man who. had served at table entered with a tray on which were several small glasses evidently containing some choice liqueur. Finding his master fixed in one of his strange moods, he sat the tray down and, pointing to one of the glasses, said:

"That is for Mr. Van Broecklyn. It contains his usual quieting powder." And urging the gentlemen to help themselves, he quietly left the room.

Mr. Upham lifted the glass nearest him, and Mr. Cornell seemed about to do the same when he suddenly reached forward and catching up one further off, started for the room in which Mr. Spielhagen had so deliberately secluded himself.

WHY he did all this—why, above all things, he should reach across the tray for a glass instead of taking the one under his hand, he can no more explain than why he has followed many another unhappy impulse. Nor did he understand the nervous start given by Mr. Spielhagen at his entrance, or the stare with which that gentleman took the glass from his hand and mechanically drank its contents, till he saw how his hand had stretched itself across the sheet of paper he was reading, in an open attempt to hide the lines visible between his fingers. Then indeed the intruder flushed and withdrew in great embarrassment, fully conscious of his indiscretion but not deeply disturbed till Mr. Van Broecklyn, suddenly arousing and glancing down at the tray placed very near his hand, remarked in some surprise: "Dobbs seems to have forgotten me." Then indeed, the unfortunate Mr. Cornell realized what he had done. It was the glass intended for his host which he had caught up and carried into the other room—the glass which he had been told contained a drug. Of what a folly he had been guilty, and how tame would be any effort at excuse!

Attempting none, he rose and with a hurried glance at Mr. Upham, who flushed in sympathy at his distress, he crossed to the door he had so lately closed upon Mr. Spielhagen. But feeling his shoulder touched as his hand pressed the knob, he turned to meet the eye of Mr. Van Broecklyn fixed on his with an expression which utterly confounded him.

"Where are you going?" that gentleman asked.

The questioning tone, the severe look, expressive at once of displeasure and astonishment, were most disconcerting, but Mr. Cornell managed to stammer forth:

"Mr. Spielhagen is in here consulting his thesis. When your man brought in the cordial, I was awkward enough to catch up your glass and carry it in to Mr. Spielhagen. He drank it and I—I am anxious to see if it did him any harm."

As he uttered the last word he felt Mr. Van Broecklyn's hand slip from his shoulder, but no word accompanied the action; nor did his host make the least move to follow him into the room.

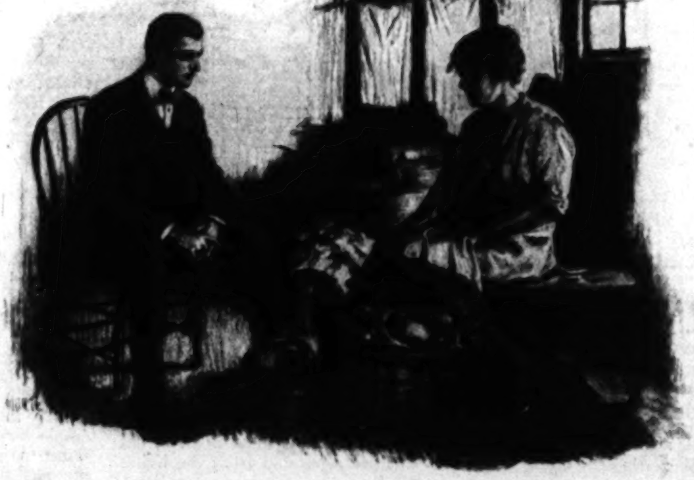
THE MYSTERIOUS MRS. OSGOOD

BY BURTON KLINE

Illustration By Monte Crews



"You see, my Edward is different from most boys," she went on

I HAD gone to R—— to superintend the building of a school that we had designed. It is easy to understand why that little city grows so rapidly. No one who goes there can leave without reluctance the cozy and contented air of the place, its magnificent sweep of Pennsylvania farmland, the winding Schuylkill River that girds it like a moat, and the two high hills outside the town beneath whose generous height all this beauty is spread like a Turner landscape. R—— is filled both with coin and with kindness. I had not been two days at the W—— Club when Richard Medway almost forcibly made me a guest in his house for the remainder of my stay.

Nevertheless, in my two months spent among those charming people, the notable experience was my meeting with Mrs. Osgood.

I think it was at the Medways' house that I first heard her name mentioned. Little 'Gene, the elder child, had achieved some difficult piece of unselfishness—the surrender of some inordinate apple to a younger brother—which her mother recounted in pride at dinner one evening. And the father's only comment was:

"Hm! Sounds like Mrs. Osgood."

Though I wondered at the moment who Mrs. Osgood might be, the lady might have left my mind, perhaps for good, but that I heard mention of her name soon again, and then again. She seemed to have a remarkable circle of acquaintances, high and low, and by all of them was held in the same peculiar esteem. No sooner had I forgotten her name than some one, somewhere, brought it back to mind. And always in an agreeable tone of deference. The second time I heard of Mrs. Osgood was, of all places, it seemed to me, at a merry party of young people.

"Why can't you go with me to see Sothern!" I heard one young fellow demand of the very prettiest girl. And evenings at the theatre in neighboring Philadelphia I could see were pleasures not lightly foregone in R——.

"My little sewing circle meets that evening," the young lady replied, in all finality.

And then came the comment that, being the second reference to this mysterious personage, stayed a little longer in my memory.

"Hm!" he replied, somewhat impatiently, "more self-denial, I see. You must be trying to copy Mrs. Osgood!"

And again I wondered who and what this Mrs. Osgood might be. Very evidently a woman of marked force of character, a standard of judgment to the old, a pattern of fidelity that was rather trying to the young. To the young man at the party her name was at least a pleasant substitute for swearing. It was remarkable, at any rate, the extent to which this woman had impressed herself upon the community.

After that I heard more frequent mention of Mrs. Osgood, or so it seemed to me—possibly because I was looking for it then.

At last one morning at the Medways' breakfast-table I asked, "Who, in heaven's name, is this Mrs. Osgood? or is she merely a figure of speech?"

"Mrs. Osgood?" laughed my hostess. "No; she's very much alive, the good soul. I am glad to see her reputation spread. But you shall see her and judge for yourself. She comes to our house on Monday."

"To dinner?" I ventured.

"Well—hardly to dinner," replied Mrs. Medway, "though I don't know why she shouldn't. But she sometimes gets here in time for breakfast."

"For breakfast? She's an old friend, then? A neighbor?"

"She does our washing," was the somewhat surprising response. I was, indeed, bewildered.

"Well, more than ever, who is Mrs. Osgood!" said I. "And how did she arrive at this tremendous vogue?"

"Mainly by being herself," my hostess said.

"Hm! I hope, for her own good, that she doesn't hear all that is said in her favor!"

"Her slight deafness helps her. . . . Deafness would help a good many more of us, I fancy," Mrs. Medway said—a very shrewd woman herself.

"Thanks!" said I, and we laughed.

And so, on the following Monday morning, I saw Mrs. Osgood. We passed each other on the front walk, both hurriedly on our way to work, and I had time for only a brief—and disappointing—glimpse. She was a rather plain, middle-aged woman, shabbily dressed, much bent from toil, and without any outward distinction. I was scarcely sure that I had seen the right and real Mrs. Osgood.

But in time I met her face to face. On a later occasion the Medways contrived for me to be alone with her in the laundry—I was introduced as a young architect engaged to plan some alterations.

"But manage to inquire about her son," Mrs. Medway had cautioned me.

Mrs. Osgood had unmistakable good sense. She offered excellent suggestions for the rearrangement of the tubs. And at length, when it was politic, I asked her about herself. She was nearly fifty, and for fourteen years she had scrubbed at the tub. In spite of this there was a vein of humor left in her still, and shrewd observations too. And so, finally, I ventured upon the vital question.

"And have you any children, Mrs. Osgood?"

"I have one son."

"And how is he?"

"He's been doing very well this past week—better than ever. He's coming right along," she replied. "And have you any children of your own?"

I told her I was not married.

"Ah, I hope you won't have to go through life without a boy of your own."

I assured her my hope was the same.

"And I hope yours gives you no more trouble than mine—none of the trouble that falls to so many parents. As for me," Mrs.

which made the house unique in the country's annals (of which more hereafter), all made an appeal to her imagination, and centered her thoughts on what she saw about her. There was a door which no man ever opened—had never opened since Revolutionary times—should she see it? Should she know it if she did see it? Then Mr. Van Broecklyn himself! Just to meet him, under any conditions and in any place, was an event. But to meet him here, under the pall of his own mystery! No wonder she had no words for her companions, or that her thoughts clung to this anticipation in wonder and almost fearsome delight.

His story was a well-known one. A bachelor and a misanthrope, he lived absolutely alone save for a large entourage of servants, all men and elderly ones at that. He never visited. Though he now and then, as on this occasion, entertained certain persons under his roof, he declined every invitation for himself, avoiding ever, with equal strictness, all evening amusements of whatever kind, which would detain him in the city after ten at night. Perhaps, this was to insure no break in his rule of life never to sleep out of his own bed. Though he was a man well over fifty he had spent, according to his own statement, but two nights out of his own bed since his return from Europe in early boyhood, and those were in obedience to a judicial summons which took him to Boston.

This was his main eccentricity, but he had another which is apparent enough from what has already been said. He avoided women. If thrown in with them during his short visits into town, he was invariably polite and at times companionable, but he never sought them out, nor had gossip, contrary to its usual habit, ever linked his name with one of the sex.

Yet he was a man of more than ordinary attraction. His features were fine and his figure impressive. He might have been the cynosure of all eyes had he chosen to enter crowded drawing-rooms or even to frequent public assemblages, but having turned his back upon everything of the kind in his youth, he had found it impossible to alter his habits with advancing years; nor was he now expected to. The position he had taken was respected. Leonard Van Broecklyn was no longer criticized.

Was there any explanation for this strangely self-centered life. Those who knew him best seemed to think so. In the first place he had sprung from an unfortunate stock. Events of an unusual and tragic nature had marked the family of both parents. Nor had his parents themselves been exempt from this seeming fatality. Antagonistic in tastes and temperament, they had dragged on an unhappy existence in the old home, till both natures rebelled, and a separation ensued which not only disunited their lives but sent them to opposite sides of the globe never to return again. At least, that was the inference drawn from the peculiar circumstances attending the event. On the morning of one never-to-be-forgotten day, John Van Broecklyn, the grandfather of the present representative of the family, found the following note from his son lying on the library table:

> "Father: Life in this house, or any house, with her is no longer endurable. One of us must go. The mother should not be separated from her child. Therefore it is I whom you will never see again. Forget me, but be considerate of her and the boy.—William."

Six hours later another note was found, this time from the wife:

> "Father: Tied to a rotting corpse what does one do? Lop off one's arm if necessary to rid one of the contact. As all love between your son and myself is dead, I can no longer live within the sound of his voice. As this is his home, he is the one to remain in it. May our child reap the benefit of his mother's loss and his father's affection.—Rhoda."

Both were gone, and gone forever. Simultaneous in their departure they preserved each his own silence and sent no word back. If the one went east and the other west, they may have met on the other side of the globe, but never again in the home which sheltered their boy. For him and for his grandfather they had sunk from sight in the great sea of humanity, leaving them stranded on an isolated and mournful shore. The grandfather steeled himself to the double loss for the child's sake; but the boy of eleven succumbed. Few of the world's great sufferers, of whatever age or condition, have mourned as this child mourned, or shown the effects of his grief so deeply or so long. Not till he had passed his majority did the line, carved in one day in his baby forehead, lose any of its intensity; and there are those who declare that even later than that, the midnight stillness of the house was disturbed from time to time, by his muffled shriek of "Mother! Mother!" sending the servants from the house, and adding one more horror to the many which clung about this accursed mansion.

Of this cry Violet had heard, and it was that and the door——But I have already told you about the door which she was still looking for, when her two companions suddenly halted, and she found herself on the threshold of the library, in full view of Mr. Van Broecklyn and his guests.

Slight and fairy-like in figure, with an air of modest reserve more in keeping with her youth and dainty dimpling beauty than with her errand, her appearance produced an astonishment which none of the gentlemen was able to disguise. This the clever detective, with a genius for social problems and odd elusive cases!—this darling of the ball-room in satin and pearls! Mr. Spielhagen glanced at Mr. Cornell, and Mr. Cornell at Mr. Spielhagen, and both at Mr. Upham, in very evident distrust. As for Violet, she had eyes only for Mr. Van Broecklyn who stood before her in a surprise equal to that of the others but with more restraint in its expression.

She was not disappointed in him. She had expected to see a man, reserved almost to the point of austerity. And she found her first look even more awe-compelling than her imagination had pictured; so much so, indeed, that her resolution faltered, and she took a quick step backward; which seeing, he smiled and her heart and hopes grew warm again. That he could smile, and smile with absolute sweetness, was her great comfort when later——But I am introducing you too hurriedly to the catastrophe.

A Snake-Bite at Close Range

IF YOU should be so unfortunate as to be bitten by a snake and were not quite certain what sort of a snake it was, whether poisonous or of the so-called harmless variety, look at the injury. If there are four punctures, or even three, the chances are that it was not a venomous snake; but if there are only two punctures it is probable you have been bitten by an extremely poisonous snake. While this does not always hold good, as a non-poisonous snake may have had opportunity to make only two incisions with his four biting teeth, it is best to take no chances at all.

The poisonous snake has but two deadly fangs—generally in the upper jaw. But, no matter what sort of a snake bites you, the head of that snake should, wherever possible, be kept for identification. If, as is generally the case, the bite is on an extremity, tie one or more ligatures—preferably of broad rubber bands—above the injury. Incise deeply, cutting across the puncture for at least one inch and well beyond the depth reached by the fang. Next, wash in running water, manipulating the part to promote free bleeding. If running water is not available, suck the wound, then rinse the mouth thoroughly with a solution of potassium permanganate. Now wash the wound well, and use in and around it the potassium permanganate solution; or inject a 1 to 100 solution of chromic acid, being careful to infiltrate completely, not only the wound, but also the surrounding tissues.

Do not give ammonia. Stimulate with small doses of whiskey, if indicated, but do not overdose, as more persons have been killed by taking large quantities of whiskey than by snake bite. When positively certain the poison has been removed from the wound, loosen cautiously the ligatures, that nearest the heart first, but do not remove them, so they may be again tightened if symptoms recur. In all cases the victim must have the best surgical care. The wound should be packed with antiseptic gauze.

The · PRACTICAL · SUMMER · HOME

Described by Jack Manley Rosé and Grace Norton Rosé

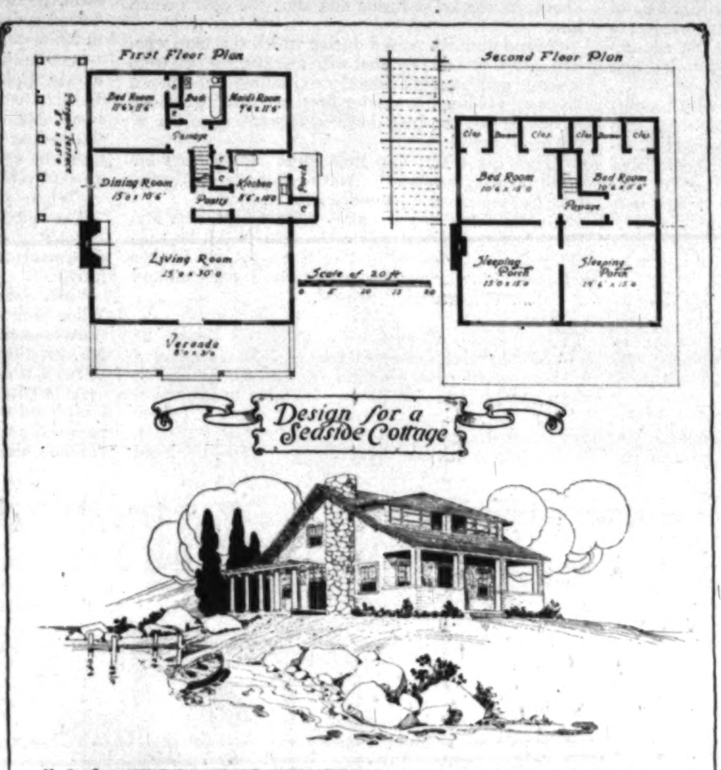
YOU won't go to Europe this summer, nor probably for some seasons to come. But where to go and how to live during those months that are so irksome in town and so restorative in the country or by the sea, is still an open question for many. Why not invest in a summer home, a sort of comfortablized camp, or a glorified bungalow, or a seaside cottage; one that won't need a corps of servants to run it, and yet one that comprises the fundamental comforts?

If you long for the sea when the city pavements are aglare with heat and the foliage of the parks is dulled with dust, you perhaps know of some sandy spit or breezy headland where the water looks bluer to you than anywhere else in the world. Here there is no question of breathless nights under the still faint stars so immeasurably distant from the blaze of light that gilds the humid streets. Here there are no gasping days of searching for the hot gritty stirring of air that is commonly called a breeze, and that brings with it all the sickening odors of a sweltering city. You will have air and wind, cool, strong, and bracing, be it the salty tang of a dripping sea fog, or the crystal clearness that is like a long cool drink to a dry dusty throat. You know the site you want, just the shade of that grey green beach grass against the dear familiar sky, the rare color of the shallows and the depths; stretches of wonderful blues, clear to the horizon where the big ships go by. Then there is that bit of warm sandy shore, where the kiddies play all day, their little rompers well tucked up, their shrill, cheerful voices announcing a new wonder found.



CONTAINING SEVEN ROOMS, A BATHROOM AND SUCH SPECIAL FEATURES AS TWO SLEEPING PORCHES, LARGE VERANDA AND A PERCOLA TERRACE—WIDTH 31 FT. DEPTH 46 Ft. 6 IN.—SUITED TO ANY SITE

Designed by Jack Manley Rosé & Grace Norton Rosé

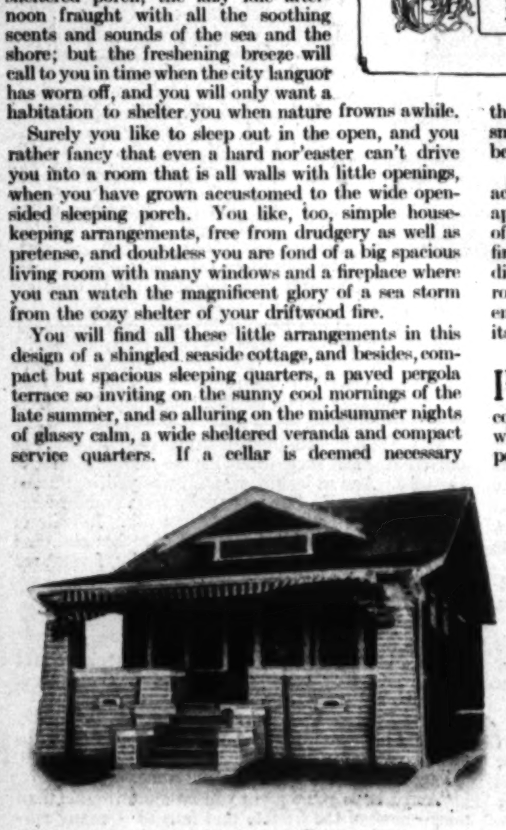
INDEED, you may well love the comfort of a couch hammock on a sheltered porch, the lazy idle afternoon fraught with all the soothing scents and sounds of the sea and the shore; but the freshening breeze will call to you in time when the city languor has worn off, and you will only want a habitation to shelter you when nature frowns awhile.

Surely you like to sleep out in the open, and you rather fancy that even a hard nor'easter can't drive you into a room that is all walls with little openings, when you have grown accustomed to the wide open-sided sleeping porch. You like, too, simple housekeeping arrangements, free from drudgery as well as pretense, and doubtless you are fond of a big spacious living room with many windows and a fireplace where you can watch the magnificent glory of a sea storm from the cozy shelter of your driftwood fire.

You will find all these little arrangements in this design of a shingled seaside cottage, and besides, compact but spacious sleeping quarters, a paved pergola terrace so inviting on the sunny cool mornings of the late summer, and so alluring on the midsummer nights of glassy calm, a wide sheltered veranda and compact service quarters. If a cellar is deemed necessary there is a space provided for cellar stairs under the one small flight leading from the back passage to the two bedrooms and sleeping porches above.

With such commodious sleeping quarters you could accommodate quite a large family. The closet room will appeal to the feminine mind surely, and the simplicity of construction to the practical mind who sees cost first of all. You will notice that there is an actual dining room but so little separated from the living room as to be practically a part of it in space and yet enough defined to be entitled to the dignity of a room itself.

IN exterior treatment what could be nicer than the silvery sheen of weathered shingles and the vari-colored greys of the field stone, with possibly cream white trim about the casement windows and on the pergola?



A $1,000 Summer Cottage

If the clean green hills and their purple distances have the greater charm for you, if placid deep-shadowed pools and purling streams beckon to you, and the fragrant woods spread a sunflecked pathway for your lagging feet, you will want to build on the upper country slopes or in the mountains. And it is quite possible that you have already made up your mind just where.

There is a mystery in the varied woods, a delight in their seclusion that cannot be gainsaid. You have doubtless been led to murmur some time in your life, "When I build, here is where my house shall stand." If you are a lover of wood craft and a student of nature there is no better way of learning the life of the forest than by living on the edge of it. Even if to you, Nature's call means no more than just shade and moss and rocks as a setting for a house, you cannot fail to see the advantages of a one-storied camp such as is pictured below.

It is absolutely simple, but comprises all the features necessary for a summer home in the woods. With this camp your vacation for many years may be made comfortable by a very small outlay of money, not to exceed six hundred dollars. It would be a real investment along many lines. A bit of land, and this substantial practical start for a summer house would be laying the foundation for many years of health and enjoyment.

Year by year, as improvements suggested themselves, this building could be added to and embellished with very little expenditure. If one were clever with tools one might make all sorts of attractive additions to the original camp. You could add a veranda here, and there a bit of pergola; a screened porch, an extra room, an ornamental doorway, a bay window, a stone chimney, or only trellises for flowering vines to clamber on.

MANY a fascinating cottage has grown from far less pretentious a beginning. Taking the building as it is, augmented by tents it would create the ideal camp for an average family or a party of friends. There is no limit to its possibilities, if one can see them.

Ideal especially for the small family is the little cottage pictured also on this page, be it built either at the sea or in the hills, or on a suburban site. It is compact and cozy, admirably suited to all the year living as well as for summer occupancy. The roomy porch gives it an unusual touch. The steep-pitched roof coming down to the first story is always an attractive feature. It can be so inexpensively built and yet present so good an appearance withal, that its advantages are readily apparent. A liberal outlay should not exceed a thousand dollars.

Homelike it undoubtedly is, and suggestive of a comfort well adapted to moderate means; a practical summer home, or one for every month in the year. It presents very few problems of construction, and is primarily what it seems, a small, inexpensive cottage. There is no question of camping out in a house of this description.

While all of these three designs shown are solutions of the practical summer home question, each, with its separate characteristics solves the problem in quite a different fashion.

There is the seaside cottage, quite sizable for a cottage by the way, with its really large living room, and ample bedrooms and sleeping porches. Quite at variance to this is the little camp with only the necessities provided for. A summer home that is typical of the simple outdoor life that so many of us love to live. It acts as a shelter on cold and stormy days, and a cozy retreat on chilly nights. Nature has her moods even in her forests and hills, and there are times when even the most enthusiastic and seasoned camper longs for dryer and warmer spot than a 9 by 12 foot tent offers.

The third design strikes a medium between the luxury of the one and the spartan simplicity of the other, and a happy medium in price as well.

Cornless Feet

Are Very Common Now

A few years ago they were not. People pared corns and kept them. Or they used an inefficient treatment.

Then the Blue-jay plaster was invented. That ended corn pain instantly for everyone who used it. But it also gently undermined the corn, so in two days it all came out. And this without one bit of pain or soreness.

One told another about it, until millions came to use it. Now those people never keep a corn. As soon as one appears, they remove it.

We urge you to do that. Prove Blue-jay on one corn. If you hesitate, let us send you samples free. If the pain does stop—if the corn does go—think what it means to you. It means a lifetime without corns. Your own friends, by the dozens, probably, know that this is so.

Missing: Page Thirteen

This was a matter of great regret to him later, as it left him for a moment out of the range of every eye, during which he says he simply stood in a state of shock at seeing Mr. Spielhagen still sitting there, manuscript in hand, but with head fallen forward and eyes closed—dead, asleep or—he hardly knew what; the sight so paralyzed him.

Whether or not this was the exact truth and the whole truth, Mr. Cornell certainly looked very unlike himself as he stepped back into Mr. Van Broecklyn's presence; and he was only partially reassured when that gentleman protested that there was no real harm in the drug, and that Mr. Spielhagen would be all right if left to wake naturally and without shock. However, as his present attitude was one of great discomfort, they decided to carry him back and lay him on the library lounge. But before doing this, Mr. Upham drew from his flaccid grasp, the precious manuscript, and carrying it into the larger room placed it on a remote table, where it remained undisturbed till Mr. Spielhagen, suddenly coming to himself at the end of some fifteen minutes, missed the sheets from his hand, and bounding up, crossed the room to repossess himself of them.

His face as he lifted them up and rapidly ran through them with ever accumulating anxiety, told them what they had to expect.

The page containing the formula was gone!

* * * *

VIOLET now saw her problem. There was no doubt about the loss; all could see that page 13 was not there. In vain a second handling of every sheet, the one so numbered was not to be found. Page 14 met the eye on the top of the pile, and page 12 finished it off at the bottom, but the sequence in between was unbroken by the most important one of all, the missing 13.

Where had it vanished, and through whose agency had this misadventure occurred. No one could say, or, at least, no one there made any attempt to do so, though everybody started to look for it.

But where look? The adjoining small room offered no facilities for hiding a cigar-end, much less a square of shining white paper. Bare walls, bare floor and a single chair for furniture, comprised all that was to be seen in this direction. Nor could the room in which they then stood be thought to hold it, unless it was on the person of some one of them. Could this be the explanation of the mystery? No man looked his doubts; but Mr. Cornell, possibly divining the general feeling, stepped up to Mr. Van Broecklyn and in a cool voice, but with the red burning hotly on either cheek said, so as to be heard by everyone present:

"I demand to be searched—at once and thoroughly."

A moment's silence, then the common cry:

"We will all be searched."

"Is Mr. Spielhagen sure that the missing page was with the others when he sat down in the adjoining room to read his thesis?" asked their perturbed host.

"Very sure" came the emphatic reply. "Indeed, I was just going through the formula itself when I fell asleep."

"You are ready to assert this?"

"I am ready to swear it."

Mr. Cornell repeated his request.

"I demand that you make a thorough search of my person. I must be cleared, and instantly, of every suspicion," he gravely asserted, "or how can I marry Miss Digby tomorrow."

After that there was no further hesitation. One and all subjected themselves to the ordeal suggested; even Mr. Spielhagen. But this effort was as futile as the rest. The lost page was not found.

What were they to think? What were they to do?

There seemed to be nothing left to do, and yet some further attempt must be made towards the recovery of this important formula. Mr. Cornell's marriage and Mr. Spielhagen's business success both depended upon its being in the latter's hands before six in the morning, when he was engaged to hand it over to a certain manufacturer sailing for Europe on an early steamer.

Five hours!

Had Mr. Van Broecklyn a suggestion to offer? No, he was as much at sea as the rest.

Simultaneously look crossed look. Blankness was on every face.

"Let us call the ladies," suggested one.

It was done, and however great the tension had been before, it was even greater when Miss Digby stepped upon the scene. But she was not a woman to be shaken from her poise even by a crisis of this importance. When the dilemma had been presented to her and the full situation grasped, she looked first at Mr. Cornell and then at Mr. Spielhagen, and quietly said:

"There is but one explanation possible of this matter. Mr. Spielhagen will excuse me but he is evidently mistaken in thinking that he saw the lost page among the rest. The condition into which he was thrown by the unaccustomed drug he had drunk, made him liable to hallucinations. I have not the least doubt he thought he had been studying the formula at the time he dropped off to sleep. I have every confidence in the gentleman's candor. But so have I in that of Mr. Cornell," she supplemented, with a smile.

An exclamation from Mr. Van Broecklyn and a subdued murmur from all but Mr. Spielhagen, testified to the effect of this suggestion, and there is no saying what might have been the result if Mr. Cornell had not hurriedly put in this extraordinary and most unexpected protest.

"Miss Digby has my gratitude," said he, "for a confidence which I hope to prove to be deserved. But I must say this for Mr. Spielhagen. He was correct in stating that he was engaged in looking over his formula when I stepped into his presence with the glass of cordial. If you were not in a position to see the hurried way in which his hand instinctively spread itself over the page he was reading, I was; and if that does not seem conclusive to you, then I feel bound to state that in unconsciously following this movement of his, I plainly saw the number written on the top of the page, and that number was—13."

An abrupt exclamation, this time from Spielhagen himself, announced his gratitude and corresponding change of attitude toward the speaker.

"Wherever that damned page has gone," he protested, advancing toward Cornell with outstretched hand, "you have nothing to do with its disappearance."

Instantly all constraint fled, and every countenance took on a relieved expression. But the problem remained.

Suddenly those very words passed someone's lip, and with their utterance Mr. Upham remembered how at an extraordinary crisis in his own life, he had been helped and an equally difficult problem settled, by a little lady secretly attached to a private detective agency. If she could only be found and hurried here before morning, all might yet be well. He would make the effort. Such wild schemes sometimes work. He telephoned to the office and——

Was there anything else Miss Strange would like to know.

MISS STRANGE, thus appealed to, asked where the gentlemen were now.

She was told that they were still all together in the library; the ladies had been sent home.

"Then let us go to them," said Violet, hiding under a smile her great fear that here was an affair which might very easily spell for her that dismal word, failure.

So great was that fear that under all ordinary circumstances she would have had no thought for anything else in the short interim between this stating of the problem and her speedy entrance among the persons involved. But the circumstances of this case were so far from ordinary, or rather let me put it in this way, the setting of the case was so very extraordinary, that she scarcely thought of the problem before her, in her great interest in the house through whose rambling halls she was being so carefully guided. So much that was tragic and heartrending had occurred here. The Van Broecklyn name, the Van Broecklyn history, above all the Van Broecklyn tradition,

"Promise me that you will try Sanatogen—"

AND at last he does promise. He tries Sanatogen, he takes it three times a day. Skeptical at first, his doubts soon vanish, for gradually but surely there is wrought a change which spells better health, a new happiness to himself and those dearest to him.

The kindly, tonic effect of Sanatogen arouses the nervous system, not by falsely stimulating it, but by persistently feeding cell and tissue with its own concentrated pure nourishment.

Sanatogen
THE FOOD-TONIC

Now, also a relish for food returns, digestion is wonderfully improved—for remember, nerves and digestion depend on each other, and Sanatogen by aiding digestion and strengthening the nerve centres, restores harmony to both.

Such is the action of Sanatogen, well known to thousands and thousands of grateful people to whom Sanatogen has brought better health, stronger nerves, improved digestion, renewed efficiency of body and mind.

The world's most famous people know Sanatogen's effects from personal experience — the medical profession of five continents know them — and no less than 21,000 physicians have so testified in writing.

When will you know and feel the good Sanatogen is capable of doing?

Grand Prize, International Congress of Medicine, London, 1913.

Col. Henry Watterson
the famous Editor, writes:
"I feel I owe it to truth to state that I have made a thorough trial of Sanatogen and that I have found it most efficacious and beneficent. I do not think I could have recovered my vitality, as I have done, without this Sanatogen operating equally upon the digestive organs and nerve centers."

Sir Gilbert Parker, M. P.
the eminent novelist-statesman, writes from London:
"Sanatogen is to my mind a true food-tonic, feeding the nerves, increasing the energy, and giving fresh vigor to the overworked body and mind."

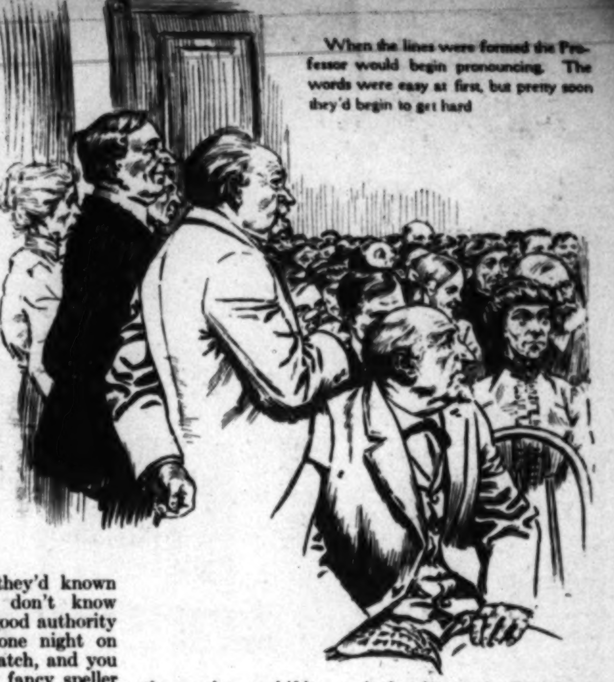
BACKLOG DAYS—THE SPELLING BEE

SEEN THROUGH FUNNY GLASSES

BY HOMER CROY

Illustrations by Rodney Thomson



When the lines were formed the Professor would begin pronouncing. The words were easy at first, but pretty soon they'd begin to get hard

THEY say that spelling schools are going out of fashion, but I don't see why they should: you couldn't find anything that was more fun than a spelling school, now could you? Land of goodness, it took weeks of preparation; you had to study like a towhead or you'd miss cache, a hiding place. Do you remember how they pronounced that?—as if it were money: cash. Then there was phthisis which is pronounced as if the first two letters weren't there, and there was chaoutchouc, a kind of india-rubber, pronounced koo-chook. It must have taken Webster a long time to find them all. You can't tell me any different—he just put them in his book to catch people. Nowadays instead of studying and exercising their brains, people go to a moving picture show.

Pretty near every bit of business in the whole town stopped when they were getting ready for a spelling match. You'd have to go into three or four stores to find a checker game going on—that's how hard everybody was studying.

And the prizes were worth studying for. Think of the first prize being a gold watch. Yes, sir, a real gold watch—unless you carried it in your pocket with sulphur matches. The second prize, offered by the Main Street Pavilion and Harness Emporium (that's what Arch Purdy called his harness shop), was a horseblanket. Usually somebody who worked in the post office got it—some person who hadn't owned a horse since Esther Cleveland was born in the White House.

Old Mr. Greensfelder always gave the third prize—a sack of flour—and whoever won it had to go down to his store and carry it away. That was lots of fun; you know how hard a sack of flour is to carry with nothing but its two little mice ears to hold to.

Harvey Clark and Judge Slingerland were to choose up. Harvey was President of the First National Bank, that was why. He was as big as a quilting frame and had a ponderous way of saying that it looked like rain, but he was awfully good about giving you calendars Christmas time. One year the bank calendar would have a cow and a calf on it, and next year it would be a Norway fiord sunset; then the year following the cow and the calf would be back.

Judge Slingerland was a mighty important man. You will remember, he was the only man in town who wore a cutaway coat with a handkerchief in its tail. The Judge always went after the mail himself and leaning on the wall desk read it carefully, never throwing a printed advertisement on the floor until he had absorbed every line of it. The letters that had his name struck in, he read a lot more carefully than the ones that began "Dear Sir." It's a lot more satisfying to get a letter that says "Dear Mr. Slingerland," even if it is in different type from the body of the letter, than one that opens "Dear Friend."

DO you remember how exciting things got a few days before the match? Of course—you couldn't forget those big days. Your town just throbbed with suspense. An outsider coming through wouldn't know how exciting things were, how the whole town was just seething underneath, but if he had lived there a while and had seen Mat Klop sitting on his Lightning Xpress wagon poring over a spelling book when there was freight at the depot, and if he had seen Asa Broyles go past the Owl Drug Store without stopping—and when the gang in it was talking politics, too—he'd have known how exciting things were then. A drummer could get halfway down town from the station without anybody seeing him and hardly anyone went down to meet the trains—when there was a spelling match on.

Some people kind of turn up their noses at spelling matches these days, but if you ever noticed they are the very ones who spell sugar with an h. They are the kind of people who send a letter with a rubber stamp at the bottom that says, "Dictated but not read." Doesn't a casual letter like that always make you mad? It's like a fellow inviting you over to spend the evening and leaving a note saying that he finds it inconvenient to be at home but that you'll find apples on the centretable.

Gracious, it was a long time till the spelling match. It just seemed that you couldn't wait. Everybody was studying and if you'd see a book sticking out of a fellow's pocket, you'd know that it was blue-backed. The lawyers would sit around in their offices with their feet on the window sill, the book propped on their knees studying, and Mr. Chamberlain, the jeweler, would take the thimble with the glass bottom off and rest his eye by studying Webster.

You'd just wonder and wonder who'd win the prize—the gold watch that was a dandy watch—unless you carried matches in your pocket. But say, did you know all—everything—that was going on? Did you know what was going on in the back part of the Owl Drug Store? Yes, sir, they were. . . . I know what I am talking about. Lots of other people didn't believe it either. They were mighty smooth about it, but it's a fact. Real money, too. A lot of people would have been shocked if they'd known about it . . . but what people don't know won't hurt them. I got it on pretty good authority that Tel Hardwick bet ten dollars one night on Azelia Withers winning the spelling match, and you know yourself that Azelia wasn't any fancy speller—she could handle the long words, all right, but when it came to the short, catchy words, she wasn't much.

Land, but it did seem a long time until the night. Say, wasn't the I. O. O. F. Hall fixed up, though? You'd thought the President was going to speak there. They had bunting clear across one end and at the other there were two flags over George Washington Crossing the Delaware. One of the flags was backward, but you couldn't tell it a little ways back.

AT one end of the hall was a blackboard where Professor Palmer taught writing Tuesdays and Friday nights. Professor Palmer had big ears and tight fitting pants and could flourish mighty fine birds. When he was to make a bird he would erase the board carefully, button up his coat and get his arm going as if he were winding a clock, then all of a sudden the chalk would strike the board and pretty soon there would be a dove winging through the air carrying a banner with E Pluribus Unum on it. Do you remember what they told on Arch Purdy? That good one? Don't you remember it? Why, they said he was showing a friend through the hall one day and the friend wanted to know what the words were for and Arch said they were the bird's scientific name.

There were some mighty good writers turned out of that school. If they had more writing schools today so many letters wouldn't go to Washington.

So many people these days are suffering from the delusion that they have to write an outrageous hand to show that they are somebody. The more their writing looks as if someone had been trying to scratch the soot off the inside of a stove lid the better pleased they are. If Horace Greeley had written a better hand half the clerks in the Dead Letter Office could have been let go.

That night the Professor would spread himself. Instead of having a bird on the board, he would have a deer with enough horns to hold every hat in the hall.

Standing in the middle of the floor, with the hall jammed and packed as if Bryan were speaking, Professor Palmer would shake one leg as if his trousers didn't fit exactly right and say, "The two opposing captains will now come forward and take their respective places."

Putting his finger between the leaves he would hold up the spelling book. I tell you it was an exciting minute when the two captains were ready to guess. Do you remember how you'd lean over and try to figure out where the Professor's finger was. There were 144 pages in Webster—everybody knew that—and his finger was a little more than halfway, so 80 would come pretty near catching it.

Harvey Clark would draw down his thick, heavy eyebrows with the hairs shooting out in all directions as if he would see right through the book to the exact page, and ponderously say "Sixty." He had a convincing way of saying that—as if that should be the number, and if it wasn't that it was the Professor's fault.

The professor would face Judge Slingerland. Reaching into his pocket the Judge would take out his glasses and adjust them carefully as if they would help him in his decision. Bending forward he would screw his hands into the small of his cutaway coat and say, "Eighty."

There would be a shaking of heads—he had guessed too high.

The Professor would flip open the book and look at the page while the audience held its breath. As Arch Purdy would say, "The fallin' of a pin would sound like droppin' a keg of nails during the Wednesday evening hour of meditation and prayer."

It would seem that the Professor would never get through looking. "The number is—" he would begin, looking over the audience and from one captain to the other, till you'd think that would never get through, "I have the pleasure of informing you—" it would never do to say the number right out—"that the number has been guessed by neither of the two gentlemen. The number on which I find my thumb is seventy-two. Judge Slingerland gets the first choice."

An outsider wouldn't have known that the Judge was pleased, but you could tell. You could tell it by the way he worked his hands in the back of his coat faster than ever. Judge Slingerland would look all over the hall as if trying to decide on the person he wanted when he had known for three weeks who he would choose if he came nearest the number.

It was a great honor to be the first one chosen, I tell you that. It was almost as much honor as being the winner. Judge Slingerland would take off his glasses and weigh them on his thumb, and everybody would look all around trying to find the person the Judge was settling on.

"I CHOOSE," the Judge would say, and then joggle his glasses as if he was about to change his mind, and that would make it more exciting than ever. He ought to have played with Booth. Then he would begin all over again: "I choose, as the first person on my side—" you couldn't keep the Judge from making a ceremony of it—"a person sitting in the third row,—Mr. Ed Boblett." The Judge always put the Mister on that way. Then you would swing your head toward the third row and there would be Ed Boblett blushing all over. He'd get up and just as he would start to walk across the floor he'd give his head a shake and push back his hair with his hand.

Then Harvey Clark would ponderously take his choice. You would think that he was choosing his cabinet.

The opposing lines would begin to grow, some of them standing on one foot and some with their hands in their pockets as if they would never be able to get them out alone, and some of them would be standing stiff and straight, their chins on their collars, like statues at a world's fair. The Hard Work Of Getting Well

During convalescence the nerves are all unstrung by weakness and, frequently, the passion for gaining strength develops into a fitfulness that defeats the very end desired. The irritation increases. This devitalizing condition causes the organism to cease functioning.

Complete derangement follows and ends in relapse. And a proper support for the rapidly adjusting nerves and tissues would prevent this.

A Tonic-Food That Brings Harmony Out of Chaos

After the toxins have burned themselves out in a severe illness the body is sadly wasted. The secretive glands are depleted of their reserve force stores—the nerves are shreds—everything is a-jangle. The nerves must be quieted. The digestion must be restored to normal. And so, we see that several important characteristics must be typical qualities of the agency that will relieve the condition. It must quiet and support the nerves. It must increase the digestive fluid flow. It must satisfy the resulting demand.

Malt and Hops the Ideal Restorative

The careful investigator will set aside everything but hops and barley malt—in combination. The hops set up a healthy demand for nourishment. This is immediately satisfied by the nutritive malt—rich in tissue-building and blood making properties. This liquid food, in predigested form, is welcomed by the weakest stomach, readily assimilated by the blood and furnishes nourishment for nerve and muscle.

The Thing To Consider is Pabst Extract

Pabst Extract, The "Best" Tonic, is made from specially-selected hops and Pabst 8-day malt, made from the most carefully-chosen barley.

A Dozen Bottles Will Prove Its Worth

The action of Pabst Extract is a process of building up and, although the first bottle will prove efficacious, it will require a course of it to build up the system to normal. All progressive druggists have Pabst Extract in stock—order a dozen bottles today from yours.

A booklet will be sent you free of all charge—it is highly instructive. Write today for a copy.

Mysterious Mrs. Osgood

Osgood said, "I have escaped all that."

So then, Mrs. Osgood was a widow, very much devoted to an exemplary son who was doing well in business. I had gathered that much, at least.

"And how old is your son?" I asked.

"He'll be fourteen next March."

So much for my hasty conclusion. "Then he's beginning to be great company for you?" I thought that a very intelligent remark for a bachelor.

"Yes, he and I have each other." And there was a pause.

"Have you put him through school?" I asked, not knowing till afterward how much I was paining the poor woman.

"No, sir," she said. "I've tried teaching him myself—though I dare say he might be better cared for," she added very simply.

I uttered some empty compliment about her evident abilities.

"Well," said Mrs. Osgood, looking up from her tub and wasting a very sweet smile upon the steam-fogged window, "perhaps after all he has been better off with me."

I was struck by that light in her face. And somehow there was a note in her voice that limited conversation to whatever she herself might care to add.

"You see, my Edward is different from most boys," she went on after a moment. She had sat down on the edge of a chair, to indicate that the pause in her work was for but a moment. "Ah," she said, "I do pity some mothers! There's Mrs. Bardsley, here in town. Perhaps you've heard about it?" I shook my head. "Such nice people, they are. Mr. Bardsley was president of the bank till he resigned a short time ago. You see, young William, their son—such a nice, likely-looking young man, a college graduate too, who seemed to have everything his way—was helping his father in the bank. But the boy took money, and went to jail. He can never have meant to do it. It was just a slip. But I do pity his mother."

I murmured some approval of her sentiment.

"Really," Mrs. Osgood went on, "there seem to be so many things that can happen. Somehow, you can't pick up a paper but it has in it something of that sort—children who wound their parents."

"It's certainly a sad world for many," I weakly acknowledged.

"Yes," said Mrs. Osgood, "I never hear of such things but I pity those poor mothers. I pity them because I have no fear of such things from my boy. I am very fortunate."

Mrs. Medway entered just then and called me elsewhere. Perhaps Mrs. Osgood had not been at her best that morning. Unusual for a washerwoman, I thought, though without justification for such a repute as hers. Uncommonly proud of a good boy, that was all.

But that evening Mrs. Medway arranged to have me take her little daughter with a cake for Mrs. Osgood and her boy. R—— boasts that it has no slums, but in a quarter that verged the nearest to plainness we found Mrs. Osgood's dwelling. With a few commonplace greetings we left our gift and departed, it seemed to me with rather scanty thanks and hospitality.

"Did you see Mrs. Osgood's son?" Mrs. Medway asked when we returned.

I said we had not, though I was especially anxious to meet the prodigy.

"She was suspicious," said Mrs. Medway. "She's sensitive—and suspected that I had told you."

"Told me what?"

"That her son is a total blank."

THIS, then, was Mrs. Osgood—but no, not all. Mrs. Medway told me the rest.

Injured at birth, the boy had never showed the first glimmer of intelligence. The day we had called he was as much a care as in the first hour of his life. All that in a baby is sweet and of appealing helplessness was in him hideously outgrown and distorted. For fourteen years he had played with rattles and blocks, unable to speak or to dress himself. Three times Mrs. Osgood had been obliged to move, because the sounds that he made—his unendurable cooing in his gruff voice—had quite overcome the neighbors.

Yet year after year that woman—once, more gently treated by Circumstance, too, I learned—had borne her burden, and yet had arrived at uncomplaining philosophy. The exquisite compensations of motherhood had never fallen to Mrs. Osgood, but only its heaviest cares. This for fourteen years! And Mrs. Osgood still persuaded herself that her boy was improving!

"And now what do you think of her?" Mrs. Medway inquired somewhat curiously, when she had told me this.

I did not then, as I do not now, know what to think of Mrs. Osgood. But I no longer wonder at her wide and excellent repute.

Royalty at Close Range

By Adolf Baumann

SOME of my experiences as a photographer of royalty have not been without amusement and serve to illustrate that the occupants of thrones are very human. I remember an afternoon when the Grand Duke Ludwig of Bavaria unexpectedly rushed into my studio. The Grand Duke is informal and jolly of manner.

"Herr Baumann," said he, laughing, "I am dying for a smoke. Will you let me?" In Europe royalty does not smoke on the streets, as it is considered a breach of dignity.

"Certainly, your excellence," I said. So the Duke lighted a cigar and enjoyed a long smoke before going on his way.

On another occasion Prince Leopold brought his son, Prince Ruppert, then four years of age, and now the Crown Prince of Bavaria, to my studio. My son, then a wee tot, was there playing with a decorated cane. This attracted the envious attention of the young Prince. Rushing across the room the Prince seized the cane—the two children had a lively tussle. But the Prince was the stronger, and while my son set up a howl he triumphantly bore off his prize.

"You must give this back," his father insisted.

He made a wry face, as if about to cry.

"Well," said his father, "do not let us spoil the picture." I quieted my own little boy, and while the Prince reveled in his possession I took the pictures. When they were ready to depart, his father tried to make him return the cane; but it had appealed to his fancy and he began to scream and sob.

"You take the cane," I said. My own little boy reluctantly consented to the gift. A few days afterward an ornate and expensive cane arrived—a gift from the Prince to my son.

As a matter of fact, the glamour with which the popular mind invests royal personages is mostly imaginary; they are simple human beings, hedged in and restricted by court formulas, eager for freedom, and always desirous of being human. As much as anybody else they are interested in the state of the weather. I suppose queens, if they had to look after the household, would probably be absorbed in the price of beef. About great policies of national import, about economic and social movements they never, if ever, in public express themselves; in fact, these things are thought out by their ministers and functionaries, and it is doubtful if they would have any original views to offer. A princess is paramountly interested in her new dress from Paris; a prince in his special brand of cigar. All are eager to look well before the camera, and one and all are conscious of the effect their pictures should have upon the public.

A girl, reading in a paper that fish was excellent brainfood, wrote to the editor:

"Seeing as you say how fish is good for the brains, what kind of fish shall I eat?"

The editor replied: "Judging from the composition of your letter, I should advise you to eat a whale."
